

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

---

'THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA' was first printed in the folio collection of Shakspeare's plays, edited by John Heminge and Henry Condell, and published in 1623, seven years after his death. The text is singularly correct. There are not more than half a dozen passages of any real importance upon which a doubt can be entertained, if printed according to the original. It is, in all probability, a play written very early in Shakspeare's life.

The scene of this play is, in the first act, at Verona, and afterwards chiefly at Milan. The action is not founded upon any historical event. The one historical fact mentioned in this play is that of the emperor holding his court at Milan, which was under the government of a duke, who was a vassal of the empire. Assuming that this fact prescribes a limit to the period of the action, we must necessarily place that period at least half a century before the date of the composition of this drama.

Pope calls the style of 'The Two Gentlemen of Verona' "simple and unaffected." It was opposed to Shakspeare's later style, which is teeming with allusion upon allusion. With the exception of the few obsolete words, and the unfamiliar application of words still in use, this comedy has a very modern air. The thoughts are natural and obvious, the images familiar and general. The most celebrated passages have a character of grace rather than of beauty; the elegance of a youthful poet aiming to be correct. Johnson considered this comedy to be wanting in "diversity of character." The action, it must be observed, is mainly sustained by Proteus and Valentine, and by Julia and Silvia; and the conduct of the plot is relieved by the familiar scenes in which Speed and Launce appear. The other actors are very subordinate, and we scarcely demand any great diversity of character amongst them; but it appears to us, with regard to Proteus and Valentine, Julia and Silvia, Speed and Launce, that the characters are exhibited, as it were, in pairs, upon a principle of very defined though delicate contrast.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open place in Verona.

Enter VALENTINE and PROTEUS.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus;
Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits;
Were I not affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dally sluggardiz'd at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
But, since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive therein,
Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Will thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu!
Think on thy Proteus, when thou, haply, seest
Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel;
Wish me partaker in thy happiness,
When thou dost meet good hap: and in thy danger,
If ever danger do environ thee,
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine.

Val. And on a love-book pray for my success?

Pro. Upon some book I love, I'll pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;
For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'T is true; for you are over boots in love,
And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.<sup>a</sup>

Nay, give me not the boots. It is concluded that the allusion is to the instrument of torture called the boots.

Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What?

Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans;
Coy looks with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth

With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights;
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
However,<sup>a</sup> but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance,<sup>b</sup> I fear you'll prove.

Pro. 'T is love you cavil at; I am not love.

Val. Love is your master, for he masters you:

And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And writers say, as the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu: my father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

<sup>b</sup> Circumstance. Proteus employs the word in the meaning of circumstantial deduction;—Valentine in that of position.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters,
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!

Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell.

[Exit VALENTINE.]

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love:
He leaves his friends to dignify them more;
I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.
Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
War with good counsel, set the world at nought;
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter SPEED.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you: Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Milan.

Speed. Twenty to one then he is shipp'd already;
And I have play'd the sheep<sup>a</sup> in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
As if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd
then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Speed. Why, then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard but I'll prove it by another.

Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore, thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry baa.

Pro. But dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir; I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour!

Pro. Here 's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray;<sup>b</sup> 't were best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over,
'T is threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.

Pro. But what said she? did she nod? [SPEED nods.]

Speed. L.<sup>c</sup>

Pro. Nod, I; why, that 's noddy.

Speed. You mistook, sir; I say, she did nod: and you ask me if she did nod; and I say, I.

Pro. And that set together is—noddy.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

stray sheep.

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word, noddy, for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief: what said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter, may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains: What said she?

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you 'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? Couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her;
no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter:
And being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she 'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind.
Give her no token but stones; for she 's as hard as steel.

Pro. What said she,—nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as—"Take this for thy pains." To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testern'd<sup>a</sup> me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself: and so, sir, I 'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wrack;
Which cannot perish, having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore:—

I must go find some better messenger;

I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,

Receiving them from such a worthless post. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. Garden of Julia's House.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,
Wouldst thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam; so you stumble not unheedfully.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen,

That every day with parle encounter me,

In thy opinion, which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you, repeat their names, I 'll show my mind

According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine;

But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so, so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, Lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 't is a passing shame,

That I, unworthy body as I am,

Should censure<sup>b</sup> thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus: of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason;

I think him so, because I think him so.

Jul. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him?

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath never mov'd me.

Luc. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire that 's closest kept burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love that do not show their love.

Luc. O, they love least that let men know their love

Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, madam

Jul. "To Julia,"—Say, from whom?

Luc. That the contents will show.

Jul. Say, say; who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think, from

Proteus:

<sup>a</sup> You have testern'd me. A verb is here made out of the name of a coin—the tester.

<sup>b</sup> Censure—give an opinion.

Not being tried and tutor'd in the world :
Experience is by industry achiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time :
Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him ?

Pan. I think your lordship is not ignorant,
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well.

Pan. 'T were good, I think, your lordship sent him thither :

There shall he practise tilts and tournaments,
Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen ;
And be in eye of every exercise,
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel ; well hast thou advis'd :
And, that thou mayst perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known :
Even with the speediest expedition,
I will despatch him to the emperor's court.

Pan. To-morrow, may it please you, don Alphonso,
With other gentlemen of good esteem,
Are journeying to salute the emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company ; with them shall Proteus go :
And,—in good time.—Now will we break with him.<sup>a</sup>

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Sweet love ! sweet lines ! sweet life !
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart ;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn :
O, that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents !
O, heavenly Julia !

Ant. How now ? what letter are you reading there ?

Pro. May 't please your lordship, 't is a word or two Of commendation sent from Valentine,
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter ; let me see what news.

Pro. There is no news, my lord ; but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well-belov'd,
And daily graced by the emperor ;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish ?

Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish :
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed ;
For what I will, I will, and there an end.
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus in the emperor's court ;
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition* thou shalt have from me.
To-morrow be in readiness to go :
Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided ;
Please you, deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee :
No more of stay ; to-morrow thou must go.—
Come on, Panthino ; you shall be employ'd
To hasten on his expedition. [Exeunt ANT. and PAN.]

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire, for fear of burning ;
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd :

I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my love ;
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my love.
O, how this spring of love resembleth

The uncertain glory of an April day ;
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away !

Re-enter PANTHINO.

Pan. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you ;
He is in haste ; therefore, I pray you, go.

Pro. Why, this it is ! my heart accords thereto ;
And yet a thousand times it answers, No. [Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

Speed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine ; my gloves are on.

Speed. Why, then this may be yours, for this is but one.<sup>b</sup>

Val. Ha ! let me see : ay, give it me, it 's mine :—
Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine !
Ah Silvia ! Silvia !

Speed. Madam Silvia ! madam Silvia !

Val. How now, sirrah ?

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her ?

Speed. Your worship, sir ; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you 'll still be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to, sir ; tell me, do you know madam Silvia ?

Speed. She that your worship loves ?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love ?

Speed. Marry, by these special marks : First, you save learned, like sir Proteus, to wreath your arms like a malecontent ; to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast ; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence ; to sigh, like a schoolboy that had lost his
A.B.C. ; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam ; to fast, like one that takes diet ; to watch, * Break with him—break the matter to him.

<sup>b</sup> One was anciently pronounced as if it were written on.

like one that fears robbing ; to speak puling, like a beggar at Halloween. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock ; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions ; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner ; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money ; and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me ?

Speed. They are all perceived without ye.

Val. Without me ? they cannot.

Speed. Without you ? nay, that 's certain, for without you were so simple, none else would : but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an urinal ; that not an eye that sees you but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia ?

Speed. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper ?

Val. Hast thou observed that ? even she I mean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not ?

Speed. Is she not hard favoured, sir ?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well favoured.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know ?

Speed. That she is not so fair as (of you) well favoured.

* Exhibition—stipend, allowance.

Val. I mean, that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That 's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted, to make her fair, that a man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed.

Val. How long hath she been deformed?

Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her; and will I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes; or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have when you chid at sir Proteus for going ungartered!

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed: I thank you, you swung me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set; so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them;—Peace! here she comes.

Enter SILVIA.

Speed. O excellent motion!<sup>a</sup> O exceeding puppet! Now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-morrrows.

Speed. O, 'give ye good ev'n! here 's a million of summers. [Aside.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoind me, I have writ your letter, Unto the secret nameless friend of yours; Which I was much unwilling to proceed in, But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant: 't is very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off; For, being ignorant to whom it goes, I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much: And yet,—

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel; And yet I will not name it;—and yet I care not;— And yet take this again;—and yet I thank you; Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. And yet you will; and yet another yet.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it? [Aside.

Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ; But since unwillingly, take them again;

Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay, you writ them, sir, at my request; But I will none of them; they are for you: I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I 'll write your ladyship another.

Sil. And when it 's writ, for my sake read it over: And if it please you, so: if not, why so.

Val. If it please me, madam! what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour. And so good morrow, servant. [Exit SILVIA.

Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple!

My master sues to her; and she hath taught her suitor,

He being her pupil, to become her tutor.

O excellent device! was there ever heard a better, That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

Val. How now, sir? what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was rhyming; 't is you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman from madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself: why, she woos you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?

Speed. What needs she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you, indeed, sir: But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.

Val. That 's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I 'll warrant you 't is as well.

For often have you writ to her; and she, in modesty, Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply; Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind discover, Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover.—

All this I speak in print,<sup>a</sup> for in print I found it.—

Why muse you, sir? 't is dinner-time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir; though the cameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals, and would fain have meat. O, be not like your mistress; be moved, be moved.<sup>b</sup> [Exit.

SCENE II.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner: Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

[Giving a ring.

Pro. Why, then we 'll make exchange; here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy And when that hour o'erslips me in the day,

<sup>b</sup> Be moved—have compassion on me.

Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour some foul mischance
Torment me for my love's forgetfulness!
My father stays my coming; answer not;
The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears;
That tide will stay me longer than I should:

[Exit JULIA.]

Julia, farewell.—What! gone without a word?
Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pan. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Pro. Go; I come, I come:—

Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Street.

Enter LAUNCE, leading a Dog.

Laun. Nay, 't will be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault: I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think Crab my dog be the sourest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear: he is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting; why, my grandam, having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it: This shoe is my father;—no, this left shoe<sup>a</sup> is my father; no, no, this left shoe is my mother;—nay, that cannot be so neither:—yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father; A vengeance on 't! there 't is: now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid; I am the dog;—no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog,—O, the dog is me, and I am myself; ay, so, so. Now come I to my father; "Father, your blessing;" now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on:—now come I to my mother, (O, that she could speak now!) like a wood<sup>b</sup> woman;—well, I kiss her;—why, there 't is; here 's my mother's breath up and down; now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes: now the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pan. Launce, away, away, aboard; thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with oars. What 's the matter? why weep'st thou, man? Away, ass; you'll lose the tide if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tied were lost; for it is the unkindest tied that ever man tied.

Pan. What 's the unkindest tide?

Laun. Why, he that 's tied here; Crab, my dog.

Pan. Tut, man, I mean thou'lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.

Pan. Where should I lose my tongue?

Laun. In thy tale.

Pan. In thy tail?

Laun. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tied! Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pan. Come, come away, man; I was sent for thee.

Laun. Sir, call me what thou darest.

Pan. Wilt thou go?

Laun. Well, I will go. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's.

Enter VALENTINE, SILVIA, THURIO, and Servants.

Sil. Servant!

Val. Mistress.

Speed. Master, sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it 's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress then.

Speed. 'T were good you knocked him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Haply I do.

Thu. So do counterfeit.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote<sup>a</sup> you my folly?

Val. I quote<sup>b</sup> it in your jerkin.

Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, sir Thurio? do you change color?

Val. Give him leave, madam; he is a kind meleon.

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, sir; you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and good shot off.

Val. 'T is indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's.

And spends what he borrows, kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir: you have an exchange of words,

And, I think, no other treasure to give your folly. For it appears, by their bare liveries, That they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes your father.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard on Sir Valentine, your father is in good health:

What say you to a letter from your friends?

Of much good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful to any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you don Antonio, your countryman?

Val. Ay, my good lord, I know the gentleman.

To be of worth, and worthy estimation,

And not without desert so well reputed.

<sup>b</sup> Quote was pronounced cote, from the old French Hence the quibble, I coat it in your jerkin—your short-jacket.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Fal. Ay, my good lord; a son that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Fal. I knew him, as myself; for from our infancy
We have convers'd and spent our hours together:
And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time
To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection,
Yet hath sir Proteus, for that 's his name,
Made use and fair advantage of his days;
His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe;
And, in a word, (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow,)
He is complete in feature,* and in mind,
With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beswore me, sir, but if he make this good,
He is as worthy for an empress' love,
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.
Well, sir; this gentleman is come to me,
With commendation from great potentates;
And here he means to spend his time a-while:
I think 't is no unwelcome news to you.

Fal. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth;
Silvia, I speak to you: and you, sir Thurio—
Fal. Valentine, I need not 'cite him to it:
I will send him hither to you presently. [Exit DUKE.]

Fal. This is the gentleman I told your ladyship
Had come along with me, but that his mistress
Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sl. Belike, that now she hath enfranchis'd them,
Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Fal. Nay, sure I think she holds them prisoners still.
Sl. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind,
How could he see his way to seek out you?

Fal. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Th. They say that love hath not an eye at all—

Fal. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself;
Upon a homely object love can wink.

Enter PROTEUS.

Sl. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman.

Fal. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech
you,

Sl. His welcome with some special favour.

Sl. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Fal. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sl. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant
To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Fal. Leave off discourse of disability:—

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sl. And duty never yet did want his meed;
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I 'll die on him that says so, but yourself.

Sl. That you are welcome?

Pro.

No; that you are worthless.

Th. Madam, my lord your father would speak with
you.

Sl. I wait upon his pleasure. Come, sir Thurio,
Go with me:—once more, new servant, welcome:

I 'll leave you to confer of home affairs;

When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. We 'll both attend upon your ladyship.

[Exit SILVIA, THURIO, and SPRED.]

Fal. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

* Facies (form or fashion) was applied to the body as well as the face.

Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much commended.

Fal. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Fal. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you;
I know you joy not in a love-discourse.

Fal. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now:
I have done penance for contemning love;
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me
With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.
O, gentle Proteus, love 's a mighty lord;
And hath so humbled me, as, I confess,
There is no woe to his correction,*
Nor to his service no such joy on earth!
Now, no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye;
Was this the idol that you worship so?

Fal. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.

Fal. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Fal. O, flatter me; for love delights in praises.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills;
And I must minister the like to you.

Fal. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,
Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Fal. Sweet, except not any;
Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Fal. And I will help thee to prefer her too:
She shall be dignified with this high honour,—
To bear my lady's train; lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,
And make rough winter everlastingly.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?

Fal. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can is naming
To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Fal. Not for the world: why, man, she is mine own?

And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou seest me dote upon my love.

My foolish rival, that her father likes,

Only for his possessions are so huge,

Is gone with her along; and I must after,
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Fal. Ay, and we are betroth'd: Nay, more, our marriage hour,

With all the cunning manner of our flight,
Determin'd of: how I must climb her window;
The ladder made of cords; and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on, for my happiness.
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth:
I must unto the road,<sup>b</sup> to disembark

* There is no woe compared to his correction.

Some necessaries that I needs must use ;
And then I 'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste ?

Pro. I will.—

[Exit VAL.]

Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.
Is it her mien, or Valentinus' praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me reasonless, to reason thus ?
She is fair ; and so is Julia, that I love ;—
That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd ;
Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was.
Methinks, my zeal to Valentine is cold ;
And that I love him not, as I was wont :
O ! but I love his lady too, too much ;
And that 's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her !
'T is but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light ;
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check my erring love, I will ;
If not, to compass her I 'll use my skill.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—The same. A Street.

Enter SPEED and LAUNCE.

Speed. Launce ! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Laun. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth ; for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never undone till he be hanged ; nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid, and the hostess say, Welcome.

Speed. Come on, you madcap, I 'll to the alehouse with you presently ; where, for one shot of five-pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with madam Julia ?

Laun. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him ?

Laun. No.

Speed. How then ? shall he marry her ?

Laun. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken ?

Laun. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them ?

Laun. Marry, thus ; when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou ! I understand thee not.

Laun. What a block art thou, that thou canst not ! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou say'st ?

Laun. Ay, and what I do, too : look thee, I 'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Laun. Why, stand under and understand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will 't be a match ?

Laun. Ask my dog : if he say ay, it will ; if he say no, it will ; if he shake his tail, and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me but by a parable.

Speed. 'T is well that I get it so. But, Launce, how say'st thou, that my master is become a notable lover ?

Laun. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how ?

Laun. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistakest me.
Laun. Why, fool, I meant not thee, I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Laun. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse ; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why.

Laun. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the ale<sup>a</sup> with a Christian : Wilt thou go ?

Speed. At thy service.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn ;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn ;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn ;
And even that power, which gave me first my oath,
Provokes me to this threefold perjury.

Love bade me swear, and love bids me forswear :

O sweet-suggesting love, if thou hast sinn'd,

Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it.

At first I did adore a twinkling star,

But now I worship a celestial sun.

Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken ;

And he wants wit that wants resolved will

To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better.—

Fie, fie, unreverend tongue ! to call her bad,

Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferr'd

With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.

I cannot leave to love, and yet I do ;

But there I leave to love, where I should love.

Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose :

If I keep them, I needs must lose myself ;

If I lose them, thus find I by their loss,

For Valentine, myself ; for Julia, Silvia.

I to myself am dearer than a friend :

For love is still most precious in itself :

And Silvia, witness Heaven, that made her fair !

Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiopie.

I will forget that Julia is alive,

Rememb'ring that my love to her is dead ;

And Valentine I 'll hold an enemy,

Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.

I cannot now prove constant to myself,

Without some treachery us'd to Valentine :—

This night, he meaneth with a corded ladder

To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window ;

Myself in counsel, his competitor :

Now presently I 'll give her father notice

Of their disguising, and pretended<sup>b</sup> flight ;

Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine ;

For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter :

But, Valentine being gone, I 'll quickly cross,

By some sly trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.

Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,

As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift ! [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta ! gentle girl, assist me !

And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,—

Who art the table<sup>c</sup> wherein all my thoughts

Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,—

To lesson me ; and tell me some good mean,

How, with my honour, I may undertake

A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas ! the way is wearisome and long.

Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps;
Much less shall she that hath love's wings to fly;
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as sir Proteus.

Luc. Better forbear, till Proteus make return.

Jul. O, know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's food?
Fry the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Bidst thou but know the inly touch of love,
That wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.

Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire;
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns;
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;
But, when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?

Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The base encounters of lascivious men:
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may besecm some well-reputed page.

Luc. Why, then your ladyship must cut your hair.

Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastic may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your tresses?

Jul. That fits as well as—"Tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?"
Why, ev'n what fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.

Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece,
madam.

Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.

Luc. A round hose, madam, now 's not worth a pin, Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.

Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly.
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me,
For undertaking so unsta'd a journey?
I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and go not.

Jul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey, when you come,
No matter who 's displeas'd, when you are gone:
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.

Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear:
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances of infinite<sup>a</sup> of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.

Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect!
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray Heaven he prove so, when you come to him.

Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong:
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Only deserve my love, by loving him;
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation;
Only, in lieu thereof, despatch me hence:
Come, answer not, but to it presently;
I am impatient of my tarriance.

[Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Milan. *An Ante-room in the Duke's
Palace.*

Enter DUKE, THURIO, and PROTEUS.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile;
We have some secrets to confer about. [Exit THURIO.]

Pro. Now, tell me, Proteus, what 's your will with me?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover,

The law of friendship bids me to conceal:
But, when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that
Which else no worldly good should draw from me.
Know, worthy prince, sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter;
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Then, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,
Being unprevent'd, to your timeless grave.

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care;
Which to requite, command me while I live.

This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Haply, when they have judg'd me fast asleep;
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company, and my court:
But, fearing lest my jealous aim<sup>b</sup> might err,
And so, unworthily, disgrace the man,
(A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd.)
I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou mayst perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggest'd,<sup>c</sup>
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a corded ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aimed at;

For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.<sup>a</sup>

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord; sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.]

Enter VALENTINE.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?

Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health, and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay, then no matter; stay with me a while;
I am to break with thee of some affairs,
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.
'T is not unknown to thee, that I have sought
To match my friend, sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match
Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeching such a wife as your fair daughter:
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me; she is peevish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where<sup>b</sup> I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her child-like duty,
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your grace have me to do in this?

Duke. There is a lady, sir, in Milan, here,
Whom I affect; but she is nice, and coy,
And nought esteems my aged eloquence:
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,
(For long ago I have forgot to court:
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd;)
How, and which way, I may bestow myself,
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words;
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words, do move a woman's mind.

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents
her:

Send her another; never give her o'er;
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 't is not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you:
If she do chide, 't is not to have you gone;
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say:
For "get you gone," she doth not mean "away:"
Flatter, and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But, she I mean is promis'd by her friends Unto a youthful gentleman of worth;
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why, then I would resort to her by night.

Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd, and keys kept safe,
— 't is no man hath recourse to her by night.

What lets,<sup>c</sup> but one may enter at her window?

Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground;

And built so shelving, that one cannot climb it Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why, then, a ladder, quaintly made of cords,
To cast up with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for love is like a child,
That longs for everything that he can come by.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.

Duke. But, hark thee; I will go to her alone;
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it
Under a cloak, that is of any length.

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then let me see thy cloak:

I'll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.

Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?—

I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.—
What letter is this same? What's here?—"To Silvia"<sup>d</sup>!
And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once. [Reads.]

"My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;
And slaves they are to me, that send them flying:
O, could their master come and go as lightly,
Himself would lodge, where senseless they are lying.
My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them;
While I, their king, that thither them importune,
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath bless'd them
Because myself do want my servants' fortune:
I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their lord should be."

What's here?

"Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee:"

'T is so; and here 's the ladder for the purpose.
Why, Phaëton, (for thou art Merops' son,)
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go, base intruder! overweening slave!
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates;
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence:
Thank me for this, more than for all the favours,
Which, all too much, I have bestow'd on thee.
But if thou linger in my territories,
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By Heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thyself.
Be gone; I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence.

[Exit DUKE.]

Val. And why not death, rather than living torment?

To die, is to be banish'd from myself;
And Silvia is myself: banish'd from her,
Is self from self: a deadly banishment!
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale;
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon:
She is my essence; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.
I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom:
Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter PROTEUS and LAUNCE.

Pro. Run, boy, run, and seek him out.

Laun. So-ho! so-ho!

Pro. What seest thou?

Laun. Him we go to find:

There 's not a hair on 's head, but 't is a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Val. No.

Pro. Who then? his spirit?

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Val. Nothing.

Laun. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?

Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?

Laun. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

Laun. Why, sir, I 'll strike nothing: I pray you,—

Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear: Friend Valentine, a word.

Val. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news, so much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,

For they are harsh, untuneable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!—

Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!—

What is your news?

Laun. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanquish'd.

Pro. That thou art banished. O, that 's the news; from hence, from Silvia, and from me, thy friend.

Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already,

And now excess of it will make me surfeit.

Death Silvia knew that I am banish'd?

Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom

(Which, unreveng'd, stands in effectual force)

A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears;

Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;

With them, upon her knees, her humble self;

Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,

As if but now they waxed pale for woe;

But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,

Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,

Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;

But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.

Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,

When she for thy repeal was suppliant,

That to close prison he commanded her,

With many bitter threats of 'biding there.

Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st

Have some malignant power upon my life:

If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,

As ending anthem of my endless doleour.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,

And study help for that which thou lament'st.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.

Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;

Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.

Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,

And manage it against despairing thoughts.

Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence:

Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd

Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.*

The time now serves not to expostulate:

Come, I 'll convey thee through the city gate;

And, ere I part with thee, confer at large

Of all that may concern thy love-affairs:

* Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love. The lady of the sixteenth century had a small pocket in the front of her stays, in which she carried her letters, and other matters which she valued.

As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,

Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,

Bid him make haste, and meet me at the north gate.

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentine.

Val. O my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine!

[Exeunt VALENTINE and PROTEUS.]

Laun. I am but a fool, look you; and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of a knave; but that 's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now that knows me to be in love: yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me; nor who 't is I love, and yet 't is a woman: but what woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 't is a milkmaid; yet 't is not a maid, for she hath had gossips: yet 't is a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,—which is much in a bare Christian. Here is the catalog [pulling out a paper] of her conditions. Imprimis, "She can fetch and carry." Why, a horse can do no more: nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore is she better than a jade. Item, "She can milk;" look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter SPEED.

Speed. How now, signior Launce? what news with your mastership?

Laun. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.

Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word:

What news then in your paper?

Laun. The blackest news that ever thou heard'st.

Speed. Why, man, how black?

Laun. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them.

Laun. Fie on thee, jolt-head! thou canst not read.

Speed. Thou liest, I can.

Laun. I will try thee: Tell me this: Who begot thee?

Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.

Laun. O illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother: this proves that thou canst not read.

Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.

Laun. There; and St. Nicholas be thy speed!

Speed. Imprimis, "She can milk."

Laun. Ay, that she can.

Speed. Item, "She brews good ale."

Laun. And thereof comes the proverb,—Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.

Speed. Item, "She can sew."

Laun. That 's as much as to say, can she so?

Speed. Item, "She can knit."

Laun. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?*

Speed. Item, "She can wash and scour."

Laun. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured.

Speed. "She can spin."

Laun. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. Item, "She hath many nameless virtues."

Laun. That 's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Speed. "Here follow her vices."

Laun. Close at the heels of her virtues.

Speed. Item, "She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath."

Laun. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast: Read on.

Speed. Item, "She hath a sweet mouth."

Laun. That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed. Item, "She doth talk in her sleep."

* Stock—stocking.

Laun. It 's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed. Item, "She is slow in words."

Laun. O villain, that set this down among her vices!

To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with 't; and place it for her chief virtue.

Speed. Item, "She is proud."

Laun. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, And cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. Item, "She hath no teeth."

Laun. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed. Item, "She is curst."

Laun. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Speed. "She will often praise her liquor."

Laun. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. Item, "She is too liberal."

Laun. Of her tongue she cannot; for that 's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not; for that I 'll keep shut: now of another thing she may; and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.

Speed. Item, "She hath more hair than wit,<sup>a</sup> and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults."

Laun. Stop there; I 'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article: Rehearse that once more.

Speed. Item, "She hath more hair than wit,"—

Laun. More hair than wit,—it may be; I 'll prove it: The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit is more than the wit; for the greater hides the less. What 's next?

Speed.—"And more faults than hairs,"—

Laun. That 's monstrous: O, that that were out!

Speed.—"And more wealth than faults."

Laun. Why, that word makes the faults gracious: Well, I 'll have her: And if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,—

Speed. What then?

Laun. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the north gate.

Speed. For me?

Laun. For thee? ay: who art thou? he hath stayed for a better man than thee.

Speed. And must I go to him?

Laun. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stayed so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.

Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox of your love-letters! [Exit.]

Laun. Now will he be swinged for reading my letter: An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets!—I 'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE and THURIO; PROTEUS behind.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you,

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thu. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most, Forsworn my company, and rail'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her.

This weak impress of love is as a figure in ice; which with an hour's heat water, and doth lose his form.

will melt her frozen thoughts,

as Valentine shall be forgot—

Proteus? Is your countryman, our proclamation, gone?

English proverb, † Trench'd—cut.

Pro. Gone, my good lord.

Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.—

Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee (For thou hast shown some sign of good desert) Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace,

Let me not live to look upon your grace.

Duke. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect

The match between sir Thurio and my daughter.

Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant

How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke. Ay, and perversely she perseveres so.

What might we do, to make the girl forget

The love of Valentine, and love sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is, to slander Valentine

With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent;

Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Duke. Ay, but she 'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it:

Therefore it must, with circumstance, be spoken

By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him.

Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loth to do:

'T is an ill office for a gentleman;

Especially, against his very<sup>a</sup> friend.

Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage him,

Your slander never can endamage him;

Therefore the office is indifferent,

Being entreated to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord: if I can do it,

By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,

She shall not long continue love to him.

But say, this weed her love from Valentine,

It follows not that she will love sir Thurio.

Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him,

Lest it should ravel, and be good to none,

You must provide to bottom it on me;

Which must be done by praising me as much

As you in worth dispraise sir Valentine.

Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind;

Because we know, on Valentine's report,

You are already love's firm votary,

And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.

Upon this warrant shall you have access

Where you with Silvia may confer at large;

For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy,

And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you;

Where you may temper her, by your persuasion,

To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect:—

But you, sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;

You must lay lime, to tangle her desires,

By wailful sonnets, whose composed rhymes

Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.

Duke. Ay, much is the force of heaven-bred poetry.

Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty

You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart.

Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears

Moist it again; and frame some feeling line,

That may discover such integrity:

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews;

Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,

Make tigers tame, and huge leviathans

Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.

After your dire lamenting elegies,

Visit by night your lady's chamber-window,

With some sweet concert: to their instruments

Tune a deploring dump;<sup>b</sup> the night's dead silence

Will well become such sweet complaining grievance.
This, or else nothing, will inherit<sup>a</sup> her.
Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.
Thu. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently
Tisert<sup>b</sup> some gentlemen well shill'd in music :

I have a sonnet that will serve the turn,
To give the onset to thy good advice.
Duke. About it, gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait upon your grace till after supper ;
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Duke. Even now about it ; I will pardon you.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest, near Mantua.

Enter certain Outlaws.

1 Out. Fellows, stand fast ; I see a passenger.
2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

3 Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you ;

If not, we'll make you sit, and rifle you.

Speed. Sir, we are undone ! these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.

Fal. My friends,—

1 Out. That's not so, sir ; we are your enemies.

2 Out. Peace ! we'll hear him.

3 Out. Ay, by my beard, will we ; for he is a proper man !

Fal. These know, that I have little wealth to lose ;
A man I am cross'd with adversity :

riches are these poor habiliments,
which if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

2 Out. Whither travel you ?

Fal. To Verona.

1 Out. Whence came you ?

Fal. From Milan.

2 Out. Have you long sojourn'd there ?

Fal. Some sixteen months ; and longer might have stay'd,

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1 Out. What, were you banish'd thence ?

Fal. I was.

2 Out. For what offence ?

Fal. For that which now torments me to rehearse :
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent ;
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.

1 Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so :

But were you banish'd for so small a fault ?

Fal. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

1 Out. Have you the tongues ?

Fal. My youthful travel therein made me happy ;
Or else I often had been miserable.

2 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,

This fellow were a king for our wild faction

1 Out. We'll have him ; sirs, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them ;

It is an honourable kind of thievery.

Fal. Peace, villain !

2 Out. Tell us this : Have you anything to take to ?

Fal. Nothing but my fortune.

3 Out. Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,

Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth

Thrust from the company of awful<sup>c</sup> men :

Myself was from Verona banished,

For practising to steal away a lady,

An heir, and near allied unto the duke.

2 Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,

Whom, in my mood, I stab'd unto the heart.

1 Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose,—for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives,
And, partly, seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape ; and by your own report
A linguist ; and a man of such perfection,
As we do in our quality much want ;—

2 Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you :
Are you content to be our general ?

To make a virtue of necessity,
And live, as we do, in this wilderness ?

3 Out. What say'st thou ? wilt thou be of our consort ?
Say, ay, and be the captain of us all :

We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our commander, and our king.

1 Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest.

2 Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Fal. I take your offer, and will live with you ;
Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women, or poor passengers.

3 Out. No, we detest such vile base practices.

Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crews,

And show thee all the treasure we have got ;

Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Milan. Court of the Palace.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,
And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.

Under the colour of commending him,

I have access my own love to prefer ;

But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,

To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.

When I protest true loyalty to her,

She twits me with my falsehood to my friend :

When to her beauty I commend my vows,

She bids me think how I have been forsworn

In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd :

And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,

The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,

Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.

But here comes Thurio : now must we to her window,

And give some evening music to her ear.

Enter THURIO and Musicians.

Thu. How now, sir Proteus ; are you crept before us ?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio ; for you know that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go.

Thu. Ay, but I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do ; or else I would be hence.

Thu. Who ? Silvia ?

Pro. Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen,

Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter Host, at a distance ; and JULIA in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest ! methinks you're ally-cholly ; I pray you, why is it ?

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

Host. Come, we'll have you merry ; I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you asked for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall.

Jul. That will be music.

[Music plays.]

Host. Hark! hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay: but peace, let 's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she,
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.
Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing,
Upon the dull earth dwelling:
To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now? are you sadder than you were before?
How do you, man? the music likes<sup>a</sup> you not.

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.

Host. Why, my pretty youth?

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How? out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet so false that he grieves my very heartstrings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay, I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.

Host. I perceive you delight not in music.

Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the music!

Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.

Host. You would have them always play but one thing.

Jul. I would always have one play but one thing.

But, host, doth this sir Proteus, that we talk on,
Often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me, he loved her out of all nick.<sup>b</sup>

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Jul. Peace! stand aside! the company parts.

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you! I will so plead,
That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.

Thu. Where meet we?

Pro. At saint Gregory's well.

Thu. Farewell. [Exeunt THURIO and Musicians.]

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen:

Who is that, that spake?

Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,

You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.

Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.

Sil. What's your will?

Pro. That I may compass yours.

Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this,—
That presently you bid you home to bed.

Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou, I am so shallow, so conceitless,
That I be seduced by thy flattery,

—st deceiv'd so many with thy vows?

—return, and make thy love amends.

—by this pale queen of night I swear,

—ar from granting thy request, s—pleases.

<sup>b</sup> Nick—beyond all reckoning.

That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;
And by and by intend to chide myself,
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.

Jul. 'T were false, if I should speak it;

For I am sure she is not buried.

[Aside.]

Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,
Survives; to whom, thyself art witness,
I am betroth'd: And art thou not asham'd
To wrong him with thy importunacy?

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave
Assure thyself my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call hers thence;
Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

Jul. He heard not that.

[Aside.]

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber;
To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:
For, since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow will I make true love.

Jul. If 't were a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,

And make it but a shadow, as I am.

[Aside.]

Sil. I am very loth to be your idol, sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:
And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o'er-night,
That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt PROTEUS; and SILVIA, from above.]

Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my halidom,<sup>a</sup> I was fast asleep.

Jul. Pray you, where lies sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house: Trust me, I think, 't is almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night
That e'er I watch'd, and the most heaviest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. This is the hour that madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind;
There's some great matter she'd employ me in.—
Madam, madam!

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good-morrow.

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.
According to your ladyship's impose,<sup>b</sup>
I am thus early come, to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman, (Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,
Valiant, wise, remorseful,<sup>c</sup> well accomplish'd.

Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine;
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhor'd.
Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say,
No grief did ever come so near thy heart
As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.
Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,

To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode;
 And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
 I do desire thy worthy company,
 Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
 Uge not my father's anger, Eglamour,
 But think upon my grief, a lady's grief;
 And on the justice of my flying hence,
 To keep me from a most unholy match,
 Which Heaven and fortune still reward with plagues.
 I do desire thee, even from a heart
 As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,
 To bear me company, and go with me:
 If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
 That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
 Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd,
 I give consent to go along with you;
 Recking as little what betideth me
 As much I wish all good befotune you.
 When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At friar Patrick's cell,

Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. I will not fail your ladyship:

Good morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good morrow, kind sir Eglamour. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter LAUNCE, with his dog.

Laun. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it! I have taught him—even as one would say precisely, Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him, as a present to mistress Silvia, from my master; and I came to some into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to our trencher, and steals her capon's leg. O, 't is a foul thing when a cur cannot keep himself in all company! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hang'd for 't; sure as I live he had suffered for 't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentlemanlike dogs, under the duke's table: he had not been there (bless the mark!) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him. "Out with the dog," says one; "What cur is that?" says another; "Whip him out," says a third; "Hang him up," says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: "Friend," quoth I, "you mean to whip the dog?" "Ay, marry, do I," quoth he. "You do him the more wrong," quoth I; "'t was I did the thing you wot of." He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for their servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for 't: these think'st not of this now!—Nay, I remember the trick you served me when I took my leave of madam Silvia; did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well,
 And will employ thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please.—I'll do what I can.

* Keep—restrain.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.—How now, you whoreson peasant;
 [To LAUNCE.]
 Where have you been these two days loitering?

Laun. Marry, sir, I carried mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Laun. Marry, she says, your dog was a cur; and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Laun. No, indeed, did she not: here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, didst thou offer her this from me?

Laun. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman's boys in the market-place: and then I offered her mine own; who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again,
 Or ne'er return again into my sight.

Away, I say: Stay'st thou to vex me here?

A slave, that still an end* turns me to shame.

[Exit LAUNCE.]

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,

Partly, that I have need of such a youth,

That can with some discretion do my business,

For 't is no trusting to yon foolish lout;

But, chiefly, for thy face and thy behaviour;

Which (if my augury deceive me not)

Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:

Therefore know thee, for this I entertain thee.

Go presently, and take this ring with thee,

Deliver it to madam Silvia:

She lov'd me well,<sup>b</sup> deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems you lov'd her not to leave<sup>c</sup> her token
 She is dead, belike?

Pro. Not so; I think she lives.

Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry, alas!

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks, that she lov'd you as well

As you do love your lady Silvia:

She dreams on him that has forgot her love;

You dote on her that cares not for your love.

'T is pity, love should be so contrary;

And thinking on it makes me cry, alas!

Pro. Well, give her that ring, and therewithal

This letter;—that's her chamber.—Tell my lady

I claim the promise for her heavenly picture.

Your message done, hie home unto my chamber,

Where thou shalt find me, sad and solitary. [Exit Pro.]

Jul. How many women would do such a message?

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox, to be the shepherd of thy lambs:

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him

That with his very heart despiseth me?

Because he loves her, he despiseth me;

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him, when he parted from me.

To bind him to remember my good will;

And now am I (unhappy messenger)

To plead for that, which I would not obtain;

To carry that, which I would have refus'd;

To praise his faith, which I would have disprais'd.

I am my master's true confirmed love;

But cannot be true servant to my master,

Unless I prove false traitor to myself.

Yet I will woo for him; but yet so coldly,

As, Heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter SILVIA, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean

To bring me where to speak with madam Silvia.

* Still an end—almost perpetually.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?
Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience
 To hear me speak the message I am sent on.
Sil. From whom?
Jul. From my master, sir Proteus, madam.
Sil. O!—he sends you for a picture?
Jul. Ay, madam.
Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there. [Picture brought.
 Go, give your master this: tell him, from me,
 One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,
 Would better fit his chamber, than this shadow.
Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—
 Pardon me, madam; I have unadvis'd
 Deliver'd you a paper that I should not:
 This is the letter to your ladyship.
Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon me.
Sil. There, hold.
 I will not look upon your master's lines:
 I know they are stuff'd with protestations,
 And full of new-found oaths; which he will break,
 As easily as I do tear his paper.
Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.
Sil. The more shame for him that he sends it me;
 For, I have heard him say a thousand times,
 His Julia gave it him at his departure:
 Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,
 Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.
Jul. She thanks you.
Sil. What say'st thou?
Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her:
 Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.
Sil. Dost thou know her?
Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself:
 To think upon her woes I do protest
 That I have wept an hundred several times.
Sil. Belike, she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her.
Jul. I think she doth, and that 's her cause of sorrow.
Sil. Is she not passing fair?
Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is:
 When she did think my master lov'd her well,
 She, in my judgment, was as fair as you;
 But since she did neglect her looking-glass,
 And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
 The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks,
 And pinch'd* the lily-tincture of her face,
 That now she is become as black as I.
Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature: for, at Pentecost,
 When all our pageants of delight were play'd,
 Our youth got me to play the woman's part,
 And I was trimm'd in madam Julia's gown;
 Which served me as fit, by all men's judgments,
 As if the garment had been made for me:
 Therefore, I know she is about my height.
 And, at that time, I made her weep a-good,
 For I did play a lamentable part;
 Madam, 't was Ariadne, passioning
 For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;
 Which I so lively acted with my tears,
 That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,
 Wept bitterly; and, would I might be dead,
 If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!
Sil. She is beholden to thee, gentle youth!—
 Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!—
 I weep myself to think upon thy words.
 Here, youth, there is my purse; I give thee this
 For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.
 Farewell. [Exit SILVIA.
Jul. And she shall thank you for 't, if e'er you know
 her.
 A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful.
 I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
 Since she respects my mistress' love so much.
 Alas, how love can trifle with itself!
 Here is her picture: Let me see; I think,
 If I had such a tire, this face of mine
 Were full as lovely as is this of hers:
 And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
 Unless I flatter with myself too much.
 Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
 If that be all the difference in his love,
 I 'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
 Her eyes are grey as glass; and so are mine:
 Ay, but her forehead 's low, and mine 's as high.
 What should it be, that he respects in her,
 But I can make respective in myself,
 If this fond love were not a blinded god?
 Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
 For 't is thy rival. O thou senseless form,
 Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd;
 And, were there sense in his idolatry,
 My substance should be statue* in thy stead.
 I 'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
 That used me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
 I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
 To make my master out of love with thee! [Exit

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. An Abbey.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky:
 And now it is about the very hour
 That Silvia, at friar Patrick's cell, should meet me.
 She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
 Unless it be to come before their time;
 So much they spur their expedition.

Enter SILVIA.

See where she comes: Lady, a happy evening!
Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour,
 'The postern by the abbey-wall;
 'n attended by some spies.
 'ar not: the forest is not three leagues off:
 'er that, we are sure enough. [Exeunt.

* Pinch'd—painted.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter THURIO, PROTEUS, and JULIA.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;
 And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What, that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little.
Thu. I 'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat rounder.
Pro. But love will not be spurr'd to what it loathes.
Thu. What says she to my face?
Pro. She says it is a fair one.
Thu. Nay, then the wanton lies; my face is black.
Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,
 Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.
Jul. 'T is true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;
 For I had rather wink than look on them. [Aside

* Statue and picture were often used without distinction

Ths. How likes she my discourse ?
Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.
Ths. But well, when I discourse of love and peace ?
Jul. But better, indeed, when you hold your peace. [Aside.]
Ths. What says she to my valour ?
Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. She needs not, when she knows it cowardice. [Aside.]
Ths. What says she to my birth ?
Pro. That you are well deriv'd.
Jul. True ; from a gentleman to a fool. [Aside.]
Ths. Considers she my possessions ?
Pro. O, ay ; and pities them.
Ths. Wherefore ?
Jul. That such an ass should owe them. [Aside.]
Pro. That they are out by lease.<sup>a</sup>
Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. How now, sir Proteus ? how now, Thurio ?
 Which of you saw sir Eglamour of late ?
Ths. Not I.
Pro. Nor I.
Duke. Saw you my daughter ?
Pro. Neither.
Duke. Why, then, she's fled unto that peasant Valentine ;
 And Eglamour is in her company.
 'Tis true ; for friar Laurence met them both,
 As he in penance wander'd through the forest :
 Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she ;
 But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it :
 Besides, she did intend confession
 At Patrick's cell this even ; and there she was not :
 These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence.
 Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse,
 But meet me presently ; and meet with me
 Upon the rising of the mountain-foot
 That leads toward Mantua, whither they are fled.
 Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit.]
Ths. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl,
 That flies her fortune when it follows her :
 I'll after ; more to be reveng'd on Eglamour,
 Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit.]
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love,
 Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her. [Exit.]
Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love,
 Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Frontiers of Mantua. The Forest.

Enter SILVIA and Outlaws.

1 Out. Come, come ;
 Be patient, we must bring you to our captain.
Sil. A thousand more mischances than this one
 Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.
 2 Out. Come, bring her away.
 1 Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her ?
 3 Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us,
 But Moyses and Valerius follow him.
 Go thou with her to the west end of the wood,
 There is our captain : we'll follow him that's fled.
 The thicket is beset, he cannot 'scape.
 1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave ;
 Fear not ; he bears an honourable mind,
 And will not use a woman lawlessly.
Sil. O Valentine, this I endure for thee. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> By his possessions, Thurio means his lands ; but Proteus alludes to his mental endowments, which he says " are out by lease "—are not in his own keeping.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man.
 This snadowy desert, unfrequented woods,
 I better brook than flourishing peopled towns :
 Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
 And to the nightingale's complaining notes
 Tune my distresses, and record<sup>a</sup> my woes.
 O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,
 Leave not the mansion so long tenantless ;
 Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall,
 And leave no memory of what it was !
 Repair me with thy presence, Silvia ;
 Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain !
 What hallooing, and what stir, is this to-day ?
 These are my mates, that make their wills their law,
 Have some unhappy passenger in chase :
 They love me well ; yet I have much to do,
 To keep them from uncivil outrages.
 Withdraw thee, Valentine ; who's this comes here ?
 [Steps aside]

Enter PROTEUS, SILVIA, and JULIA.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you, (Though you respect not aught your servant doth,)
 To hazard life, and rescue you from him
 That would have forc'd your honour and your love.
 Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look ;
 A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
 And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.
Val. How like a dream is this I see and hear !
 Love, lend me patience to forbear a while. [Aside.]
Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am !
Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came ;
 But, by my coming, I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy
Jul. And me, when he approacheth to your presence. [Aside.]

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion,
 I would have been a breakfast to the beast,
 Rather than have false Proteus rescue me.
 O, Heaven be judge how I love Valentine,
 Whose life's as tender to me as my soul ;
 And full as much (for more there cannot be)
 I do detest false perjurd Proteus :
 Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
 Would I not undergo for one calm look ?
 O, 't is the curse in love, and still approv'd,<sup>b</sup>
 When women cannot love where they're below'd.

Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's below'd.
 Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,
 For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
 Into a thousand oaths ; and all those oaths
 Descended into perjury, to love me.
 Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou 'dst two.
 And that's far worse than none ; better have none
 Than plural faith, which is too much by one :
 Thou counterfeit to thy true friend !

Pro. In love,
 Who respects friend ?

Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
 Can no way change you to a milder form,
 I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end ;
 And love you 'gainst the nature of love, force you.

Sil. O Heaven !
Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.
Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch ;
 Thou friend of an ill fashion !

Pro. Valentine!

Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love;

(For such is a friend now;) treacherous man!
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have persuaded me: Now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou wouldst disprove me.
Who should be trusted when one's own right hand
Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.
The private wound is deepest: O time most accur'd!
'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst.

Pro. My shame, and guilt, confounds me.—

Forgive me, Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender it here; I do as truly suffer
As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest:—
Who by repentance is not satisfied

Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd;
By penitence the Eternal's wrath 's appeas'd,—
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine, in Silvia, I give thee.

Jul. O me, unhappy!

[Faints.

Pro. Look to the boy.

Val. Why, boy!

Why, wag! how now? what 's the matter? Look up;
speak.

Jul. O good sir, my master charged me to deliver a ring to madam Silvia; which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Jul. Here 't is; this is it.

[Gives a ring.

Pro. How! let me see:

Why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O, cry your mercy, sir, I have mistook;

This is the ring you sent to Silvia. [Shows another ring.

Pro. But how camest thou by this ring? at my depart, I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it me;

And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How! Julia!

Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,

And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:

How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root?

O Proteus, let this habit make thee blush!

Be thou asham'd, that I have took upon me

Such an immodest raiment; if shame live

In a disguise of love:

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,

Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds! 't is true; O Heaven! were man

But constant, he were perfect: that one error

Fills him with faults; makes him run through all th' sins:

Inconstancy falls off ere it begins:

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy

More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?

Val. Come, come, a hand from either:

Let me be bless'd to make this happy close;

'T were pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, Heaven, I have my wish for e'er

Jul. And I mine.

Enter Outlaws, with DUKE and THURIO.

Out. A prize, a prize, a prize!

Val. Forbear, forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!

Thu. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia 's mine.

Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death,
Come not within the measure of my wrath:

Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Milan shall not behold thee. Here she stands;

Take but possession of her with a touch;—

I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.—

Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I;

I hold him but a fool, that will endanger

His body for a girl that loves him not:

I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou,

To make such means for her as thou hast done,

And leave her on such slight conditions.—

Now, by the honour of my ancestry,

I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,

And think thee worthy of an empress' love!

Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again.—

Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe,—Sir Valentine,

Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd;

Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.

Val. I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy.

I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,

To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it, for thine own, whate'er it be.

Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withal,
Are men endued with worthy qualities;

Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile:

They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them, and the Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts.

Come, let us go; we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And, as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse to make your grace to smile:

What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; be blushe

Val. I warrant you, my lord; more grace than he

Duke. What mean you by that saying?

Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along.
That you will wonder what hath fortun'd.—

Come, Proteus; 't is your penance, but to bear
The story of your loves discovered:

That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;

One feast, one house, one mutual happiness. [Exeunt

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'THE COMEDY OF ERRORS' was first printed in the folio collection of Shakspeare's Plays in 1623. This copy presents many typographical blunders, and in a few passages the text is manifestly corrupt. The difficulties, however, are not very considerable. The Comedy was clearly one of Shakspeare's very early plays. It was probably untouched by its author after its first production.

In a work by Francis Meres, published in 1598, it is mentioned amongst other dramas of Shakspeare. The chief evidence of its being a very early play is to be found in the great prevalence of that measure which was known to our language as early as the time of Chaucer by the name of "rime dogerel." This peculiarity is to be observed only in three of our author's plays,—in 'Love's Labour's Lost,' in 'The Taming of the Shrew,' and in 'The Comedy of Errors.' It was a distinguishing characteristic of the early English drama. 'The Comedy of Errors' was unquestionably suggested by 'The Menæchmi' of Plautus; and it furnishes abundant proof of Shakspeare's familiarity with that ancient dramatist.

Criticism has justly held that 'The Comedy of Errors' is essentially a farce, and was meant to be so. Coleridge says, "A proper farce is mainly distinguished from comedy by the licence allowed, and even required, in the fable, in order to produce strange and laughable situations." Nothing, however, can be managed with more skill than the whole dramatic action of this farce. It has been objected that the riddle which is presented throughout the piece teases and wearies the reader and the spectator. Hazlitt says, "In reading the play, from the sameness of the names of the two Antipholuses and the two Dromios, as well as from their being constantly taken for each other by those who see them, it is difficult, without a painful effort of attention, to keep the characters distinct in the mind. And again, on the stage, either the complete similarity of their persons and dress must produce the same perplexity whenever they first enter, or the identity of appearance, which the story supposes, will be destroyed. We still, however, having a clue to the difficulty, can tell which is which, merely from the contradictions which arise as soon as the different parties begin to speak; and we are indemnified for the perplexity and blunders into which we are thrown, by seeing others thrown into greater and almost inextricable ones." Hazlitt has here, almost undesignedly, pointed out the source of the pleasure which, with an "effort of attention,"—not a "painful effort," we think,—a reader or spectator of 'The Comedy of Errors' is sure to receive from this drama. We have "a clue to the difficulty;"—we know more than the actors in the drama;—we may be a little perplexed, but the deep perplexity of the chaacters is a constantly-increasing triumph to us. The spectators, the readers, have the clue, are let into the secret, by the story of the first scene. Nothing can be more beautifully managed, or is altogether more Shakspearean, than the narrative of Ægeon; and that narrative is so clear and so impressive that the reader never forgets it amidst all the errors and perplexities which follow. It appears to us that every one of an audience of 'The Comedy of Errors,' who keeps his eyes open, will, after he has become a little familiar with the persons of the two Antipholuses and the two Dromios, find out some clue by which he can detect a difference between each, even without "the practical contradictions which arise as soon as the different parties begin to speak." Each pair of persons selected to play the twins must be of the same height,—with such general resemblances of the features as may be made to appear identical by the colour and false hair of the tiring-room,—and be dressed with apparently perfect similarity. But let every care be taken to make the deception perfect, yet the observing spectator will detect a difference between each; some peculiarity of the voice, some "trick o' the eye," some dissimilarity in gait, some minute variation in dress; and, while his curiosity is kept alive by the effort of attention which is necessary for this detection, the riddle will not only not tease him, but its perpetual solution will afford him the utmost satisfaction.

But has not Shakspeare himself furnished a clue to the understanding of the Errors, by his marvellous skill in the delineation of character? Pope forcibly remarked that, if our poet's dramas were printed without the names of the persons represented being attached to the individual speeches, we should know who is speaking by his wonderful discrimination in assigning to every character appropriate modes of thought and expression. It appears to us that this is unquestionably the case with the characters of each of the twin-brothers in 'The Comedy of Errors.' The Antipholus of Ephesus is strikingly opposed to the Antipholus of Syracuse: he is neither sedate, nor gentle, nor truly loving, as his brother is;—he has no habits of self-command;—his temperament is sensual. The two Dromios each have their "merry jests;" they each bear a beating with wonderful good temper; they each cling faithfully to their master's interests. But there is certainly a marked difference in the quality of their mirth. The Dromio of Ephesus is precise and antithetical, striving to utter his jests with infinite gravity and discretion. On the contrary, the "merry jests" of Dromio of Syracuse all come from the outpouring of his gladsome heart. Of course the characters of the twins could not be violently contrasted, for that would have destroyed the illusion. They must still "Go hand in hand, not one before another."

SCENE,—EPHESUS.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE, ÆGEON, Gaoler, Officers, and other Attendants.

Æge. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death, end woe and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more;
I am not partial, to infringe our laws;
The enmity and discord, which of late
Sprang from the rancorous outrage of your duke
To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,—
Who, wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,—
Excludes all pity from our threaten'g looks.
For, since the mortal and intestine jars
Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracusans and ourselves,
To admit no traffic in our adverse towns:
Nay, more, if any, born at Ephesus,
Be seen at any Syracusan marts and fairs,
Again, if any Syracusan born,
Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies,
His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose;
Unless a thousand marks be levied,
To quit the penalty, and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;
Therefore, by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Æge. Yet this my comfort; when your words are done,
My woe end likewise with the evening sun.

Duke. Well, Syracusan, say, in brief, the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home;
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

Æge. A heavier task could not have been impos'd,
Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable.
Yet, that the world may witness that my end
Was wrought by nature,* not by vile offence,
I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracuse was I born; and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me, too, had not our hap been bad,
With her I liv'd in joy; our wealth increas'd,
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum, till my factor's death,
And the great care of goods at random left,
Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse:
From whom my absence was not six months old Before herself (almost at fainting under The pleasing punishment that women bear)
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon, and safe, arrived where I was.
There had she not been long, but she became
A joyful mother of two goodly sons;
And, which was strange, the one so like the other
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of such a burthen, male twins, both alike:
Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,

* By nature—by the impulses of nature, by natural affection, —as opposed to vile offence, the violation of the municipal laws of Ephesus.

I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed; alas, too soon. We came aboard:
A league from Epidamnus had we sail'd
Before the always-wind-obeying deep
Gave any tragic instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
Which, though myself would gladly have embrac'd,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc'd me to seek delays for them and me.
And this it was,—for other means was none.—
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us:
My wife, most careful for the latter born,
Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
Such as seafaring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sun, gazing upon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended us;
And, by the benefit of his wished light,
The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
Two ships from far making amain to us,
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Duke. Nay, forward, old man, do not break off so;
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

Ege. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily term'd them merciless to us!
For ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encounter'd by a mighty rock;
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst,
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burthened
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind;
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests;
And would have reft the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss;
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Ege. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me,
That his attendant (so his case was like,<sup>a</sup>
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name)
Might bear him company in the quest of him:
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,

<sup>a</sup> So his case was like—his case was so like that of Antipholus.

I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus;
Hopeless to find, yet loth to leave unsought,
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Duke. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But, though thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd
But to our honour's great disparagement,
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day,
To seek thy help by beneficial help:
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus:
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if no, then thou art doom'd to die:—
Gaoler, take him into thy custody.

Gaol. I will, my lord.

Ege. Hopeless, and helpless, doth Ægeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless<sup>a</sup> end. [Exit

SCENE II.—A public Place.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

Mer. There're give out you are of Epidamnus,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusan merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And, not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. S. Go, bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour it will be dinner-time:
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return, and sleep within mine inn;
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean. [Exit Dro. S.

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn and dine with me?

Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o'clock,<sup>b</sup>
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart,
And afterward consort you till bedtime;
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down, to view the city.

Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content.

[Exit Merchant.

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own content Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the ocean seeks another drop;

<sup>a</sup> Lifeless. Lifeless and lifeless are the same; as lively and lively also are the same.

<sup>b</sup> Soon at five o'clock—about five o'clock

Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself :
So I, to find a mother and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanac of my true date.—

What now ? How chance thou art return'd so soon ?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon ! rather approach'd too late :

The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit ;

The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell,

My mistress made it one upon my cheek :

She is so hot, because the meat is cold ;

The meat is cold, because you come not home ;

You come not home, because you have no stomach ;

You have no stomach, having broke your fast ;

But we, that know what 't is to fast and pray,

Are penitent * for your default to-day.

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir ; tell me this, I pray :

Where have you left the money that I gave you ?

Dro. E. O,—sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last,

To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper ;

The saddler had it, sir ; I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now :

Tell me, and dally not, where is the money ?

We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust

So great a charge on thine own custody ?

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner :

I hom my mistress come to you in post ;

If I return, I shall be post indeed ;<sup>b</sup>

For she will score your fault upon my pate.

Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your clock,

And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season ;

Reserve them till a merrier hour than this :

Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee ?

Dro. E. To me, sir ? why, you gave no gold to me.

Ant. S. Come on, sir knave ; have done your foolishness,

And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart

Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner,

My mistress and her sister stay for you.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a christian, answer me,

In what safe place you have bestow'd<sup>a</sup> my money ;

Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours,

That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd :

Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me ?

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate,

Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders,

But not a thousand marks between you both.

If I should pay your worship those again,

Perchance, you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks ? what mistress, slave, hast thou ?

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress at the Phoenix ;

She that doth fast till you come home to dinner,

And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Ant. S. What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face,

Being forbid ? There, take you that, sir knave.

Dro. E. What mean you, sir ? for God's sake, hold your hands ;

Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

[Exit Dro. E.]

Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other,

The villain is o'er-raught<sup>b</sup> of all my money.

They say this town is full of cozenage ;

As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,

Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,

Soul-killing witches that deform the body,

Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,

And many such like liberties of sin :

If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.

I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave ;

I greatly fear my money is not safe.

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Neither my husband, nor the slave return'd,

That in such haste I sent to seek his master !

Sue. Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps, some merchant hath invited him,

And from the mart he 's somewhere gone to dinner.

Good sister, let us dine, and never fret :

A man is master of his liberty :

Time is their master ; and when they see time,

They'll go, or come : If so, be patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more ?

Luc. Because their business still lies out o' door.

Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. O, know, he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There 's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe.<sup>c</sup>

There 's nothing situate under heaven's eye

But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky :

The lemnas, the fishes, and the winged fowls,

Are their males' subjects, and at their controls :

* Festient—in the sense of doing penance.

<sup>b</sup> Post index. The post of a shop was used as the tally-board of a publican is now used, to keep the score.

<sup>c</sup> Lash'd with woe. A lash, a latch, a lash, is each a kind of expressing what binds or fastens ; and thus " headstrong liberty," and " woe," are bound together—are inseparable.

Men, more divine, the masters of all these,

Lords of the wide world, and wild watery seas,

Indued with intellectual sense and souls,

Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,

Are masters to their females, and their lords :

Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unweild.

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.

Adr. But were you wedded you would bear some sway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where ?<sup>d</sup>

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience, unmov'd, no marvel though she pause ;

They can be meek that have no other cause.

A wretched soul, bruised with adversity,

We bid be quiet when we hear it cry ;

But were we burthen'd with like weight of pain,

As much, or more, we should ourselves complain :

So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,

With urging helpless patience would relieve me :

But, if thou live to see like right bereft,

This fool-begg'd patience<sup>e</sup> in thee will be left.

<sup>c</sup> Where has here the power of a noun, and is used as in

'Henry VIII.'—"the king hath sent me otherwhere."

guardianship of his fortune.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try ;—
Here comes your man, now is your husband nigh.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?

Dro. E. Nay, he 's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? know'st thou his mind?

Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear. Beshrew his hand! I scarce could understand it.

Luc. Spake he so doubtfully thou couldst not feel his meaning?

Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly I could too well feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully that I could scarce understand them.<sup>a</sup>

Adr. But say, I prithee, is he coming home? It seems he hath great care to please his wife.

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-mad.

Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain?

Dro. E. I mean not cuckold mad; But sure he is stark mad:

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold:

"'T is dinner-time," quoth I; "My gold," quoth he:
"Your meat doth burn," quoth I; "My gold," quoth he:

"Will you come?" quoth I; "My gold," quoth he:
"Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?"

"The pig," quoth I, "is burn'd;" "My gold," quoth he:
"My mistress, sir," quoth I; "Hang up thy mistress;
I know not thy mistress; out on thy mistress!"

Luc. Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master.

"I know," quoth he, "no house, no wife, no mistress;"
So that my errand, due unto my tongue,
I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders;
For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home?
For God's sake send some other messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other beating;

Between you I shall have a holy head.

Adr. Hence, prating peasant! fetch thy master home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you, as you with me,
That like a football you do spurn me thus?<sup>b</sup>
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:
If I last in this service you must case me in leather.

[Exit.]

Luc. Fie, how impatience loureth in your face!

Adr. His company must do his minions grace,
Whilst I at home starve for a merry look.
Hath homely age the alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it:
Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?
If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,
Unkindness blunts it, more than marble hard.
Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That 's not my fault, he 's master of my state:
What ruins are in me that can be found
By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures:<sup>c</sup> My decayed fair<sup>d</sup>
A sunny look of his would soon repair:
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale,
And feeds from home: poor I am but his stale.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>b</sup> To be round with any one is to be plain-spoken; as in 'Hamlet'—"Let her be round with him." Dromio uses the word in a double sense, when he alludes to the football.

Luc. Self-harming jealousy!—fie! beat it hence.

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense

I know his eye doth homage elsewhere;

Or else, what lets it but he would be here?

Sister, you know he promis'd me a chain;—

Would that alone alone he would detain,

So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!

I see, the jewel best enamell'd

Will lose his beauty; and though gold 'hides still,

That others touch, yet often touching will

Wear gold; and so no man that hath a name,

But falsehood and corruption doth it shame,

Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,

I 'll weep what 's left away, and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up

Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave

Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out.

By computation, and mine host's report,

I could not speak with Dromio, since at first

I sent him from the mart: See, here he comes.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter'd?

As you love strokes, so jest with me again?

You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold?

Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?

My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,

That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

Dro. S. What answer, sir? When spake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.

Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,

Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt,

And told'st me of a mistress, and a dinner;

For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:

What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?

Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.

[Beating him.]

Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake: now your jest is earnest:

Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes

Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,

Your sauciness will jest upon my love,

And make a common of my serious hours.<sup>a</sup>

When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport,

But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.

If you will jest with me know my aspect,

And fashion your demeanour to my looks,

Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

Dro. S. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave beating,

I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and in-sconce it<sup>b</sup> too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. S. Dost thou not know?

Dro. S. Nothing, sir; but that I am beaten.

Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

<sup>a</sup> The "serious hours" of Antipholus are his private hours: the "sauciness" of Dromio intrudes upon those hours, and deprives his master of his exclusive possession of them—make them "a common" property.

Ant. S. Why, first—for flouting me; and then, wherefore,—
For urging it the second time to me.

Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season?

When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme nor reason?

Well, sir, I thank you.

Ant. S. Thank me, sir? for what?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But, say, sir, is it dinner-time?

Dro. S. No, sir; I think the meat wants that I have.

Ant. S. In good time, sir, what's that?

Dro. S. Beating.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 't will be dry.

Dro. S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?

Dro. S. Lest it make you choleric, and purchase me neither dry lasting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time. There's a time for all things.

Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain old pate of father Time himself.

Ant. S. Lest 's hear it.

Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair, that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts; and what he hath scantied men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost: Yet he loath it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. S. For what reason?

Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.

Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dro. S. Sure ones then.

Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.*

Dro. S. Certain ones then.

Ant. S. Name them.

Dro. S. The one, to save the money that he spends in buying;† the other, that at dinner they should not sleep in his porridge.

Ant. S. Yea would all this time have proved there is no time for all things.

Dro. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, in no time‡ to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial, why there is no time to recover.

Dro. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

Ant. S. I knew 't would be a bald conclusion: But what! who wuffs us yonder?

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Ant. S. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and frown; Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects:

* Falsing—the participle of the verb to fals.

† Buying—sipping.

‡ Dromio proves that "there is no time for all things," because a man possesses his hair, by means of a periwig, "in no time."

I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once, when thou unurg'd wouldst vow

That never words were music to thine ear,

That never object pleasing in thine eye,

That never touch well-welcome to thy hand,

That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,

Unless I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee.

How comes it now, my husband, oh, how comes it,

That thou art then estranged from thyself?

Thyself I call it, being strange to me,

That, undividable, incorporate,

Am better than thy dear self's better part.

Ah, do not tear away thyself from me;

For know, my love, as easy mayst thou fall

A drop of water in the breaking gulf,

And take unmingled thence that drop again,

Without addition or diminishing,

As take from me thyself, and not me too.

How dearly would it touch thee to the quick

Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious!

And that this body, consecrate to thee,

By ruffian lust should be contaminate!

Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,

And hurl the name of husband in my face,

And tear the stain'd skin of my harlot brow,

And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring,

And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?

I know thou canst; and therefore, see thou do it.

I am possess'd with an adulterate blot;

My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:

For, if we two be one, and thou play false,

I do digest the poison of thy flesh,

Being strumpeted by thy contagion.

Keep then fair league and truce with thy true bed;

I live dis-stain'd,‡ thou, undishonour'd.

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not:

In Ephesus I am but two hours old,

As strange unto your town as to your talk;

Who, every word by all my wit being scann'd,

Want wit in all one word to understand.

Luc. Fie, brother! how the world is chang'd with you!

When were you wont to use my sister thus?

She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. S. By Dromio?

Dro. S. By me?

Ant. S. By thee; and this thou didst return from him,—

That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows,

Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this gentlewoman?

What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dro. S. I, sir? I never saw her till this time.

Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very words

Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

Dro. S. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. S. How can she thus then call us by our names

Unless it be by inspiration?

Ant. S. How ill agrees it with your gravity,

To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,

Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!

Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,‡

But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.

Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:

Thou art an elm, my husband, I, a vine;

Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,

Makes me with thy strength to communicate;

If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,

Usurping ivy, briar, or idle‡ moss;

* Fall is here used as a verb active.

† Dis-stain'd—unstained.

‡ Exempt. Adriana intends to say that she must bear the wrong; that Antipholus, being her husband, is released, acquitted, exempt, from any consequences of this wrong.

§ Idle—useless, fruitless; as in "deserts idle."

Who, all for want of prouing, with intrusion
Infect thy sap, and live on thy confusion.

Ant. S. To me she speaks; she moves me for her name:

What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy.

Luc. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.

Dro. S. O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner.

This is the fairy land;—O, spite of spites!
We talk with goblins, owls, and elvish sprites;
If we obey them not, this will ensue,
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blue.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thyself, and answer'st not?
Dromio, thou Dromio, thou snail, thou slug, thou sot!

Dro. S. I am transformed, master, am I not?

Ant. S. I think thou art, in mind, and so am I.

Dro. S. Nay, master, both in mind, and in my shape.

Ant. S. Thou hast thine own form.

Dro. S. No, I am an ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to aught, 't is to an ass.

Dro. S. 'T is true; she rides me, and I long for grass.

'T is so, I am an ass; else it could never be,
But I should know her as well as she knows me.

Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep,
Whilst man, and master, laugh my woes to scorn.

Come, sir, to dinner; Dromio, keep the gate:—

Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,

And shrive you of a thousand idle pranks:

Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,

Say, he dines forth, and let no creature enter.

Come, sister:—Dromio, play the porter well.

Ant. S. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping, or waking? mad, or well-advis'd?

Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd!

I'll say as they say, and persevere so,
And in this mist at all adventures go.

Dro. S. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?

Adr. Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your pate.

Luc. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.

[Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, DROMIO of Ephesus, ANGELO, and BALTHAZAR.

Ant. E. Good signior Angelo, you must excuse us all.
My wife is shrewish, when I keep not hours:

Say, that I linger'd with you at your shop,

To see the making of her carcanet,*

And that to-morrow you will bring it home.

But here's a villain, that would face me down

He met me on the mart; and that I beat him,

And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold;

And that I did deny my wife and house:

Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?

Dro. E. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know:

That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show:

If the skin were parchment, and the blows you gave were ink,

Your own handwriting would tell you what I think.

Ant. E. I think thou art an ass.

Dro. E. Marry, so it doth appear

By the wrongs I suffer and the blows I bear.

I should kick, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,

You would keep from my heels, and beware of an ass.

Ant. E. You are sad, signior Balthazar: 'Pray God, our cheer

May answer my good will, and your good welcome here.

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.

Ant. E. O, signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,

A table full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.

Bal. Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.

Ant. E. And welcome more common; for that's nothing but words.

Bal. Small cheer, and great welcome, makes a merry feast.

Ant. E. Ay to a niggardly host, and more sparing guest:

But though my cates be mean, take them in good part;
'Tis cheer may you have, but not with better heart.

'Tis soft; my door is lock'd. Go bid them let us in.
re. F. Maud. Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Jen'

* Carcanet—a chain, or necklace.

Dro. S. [Within.] Mome,<sup>a</sup> malt-horse, capon, cozcomb, idiot, patch!<sup>b</sup>

Either get thee from the door, or sit down at the hatch; Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store,

When one is one too many? Go, get thee from the door.

Dro. E. What patch is made our porter? My master stays in the street.

Dro. S. Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on 's feet.

Ant. E. Who talks within there? ho! open the door.

Dro. S. Right, sir, I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.

Ant. E. Wherefore? for my dinner; I have not din'd to-day.

Dro. S. Nor to-day here you must not; come again when you may.

Ant. E. What art thou, that keep'st me out from the house I owe?<sup>c</sup>

Dro. S. The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.

Dro. E. O villain, thou hast stolen both mine office and my name;

The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame.

If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place,

Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an ass.

Luce. [Within.] What a coil is there! Dromio, who are those at the gate?

Dro. E. Let my master in, Luce.

Luce. Faith, no; he comes too late;
And so tell your master.

Dro. E. O Lord, I must laugh;—

Have at you with a proverb.—Shall I set in my staff?

Luce. Have at you with another: that 's,—When? can you tell?

Dro. S. If thy name be called Luce, Luce, thou hast answer'd him well.

Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in,
I hope?

<sup>a</sup> Mome is the French word for a buffoon;—summer is to go in disguise; hence summery. But some here means a blockhead, —something foolish.

Luc. I thought to have ask'd you.
Dro. S. And you said, no.
Dro. E. So, come, help; well struck; there was blow for blow.
Ant. E. Thou baggage, let me in.
Luc. Can you tell for whose sake?
Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.
Luc. Let him knock till it ake.
Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.
Luc. What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?
Ant. [Within.] Who is that at the door, that keeps all this noise?
Dro. S. By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.
Ant. E. Are you there, wife? you might have come before.
Ant. Your wife, sir knave! go, get you from the door.
Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore.
Ant. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome; we would fain have either.
Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.
Dro. E. They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.
Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.
Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.
 Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold:
 It would make a man mad as a buck to be so bought and sold.
Ant. E. Go, fetch me something, I'll break ope the gate.
Dro. S. Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.
Dro. E. A man may break a word with you, sir; and words are but wind:
 Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind.
Dro. S. It seems, thou want'st breaking: Out upon thee, hind!
Dro. E. Here's too much, out upon thee! I pray thee, let me in.
Dro. S. Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.
Ant. E. Well, I'll break in: Go, borrow me a crow.
Dro. E. A crow without feather; master, mean you so?
 For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:
 If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.
Ant. E. Go, get thee gone, fetch me an iron crow.
Bal. Have patience, sir, O let it not be so.
 Hence you war against your reputation,
 And draw within the compass of suspect
 The circolated honour of your wife.
 Once this,<sup>b</sup>—Your long experience of her wisdom,
 Her sister virtue, years, and modesty, a
 Plead on her part some cause to you unknown;
 And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse
 Why at this time the doors are made against you.<sup>c</sup>
 Be rul'd by me; depart in patience,
 And let us to the 'Tiger all to dinner:
 And, about evening, come yourself alone,
 To know the reason of this strange restraint.
 If by strong hand you offer to break in,
 Now in the stirring passage of the day,
 A vulgar comment will be made of it;
 And that supposed by the common rout,

<sup>a</sup> Part with—depart with.      <sup>b</sup> Once this—once for all.
<sup>c</sup> To make the door so still a provincial expression.

Against your yet ungalld estimation,
 That may with foul intrusion enter in,
 And dwell upon your grave when you are dead:
 For slander lives upon succession;
 For ever housed, where it gets possession.
Ant. E. You have prevail'd. I will depart in quiet,
 And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.
 I know a wench of excellent discourse;
 Pretty and witty; wild, and yet, too, gentle;—
 There will we dine: this woman that I mean,
 My wife (but, I protest, without desert)
 Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal;
 To her will we to dinner. Get you home,
 And fetch the chain; by this, I know, 't is made:
 Bring it, I pray you, to the Porpentine;
 For there's the house; that chain will I bestow
 (Be it for nothing but to spite my wife)
 Upon mine hostess there: good sir, make haste:
 Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
 I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.
Ant. E. I'll meet you at that place, some hour hence.
Ant. E. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter LUCIANA and ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot
 A husband's office? shall, Antipholus,
 Even in the spring of love, thy love-springs<sup>a</sup> rot?
 Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous?
 If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
 Then, for her wealth's sake, use her with more kindness:
 Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth;
 Muffle your false love with some show of blindness:
 Let not my sister read it in your eye;
 Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator;
 Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty;
 Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger:
 Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted;
 Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint;
 Be secret-true: What need she be acquainted?
 What simple thief brags of his own attainment?
 'T is double wrong to truant with your bed,
 And let her read it in thy looks at board:
 Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed;
 Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word.
 Alas, poor women! make us but believe,
 Being compact of credit,<sup>b</sup> that you love us:
 Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve;
 We in your motion turn, and you may move us.
 Then, gentle brother, get you in again;
 Comfort my sister, cheer her, call her wife:
 'T is holy sport, to be a little vain,<sup>c</sup>
 When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife.
Ant. S. Sweet mistress, (what your name is else, I know not, Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine,)
 Less, in your knowledge, and your grace, you show not,
 Than our earth's wonder; more than earth divine.
 Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak;
 Lay open to my earthy gross conceit,
 Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,
 The folded meaning of your words' deceit.
 Against my soul's pure truth why labour you,
 To make it wander in an unknown field?
 Are you a god? would you create me new?
 Transform me then, and to your power I'll yield.
 But if that I am I, then well I know,
 Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
 Nor to her bed no homage do I owe;
 Far more, far more, to you do I decline.

O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with toy note.

To drown me in thy sister flood of tears;
Sing, siren, for thyself, and I will dote:
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take thee, and there lie;
And, in that glorious supposition, think

He gains by death, that hath such means to die:—

Let Love,<sup>a</sup> being light, be drowned if she sink!

Luc. What, are you mad, that you do reason so?

Ant. S. Not mad, but mated;<sup>b</sup> how, I do not know.

Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.

Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.

Luc. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight.

Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.

Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.

Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.

Luc. That 's my sister.

Ant. S. No;

It is thyself, mine own self's better part;
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.

Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.

Ant. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I aim thee;

Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life;

Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife:

Give me thy hand.

Luc. O, soft, sir, hold you still;
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will. [Exit Luc.]

Enter, from the house of ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, DROMIO of Syracuse.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio? where runn'st thou so fast?

Dro. S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?

Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.

Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man, and besides myself.

Ant. S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast: not that, I being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.

Ant. S. What is she?

Dro. S. A very reverent body; ay, such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say, sir reverence: I have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. S. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, she 's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her rags, and the tallow in them, will burn a Poland winter: if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.

Ant. S. What complexion is she of?

Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept. For why? she sweats; a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.

Ant. S. That 's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. S. No, sir, 't is in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.

<sup>b</sup> To mate—to amate—is to make senseless, to stupify as in a dream. Motas (Anglo-Saxon) is to dream.

<sup>c</sup> When anything offensive was spoken of, this form of apology was used.

Ant. S. What 's her name?

Dro. S. Nell, sir;—but her name and three quarters, that 's an ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth?

Dro. S. No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe. I could find out countries in her.

Ant. S. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, in her buttocks. I found it out by the bogs.

Ant. S. Where Scotland?

Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness; hard, in the palm of the hand.

Ant. S. Where France?

Dro. S. In her forehead; armed and reverted, making war against her hair.<sup>a</sup>

Ant. S. Where England?

Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them; but I guess it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

Ant. S. Where Spain?

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it, hot in her breath.

Ant. S. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. S. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain; who sent whole armadas of carracks to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. S. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. S. O, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; called me Dromio; swore, I was assured<sup>b</sup> to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch:

And, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel,

She had transform'd me to a curtail-dog, and made me turn i' the wheel.

Ant. S. Go, hie thee presently, post to the road;

And if the wind blow any way from shore,

I will not harbour in this town to-night.

If any bark put forth, come to the mart,

Where I will walk, till thou return to me

If every one knows us, and we know none,

'T is time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life, So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.]

Ant. S. There 's none but witches do inhabit here;

And therefore 't is high time that I were hence.

She, that doth call me husband, even my soul

Doth for a wife abhor: but her fair sister,

Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace,

Of such enchanting presence and discourse,

Hath almost made me traitor to myself:

But, lest myself be guilty to<sup>c</sup> self-wrong,

I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. Master Antipholus?

Ant. S. Ay, that 's my name.

Ang. I know it well, sir. Lo, here is the chain;

I thought to have ta'en you at the Porpentine:<sup>d</sup>

The chain unfinish'd made me stay thus long.

Ant. S. What is your will that I shall do with this?

Ang. What please yourself, sir; I have made it for you.

<sup>a</sup> This is generally held to be an allusion to the War of the League—the war against Henry of Navarre, the heir of Henry III.

<sup>d</sup> Porpentine. This word is invariably used throughout the early editions of Shakspeare for porcupine.

Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespoke it not.
Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have:
 Go hence with it, and please your wife withal;
 And soon at supper-time I'll visit you,
 And then receive my money for the chain.
Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,
 For fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man, sir; fare you well. [Exit]
Ant. S. What I should think of this I cannot tell:
 But this I think, there's no man is so vain
 That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.
 I see, a man here needs not live by shifts,
 When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.
 I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay;
 If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter a Merchant, ANGILO, and an Officer.

Mer. You know, since Pentecost the sum is due,
 And since I have not much importun'd you,
 Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
 To Persia, and want gilders for my voyage:
 Therefore make present satisfaction,
 Or I'll attach you by this officer.
Ang. Even just the sum that I do owe to you
 Is owing to me* by Antipholus:
 And in the instant that I met with you,
 He had of me a chain; at five o'clock
 I shall receive the money for the same:
 Præsech you walk with me down to his house,
 I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Off. That labour may you save; see where he comes.
Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou
 And buy a rope's end; that will I bestow
 Among my wife and her confederates,
 For locking me out of my doors by day.
 Bet soft, I see the goldsmith;—get thee gone;
 Buy thee a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope!
 [Exit DROMIO.]

Ant. E. A man is well help up that trusts to you.
 I promised your presence, and the chain;
 But neither chain, nor goldsmith, came to me:
 Belike, you thought our love would last too long,
 If 't were chain'd together; and therefore came not.

Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's the note
 How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat;
 The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion;
 Which doth amount to three odd ducats more
 Than I stand debited to this gentleman:
 I pray you, see him presently discharg'd,
 For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money;
 Besides I have some business in the town:
 Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
 And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
 Debase the sum on the receipt thereof;
 Penance, I will be there as soon as you.

Ang. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself?
Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ang. Well, sir, I will: Have you the chain about
 you?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have;
 Or else you may return without your money.
Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain;
 Bet wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
 And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good Lord, you use this dalliance to excuse
 Your breach of promise to the Porpentine:
 I should have chid you for not bringing it,
 But, like a siren, you first begin to brawl.

* Growing to me—acquiring to me.

Mer. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, despatch.
Ang. You hear how he importunes me; the chain—
Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.
Ang. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now;
 Either send the chain, or send me by some token.
Ant. E. Fie! now you run this humour out of breath:
 Come, where's the chain? I pray you, let me see it.
Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance:
 Good sir, say, wher you'll answer me, or no;
 If not, I'll leave him to the officer.
Ant. E. I answer you! What should I answer you?
Ang. The money that you owe me for the chain.
Ant. E. I owe you none, till I receive the chain.
Ang. You know I gave it you half an hour since.
Ant. E. You gave me none; you wrong me much to say so.

Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it:
 Consider, how it stands upon my credit.
Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.
Off. I do; and charge you, in the duke's name, to obey me.

Ang. This touches me in reputation:—
 Either consent to pay this sum for me,
 Or I attach you by this officer.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had!
 Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.

Ang. Here is thy fee; arrest him, officer.
 I would not spare my brother in this case,
 If he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir; you hear the suit.
Ant. E. I do obey thee, till I give thee bail:
 But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear
 As all the metal in your shop will answer.
Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
 To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, there's a bark of Epidamnium,
 That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
 And then, sir, she bears away: our fraughtage, sir,
 I have convey'd aboard; and I have bought
 The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vitæ.
 The ship is in her trim; the merry wind
 Blows fair from land: they stay for nought at all,
 But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now! a madman? Why, thou peevish sheep,
 What ship of Epidamnium stays for me?

Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.
Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope;
 And told thee to what purpose, and what end.
Dro. S. You sent me, sir, for a rope's-end as soon:
 You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark.

Ant. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure,
 And teach your ears to list me with more heed.
 To Adriana, villain, bid thee straight:
 Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk
 That's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry,

* Peevish—silly. Sheep and ship were pronounced alike.

There is a purse of ducats; let her send it;
Tell her, I am arrested in the street,
And that shall bail me: hie thee, slave: be gone.
On, officer, to prison till it come.

[Exeunt Merchant, ANGELO, Officer, and ANT. E.]

Dro. S. To Adriana! that is where we din'd,
Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband:
She is too big, I hope, for me to compass.
Thither I must, although against my will,
For servants must their masters' minds fulfil. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Mightst thou perceive austerely in his eye
That he did plead in earnest, yea, or no?
Look'd he or red, or pale; or sad or merrily?
What observation mad'st thou in this case,
Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?
Luc. First, he denied you had in him no right.<sup>a</sup>
Adr. He meant he did me none; the more my spite.
Luc. Then swore he, that he was a stranger here.
Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were.
Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what said he?
Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.
Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?
Luc. With words that in an honest suit might move.
First, he did praise my beauty; then, my speech.
Adr. Didst speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere,
Ill-fac'd, worse-bodied, shapeless everywhere;
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind;
Stigmatical<sup>b</sup> in making, worse in mind.

Luc. Who would be jealous then of such a one?
No evil lost is wail'd when it is gone.
Adr. Ah! but I think him better than I say,
And yet would herein others' eyes were worse:
Far from her nest the lapwing cries, away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here, go: the desk, the purse; sweet, now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell.
A devil in an everlasting garment hath him;
One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;
A wolf, nay, worse,—a fellow all in buff;<sup>c</sup>
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands;
A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot well;<sup>d</sup>
One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell.<sup>e</sup>

Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter; he is 'rested on the case.

Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me, at whose suit.

<sup>c</sup> The occupation of the bailiff being somewhat dangerous in times when men were ready to resist the execution of the law with the sword and rapier, he was clothed with the ox-skin, the buff, which in warfare subsequently took the place of the heavier coat of mail.

<sup>e</sup> Hell was the name of a place of confinement under the Exchequer Chamber for the debtors of the Crown.

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested, well;
But is in a suit of buff, which 'rested him, that can I tell:

Will you send him, mistress, redemption, the money in his desk?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister.—This I wonder at. [Exit Luc.]

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:—

Tell me, was he arrested on a band?<sup>a</sup>

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing;

A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell: 't is time that I were gone.

It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

Adr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.

Dro. S. O yes. If any hour meet a sergeant, a' turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season.

Nay, he's a thief too: Have you not heard me say,

That Time comes stealing on by night and day?

If he be in debt, and theft, and a sergeant in the way,

Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Enter LUCIANA.

Adr. Go, Dromio; there 's the money, bear it straight;
And bring thy master home immediately.

Come, sister; I am press'd down with conceit;
Conceit, my comfort, and my injury. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There 's not a man I meet but doth salute
me,

As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me, some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy:
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop,
And show'd me silks that he had bought for me,
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here 's the gold you sent me for:
What, have you got [rid of] the picture of Old Adam new apparelled?

Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?

Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's-skin that was killed for the prodigal; he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

Ant. S. I understand thee not.

Dro. S. No? why, 't is a plain case: he that went like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a fob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace, than a morris-pike.<sup>b</sup>

Ant. S. What! thou mean'st an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he, that brings any man to answer it that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, "God give you good rest!"

Ant. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery. Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the sergeant, to tarry for the hoy Delay: Here are the angels that you sent for, to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I; And here we wander in illusions; Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtezan.

Cour. Well met, well met, master Antipholus. I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now: Is that the chain you promis'd me to-day?

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee, tempt me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench; and herself comes, that the wenches say, "God damn me," that's as much as to say, "God make me a light wench." It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; eyes, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir. Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner here.

Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.

Ant. S. Avoid then, fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping?

You art, as you are all, a sorceress: I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner, Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd; And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the paring of one's nail, A nail, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, A nut, a cherry-stone; but she, more covetous, Would have a chain.

Master, be wise; an' if you give it her, The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain; I hope you do not mean to cheat me so.

Ant. S. Awaunt, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dro. S. Fly pride, says the peacock: Mistress, that you know. [Exeunt ANT. S. and DRO. S.]

Cour. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad, Else would he never so demean himself:

A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats, And for the same he promis'd me a chain;

Both one and other he denies me now. The reason that I gather he is mad,

(Besides this present instance of his rage,) Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner,

(His own doors being shut against his entrance.) Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits,

On purpose shut the doors against his way. My way is now to hie home to his house,

And tell his wife, that, being lunatic, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce My ring away: This course I fittest choose;

For fifty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, and an Officer.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man, I will not break away: I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money

To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.

My wife is in a wayward mood to-day;

And will not lightly trust the messenger:

That I should be attach'd in Ephesus,

I tell you, 't will sound harshly in her ears.—

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus, with a rope's end.

Here comes my man; I think he brings the money.

How now, sir? have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here 's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.

Ant. E. But where 's the money?

Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?

Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you. [Beating him.]

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Dro. E. Nay, 't is for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Off. Good now, hold thy tongue.

Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain!

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows: when I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am waked with it, when I sleep; raised with it, when I sit; driven out of doors with it, when I go from home; welcomed home with it, when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar wont her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, and the Courtezan, with PINCH, and others.

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

Dro. E. Mistress, respice finem, respect your end; or rather the prophecy, like the parrot, "Beware the rope's end."

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Beats him.]

Cour. How say you now? is not your husband mad?

Adr. His incivility confirms no less.

Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer;

Establish him in his true sense again,

And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!

Cour. Mark, how he trembles in his ecstasy!

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.

Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, hous'd within this man,

To yield possession to my holy prayers,

And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight;

I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.

Ant. E. Peace, dotting wizard, peace; I am not mad.

Adr. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!

Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customers?

Did this companion with the saffron face

Revel and feast it at my house to-day,

Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut,

And I denied to enter in my house?

Adr. O husband, God doth know, you din'd at home,

Where 'would you had remain'd until this time,

Free from these slanders, and this open shame!

Ant. E. Din'd at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou?

Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out?

Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you shut out.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?
Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.
Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?
Dro. E. Certes, she did; the kitchen-restal scorn'd you.
Ant. E. And did I not in rage depart from thence?
Dro. E. In verity, you did;—my bones bear witness, That since have felt the vigour of his rage.
Adr. Is 't good to soothe him in these contraries?
Pinch. It is no shame; the fellow finds his vein, And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.
Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.
Adr. Alas! I sent you money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.
Dro. E. Money by me? heart and good-will you might,
 But, surely, master, not a rag of money.
Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?
Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luc. And I am witness with her, that she did.
Dro. E. God and the rope-maker, bear me witness, That I was sent for nothing but a rope!
Pinch. Mistress, both man and master is possess'd; I know it by their pale and deadly looks: They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.
Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to-day?
Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.
Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold; But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.
Adr. Dissembling villain, thou speak'st false in both.
Ant. E. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all; And art confederate with a damned pack, To make a loathsome abject scorn of me: But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes, That would behold in me this shameful sport.
 [Pinch and his Assistants bind Ant. E. and Dro. E.
Adr. O, bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.
Pinch. More company; the fiend is strong within him.
Luc. Ah me, poor man! how pale and wan he looks!
Ant. E. What, will you murder me? Thou gaoler, thou,
 I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them To make a rescue?
Off. Masters, let him go: He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
Pinch. Go, bind this man, for he is frantic too.
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?
 Hast thou delight to see a wretched man Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Off. He is my prisoner; if I let him go, The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
Adr. I will discharge thee, ere I go from thee: Bear me forthwith unto his creditor, And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it. Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd Home to my house. O most unhappy day!
Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!
Dro. E. Master, I am here enter'd in bond for you.
Ant. E. Out on thee, villain! wherefore dost thou mad me?
Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? be not good master; cry, the devil.—
Luc. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk!
Adr. Go, bear him hence.—Sister, go you with me.
 [Exeunt PINCH and Assistants, ANT. E. and Dro. E.
 Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?
Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith. Do you know him?
Adr. I know the man: What is the sum he owes?
Off. Two hundred ducats.
Adr. Say, how grows it due?
Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.
Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.
Cour. When as your husband, all in rage, to-day Came to my house, and took away my ring, (The ring I saw upon his finger now,) Straight after, did I meet him with a chain.
Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it:—Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is; I long to know the truth hereof at large.
 Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse, with his rapier drawn and DROMIO of Syracuse.
Luc. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.
Adr. And come with naked swords; let's call us help,
 To have them bound again.
Off. Away, they'll kill us.
 [Exeunt Officer, ADR., and LUC.
Ant. S. I see, these witches are afraid of swords.
Dro. S. She that would be your wife now ran from you.
Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff forthence:
 I long that we were safe and sound aboard.
Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm; you saw they speak us fair, give gold: methinks they are such a gentle nation, that, for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.
Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town; Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard. [Exeunt

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Merchant and ANGELO.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you; But, I protest, he had the chain of me, Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.
Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the city?
Ang. Of very reverent reputation, sir, Of credit infinite, highly belov'd, Second to none that lives here in the city; His word might bear my wealth at any time.
Mer. Speak softly: yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Ang. 'T is so; and that self chain about his neck, Which he forswore, most monstrously, to have.

Good sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him. Signior Antipholus, I wonder much That you would put me to this shame and trouble; And not without some scandal to yourself, With circumstance and oaths, so to deny This chain, which now you wear so openly: Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment, You have done wrong to this my honest friend; Who, but for staying on our controversy, Had hoisted sail, and put to sea to-day: This chain you had of me, can you deny it?
Ant. S. I think I had; I never did deny it.
Mer. Yes, that you did, sir; and forswore it too.
Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it, or forswear it?

* Stuff—baggage. "The king's stuff" is often mentioned the orders issued for royal progresses.

Mer. These ears of mine, thou knowest, did hear thee :
Ere on thee, wretch ! 't is pity that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus :
I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.

Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.]

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, Courtezan, and others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not, for God's sake; he is mad ;
Some get within him,<sup>a</sup> take his sword away ;
Ere Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dys. S. Run, master, run; for God's sake take a house.<sup>b</sup>
Tis some priory.—In, or we are spoil'd.

[Exit ANT. S. and DRO. S. to the Priory.]

Enter the ABBESS.

Abb. Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng you hither ?

Adr. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence :
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.

Ang. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

Mer. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.

Abb. How long hath this possession held the man ?

Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad,
And much different from the man he was ;
Be, till this afternoon, his passion
N'er brake into extremity of rage.

Abb. Hath he not lost much wealth by wrack of sea ?

Had some dear friend ? Hath not else his eye

Stay'd his affection in unlawful love ?

A sin prevailing much in youthful men,

Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.

Which of these sorrows is he subject to ?

Adr. To none of these, except it be the last ;
Namely, some love, that drew him oft from home.

Abb. You should for that have reprehended him.

Adr. Why, so I did.

Abb. Ay, but not rough enough.

Adr. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Abb. Haply, in private.

Adr. And in assemblies too.

Abb. Ay, but not enough.

Adr. It was the copy of our conference :

In bed, he slept not for my urging it ;

At board, he fed not for my urging it ;

Alone, it was the subject of my theme ;

In company, I often glanced it ;

Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And therefore came it that the man was mad :

The reason clamours of a jealous woman

Poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

It seems his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing :

And thereof comes it that his head is light.

Thus say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy upbraidings :

Unquiet meals make ill digestions,

Thenceof the raging fire of fever bred ;

And what 's a fever but a fit of madness ?

Thus say'st his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls :

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue

But moody and dull melancholy,

Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair,

And, at her heels, a huge infectious troop

Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life ?

In bed, in sport, and life-preserving rest

To be disturb'd, would mad or man, or beast ;

The consequence is then, thy jealous fits

Have rear'd thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,

When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly.

Why bear you these rebukes, and answer not ?

<sup>a</sup> Get within him—close with him.

<sup>b</sup> Take a house—take to a house; take the shelter of a house.

Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof.—
Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.

Abb. No, not a creature enters in my house.

Adr. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth

Abb. Neither; he took this place for sanctuary,

And it shall privilege him from your hands,

Till I have brought him to his wits again,

Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,

Diet his sickness, for it is my office,

And will have no attorney but myself ;

And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abb. Be patient : for I will not let him stir,

Till I have used the approved means I have,

With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,

To make of him a formal man again :

It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,

A charitable duty of my order ;

Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

Adr. I will not hence, and leave my husband here ;

And ill it doth beseem your holiness,

To separate the husband and the wife.

Abb. Be quiet, and depart, thou shalt not have him.

[Exit ABBESS.]

Luc. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.

Adr. Come, go ; I will fall prostrate at his feet,

And never rise until my tears and prayers

Have won his grace to come in person hither,

And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five :

Anon, I'm sure, the duke himself in person

Comes this way to the melancholy vale,—

The place of depth and sorry execution,

Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Ang. Upon what cause ?

Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan merchant,

Who put unluckily into this bay,

Against the laws and statutes of this town,

Beheaded publicly for his offence.

Ang. See where they come ; we will behold his death.

Luc. Kneel to the duke, before he pass the abbey.

Enter DUKE, attended; ÆGEON, bare-headed; with the Headsman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly,

If any friend will pay the sum for him,

He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess !

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady ;

It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband,—

Whom I made lord of me and all I had,

At your important letters,—this ill day

A most outrageous fit of madness took him ;

That desperately he hurried through the street,

(With him his bondman, all as mad as he,)

Doing displeasure to the citizens

By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, anything his rage did like.

Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,

Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,

That here and there his fury had committed.

Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,<sup>a</sup>

He broke from those that had the guard of him ;

And, with his mad attendant and himself,

Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,

Met us again, and, madly bent on us,

Chas'd us away ; till, raising of more aid,

We came again to bind them : then they fled

Into this abbey, whither we pursued them ;

And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,

And will not suffer us to fetch him out.

<sup>a</sup> Strong escape—escape effected by strength.

Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since, thy husband serv'd me in my wars;
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word,
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
'Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate,
And bid the lady abness come to me;
I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistress, mistress, shift and save yourself!
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the maids a-row,<sup>a</sup> and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair:
My master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with scissars nicks him like a fool:<sup>b</sup>
And, sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adr. Peace, fool! thy master and his man are here;
And that is false thou dost report to us.

Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
I have not breath'd almost since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you: [Cry within.
Hark, hark, I hear him, mistress; fly, he gone.

Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing: Guard with halberds.

Adr. Ah me, it is my husband! Witness you
That he is borne about invisible:
Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here;
And now he 's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke, oh, grant me justice!

Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice!

Ege. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus and Dromio.

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there.
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife;
That hath abused and dishonour'd me,
Even in the strength and height of injury!
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me,
While she with harlots<sup>c</sup> feasted in my house.

Duke. A grievous fault: Say, woman, didst thou so?

Adr. No, my good lord;—myself, he, and my sister,
To-day did dine together: So befall my soul
As this is false he burthens me withal!

Luc. Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth!

Ang. O perjur'd woman! they are both forsworn.
In this the madman justly chargeth them.

Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say;
Neither disturbed with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner:
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it, for he was with me then;
Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,

<sup>a</sup> A-row—on row; one after the other.

<sup>b</sup> It was the custom to shave, or crop, the heads of idiots.

<sup>c</sup> A harlot was, originally, a hureling.

Where Balthazar and I did dine together.

Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him: In the street I met him;
And, in his company, that gentleman.

There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me down,
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,
Which, God he knows, I saw not: for the which,
He did arrest me with an officer.

I did obey; and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats: He with none return'd.

Then fairly I bespoke the officer,
To go in person with me to my house.

By th' way we met my wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile confederates; along with them

They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd villain,
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,

A thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller;
A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch,

A living dead man: this pernicious slave,
Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer,

And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no face, as 't were, outfacing me,

Cries out, I was possess'd: then all together
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence;

And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together;

Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
I gain'd my freedom, and immediately

Ran hither to your grace; whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction

For these deep shames, and great indignities.

Ang. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him,
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he such a chain of thee, or no?

Ang. He had, my lord: and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.

Mer. Besides, I will be sworn, these ears of mine
Heard you confess you had the chain of him,

After you first forswore it on the mart,
And, thereupon, I drew my sword on you;

And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Ant. E. I never came within these abbey walls,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me;

I never saw the chain, so help me Heaven!
And this is false you burthen me withal.

Duke. Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup.

If here you hous'd him, here he would have been:
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:

You say he din'd at home; the goldsmith here
Denies that saying:—Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E. Sir, he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.
Cour. He did; and from my finger snatch'd that ring.

Ant. E. 'T is true, my liege, this ring I had of her.
Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?

Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace.
Duke. Why, this is strange:—Go call the abness
hither;

I think you are all mated, or stark mad. [Exit Attend.
Ege. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a word;
Haply, I see a friend will save my life,

And pay the sum that may deliver me.
Duke. Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou wilt.

Ege. Is not your name, sir, call'd Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?

Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir,
But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords:

Now am I Dromio, and his man, unbound.
Ege. I am sure you both of you remember me.

Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;
For lately we were bound, as you are now.

You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?
Ege. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

Ant. E. I never saw you in my life, till now.

Ege. Oh! grief hath chang'd me, since you saw me last;

And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ant. E. Neither.

Ege. Dromio, nor thou?

Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.

Ege. I am sure thou dost.

Dro. E. Ay, sir? but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies you are now bound to believe him.

Ege. Not know my voice! O, time's extremity!
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue,
In seven short years, that here my only son

Knows not my feeble key of untun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses (I cannot err)
Tell me, thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.

Ege. But seven years since, in Syracuse, boy,
Thou know'st we parted: but, perhaps, my son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E. The duke, and all that know me in the city,
Can witness with me that it is not so
I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life.

Duke. I tell thee, Syracusean, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse:
I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the ABBESS, with ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse, and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd.
[All gather to see him.]

Ant. E. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other;
And so of these: Which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?

Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio; command him away.

Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio; pray, let me stay.

Ant. S. Egeon, art thou not? or else his ghost?

Dro. S. O, my old master, who hath bound him here?

Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty:
Speak, old Egeon, if thou be'st the man
That hadst a wife once called Emilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fair sons:
O, if thou be'st the same Egeon, speak,
And speak unto the same Emilia!

Ege. If I dream not, thou art Emilia:
If thou art she, tell me, where is that son
That flouted with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnus, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up:
But, by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnus:
What then became of them I cannot tell;
I to this fortune that you see me in.

Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right.
These two Antipholus, these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance,— Besides her urging of her wreck at sea,—
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.

Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first?

Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay stand apart; I know not which is which.

Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord.

Dro. E. And I with him.

Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior

Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.

Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?

Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.

Adr. And are not you my husband?

Ant. E. No, I say nay to that.

Ant. S. And so do I, yet did she call me so;

And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
Did call me brother:—What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good;
If this be not a dream I see and hear.

Ang. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.

Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.

Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.

Ang. I think I did, sir; I deny it not.

Adr. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,
By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.

Dro. E. No, none by me.

Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see, we still did meet each other's man,
And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these Errors are arose.

Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father here.

Duke. It shall not need; thy father hath his life.

Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.

Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.

Abb. Renowned duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes:
And all that are assembled in this place,
That by this sympathized one day's error
Have suffer'd wrong, go, keep us company,
And we shall make full satisfaction.
Twenty-five years have I but gone in travail
Of you, my sons; nor, till this present hour,
My heavy burthens are delivered:
The duke, my husband, and my children both,
And you the calendars of their nativity,
Go to a gossip's feast, and go with me;
After so long grief, such nativity!

Duke. With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast.

[Exit DUKE, ABBESS, EGEON, COURTEZAN,
Merchant, ANGELO, and ATTENDANTS.]

Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard?

Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou embark'd?

Dro. S. Your goods, that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur.

Ant. S. He speaks to me; I am your master,
Dromio:
Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon:
Embrace thy brother there, rejoice with him.

[Exit ANT. S. and E., ADR., and LUC.]

Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,
That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner;
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.

Dro. E. Methinks, you are my glass, and not my brother:

I see, by you, I am a sweet-fac'd youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?

Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder.

Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?

Dro. S. We'll draw cuts for the senior: till then, lead thou first.

Dro. E. Nay, then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

[Exit.]

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

This play was one of those published in Shakspeare's lifetime. The first edition appeared in 1598. In the first collected edition, the folio of 1623, the text differs little from the original quarto.

From the title of the first edition of 'Love's Labour's Lost,' we learn that, when it was presented before Queen Elizabeth, at the Christmas of 1597, it had been "newly corrected and augmented." As no edition of the comedy, before it was corrected and augmented, is known to exist, we have no proof that the few allusions to temporary circumstances, which are supposed in some degree to fix the date of the play, may not apply to the augmented copy only. In the extrinsic evidence, therefore, which this comedy supplies, there is nothing whatever to disprove the belief which we entertain that, before it had been "corrected and augmented," 'Love's Labour's Lost' was one of the plays produced by Shakspeare about 1589, when, being only twenty-five years of age, he was a joint-proprietor in the Blackfriars theatre. The intrinsic evidence appears to us entirely to support this opinion.

There is no historical foundation for any portion of the action of this comedy. There was no Ferdinand King of Navarre. We have no evidence of a difference between France and Navarre as to possessions in Aquitaine.

Charles Lamb was wont to call 'Love's Labour's Lost' the Comedy of Leisure. 'Tis certain that in the commonwealth of King Ferdinand of Navarre we have—

"All men idle, all;
And women too."

But still all this idleness is too energetic to warrant us in calling this the Comedy of Leisure. Let us try again. Is it not the Comedy of Affectations?

Molière, in his 'Précieuses Ridicules,' has admirably hit off one affectation that had found its way into the private life of his own times. In 'Love's Labour's Lost' Shakspeare presents us almost every variety of affectation that is founded upon a misdirection of intellectual activity. We have here many of the forms in which cleverness is exhibited as opposed to wisdom, and false refinement as opposed to simplicity. The affected characters, even the most fantastical, are not fools; but, at the same time, the natural characters, who, in this play, are chiefly the women, have their intellectual foibles. All the modes of affectation are developed in one continued stream of fun and drollery; every one is laughing at the folly of the other, and the laugh grows louder and louder as the more natural characters, one by one, trip up the heels of the more affected. The most affected at last join in the laugh with the most natural; and the whole comes down to "plain kenney yea and nay,"—from the syntax of Holofernes, and the "fire-new words" of Armado, to "greasy Joan" and "roasted crabs."

SCENE,—NAVARRÉ.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—NAVARRÉ. A Park, with a Palace in it.

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time,
Th' endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour, which shall bate his scythe's keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors!—for so you are,
That war against your own affections,
And the huge army of the world's desires,—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
Our court shall be a little Academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are pass'd, and now subscribe your names;
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oath, and keep it too.
Long. I am resolv'd: 't is but a three years' fast;
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt the wits.
Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified.

The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves—
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.*

Biron. I can but say their protestation over,
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, To live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:
As, not to see a woman in that term;
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
And, one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside;
The which, I hope, is not enrolled there:
And then to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day;
(When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day;)
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep;
Not to see ladies,—study,—fast,—not sleep.

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.

Biron. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please,
I only swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.

Biron. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.
What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

* With all these. To love, to wealth, to pomp, Dumain is dead; but philosophy, in which he lives, includes them all.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's godlike recompense.

Biron. Come on then, I will swear to study so,

To know the thing I am forbid to know :

As thus,—To study where I well may dine,

When I to fast expressly am forbid ;<sup>a</sup>

Or study where to meet some mistress fine,

When mistresses from common sense are hid :

Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,

Study to break it, and not break my troth.

If study's gain be thus, and this be so,

Study knows that which yet it doth not know :

Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say, no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Biron. Why, all delights are vain ; and that most vain,

Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain :

As, painfully to pore upon a book,

To seek the light of truth ; while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look :

Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile :

So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,

Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.

Study me how to please the eye indeed,

By fixing it upon a fairer eye ;

Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,

And give him light that it was blinded by.

Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,

That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks ;

Small have continual plodders ever won,

Save base authority from other's books.

These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,

That give a name to every fixed star,

Have no more profit of their shining nights,

Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.

Too much to know is, to know nought but fame ;

And every godfather can give a name.

King. How well he 's read, to reason against reading !

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding !

Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a breeding.

Dum. How follows that ?

Biron. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Biron. Something then in rhyme.

King. Biron is like an envious sneaping frost,

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Biron. Well, say I am ; why should proud summer boast,

Before the birds have any cause to sing ?

Why should I joy in any abortive birth ?

At Christmas I no more desire a rose,

Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows ;

But like of each thing that in season grows.

So you, to study now it is too late,

Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out ; go home, Biron ; adieu !

Biron. No, my good lord ; I have sworn to stay with
you :

And, though I have for barbarism spoke more,

Than for that angel knowledge you can say ;

Yet, confident I 'll keep what I have sworn,

And hide the penance of each three years' day,

Give me the paper,—let me read the same ;

And to the strictest decrees I 'll write my name.

<sup>a</sup> Forbid was a very ancient mode of making bid more emphatical. Biron will study to know what he is forbid to know ; he sees here forbid in its common acceptation. But he is expressly for-bid to fast—expressly bid to fast ; and he will receive the word as if he were forbidden—bid from fasting.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame !

Biron. [Reads.]

Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court—

Hath this been proclaim'd ?

Long. Four days ago.

Biron. Let's see the penalty. [Reads.]

—On pain of losing her tongue.—

Who devis'd this penalty ?

Long. Marry, that did I.

Biron. Sweet lord, and why ?

Long. To fright them hence with that dread per

Biron. A dangerous law against gentility. [R.

Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman wit' term of three years, he shall endure such public shame rest of the court shall possibly devise.—

This article, my liege, yourself must break ;

For, well you know, here comes in embassy

The French king's daughter, with yourself to speak,—

A maid of grace, and complete majesty,—

About surrender-up of Aquitain

To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father :

Therefore this article is made in vain,

Or vainly comes th' admired princess hither.

King. What say you, lords ? why, this was quite forgot.

Biron. So study evermore is over-shot ;

While it doth study to have what it would,

It doth forget to do the thing it should :

And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,

'T is won, as towns with fire ; so won, so lost.

King. We must, of force, dispense with this decree ;

She must lie<sup>a</sup> here on mere necessity.

Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn

Three thousand times within this three years' space :

For every man with his affects is born ;

Not by might master'd, but by special grace.

If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,

I am forsworn on mere necessity.—

So to the laws at large I write my name : [Subscribes.

And he that breaks them in the least degree

Stands in attainder of eternal shame :

Suggestions<sup>b</sup> are to others, as to me ;

But, I believe, although I seem so loth,

I am the last that will last keep his oath.

But is there no quick recreation granted ?

King. Ay, that there is : our court, you know, is haunted

With a refined traveller of Spain ;

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,

That hath a mint of phrases in his brain :

One who the music of his own vain tongue

Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony ;

A man of complements,<sup>c</sup> whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their mutiny :

This child of fancy, that Armado hight,

For interim to our studies, shall relate,

In high-born words, the worth of many a knight

From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I ;

But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,

And I will use him for my minstrelsy.

Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight,

A man of fire-new<sup>d</sup> words, fashion's own knight.

Long. Costard the swain, and he, shall be our sport ;

And, so to study, three years is but short.

<sup>c</sup> Complements—a man versed in ceremonial distinctions, is punctilious—a man who brings forms to decide the matter between right and wrong.

<sup>d</sup> Fire-new and bran new—that is, brand-new—new off the trous—have each the same origin.

Enter DULL, with a letter, and COSTARD.

Dull. Which is the duke's own person?

Biron. This fellow. What wouldst?

Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's thorough: but I would see his own person in his and blood.

Biron. This is he.

Dull. Signior Arme—Arme—commends you. There's villainy abroad: this letter will tell you more.

Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Biron. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!

Biron. To hear? or forbear hearing?

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both.

Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Biron. In what manner?

Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those times: I was seen with her in the manor-house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman: for the form,—in some form.

Biron. For the following, sir?

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction: And God defend the right!

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Biron. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [Reads.]

"Gent deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Noxzur, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering patron.—

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King.

* So it is—

Cost. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so.

King. Peace!

Cost.—be to me, and every man that dares not fight!

King. No words!

Cost.—of other men's secrets, I beseech you.

King.

"So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-oppressing linnet to the most wholesome physician of thy health, giving sir; and, as I am a gentleman, I mean myself to walk. The time when! About the sixth hour, when birds most traze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper. So much for the time when: Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon: it is yelped thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that obscene and most pressurous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the blue-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or smolest: But to the place where.—It standeth north-west and by east from the west corner of thy curious-laid garden.—There did I see that low-spirited swain, that has mischief of thy mirth.

Cost. Me?

King.

—"that unletter'd small-knowing soul.

* Thorough—thirldorough, a peace-officer.

† Biron. The houses here mentioned is the heaven of the ancient stage—the covering, or internal roof. The "high words" expected in Armado's letter were associated with "a low heaven," as the ranting heroes of the early tragedy mouthed their lofty language beneath a very humble roof.

‡ Manner. A thief was taken with the manner when he was taken with the thing stolen—had haberd, having in the hand.

Cost. Me?

King.

—"that shallow vasaal,

Cost. Still me?

King.

—"which, as I remember, hight Costard,

Cost. O me!

King.

—"sorted, and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with—with,—O with—but with this I passion to say wherewith,

Cost. With a wench.

King.

—"with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I (as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Antony Dull; a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.

Dull. Me, an't shall please you; I am Antony Dull.

King.

"For Jaquenetta, (so is the weaker vessel called, which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain,) I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO."

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment, to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir; I was taken with a damosel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damosel.

Cost. This was no damosel neither, sir; she was a virgin.

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed virgin.

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity; I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir.

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence: You shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And don Armado shall be your keeper.—

My lord Biron, see him deliver'd o'er.—

And go we, lords, to put in practice that

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.—

[Exeunt KING, LONGVILLE, and DUMAIN.]

Biron. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat,

These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.—

Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again, and until then, Sit thee down, sorrow! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the same.

Armado's House.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing dear imp.

Moth. No, no; O Lord, sir, no.

* Imp, in our old language, is a graft, a snoot;—and thence applied to a child.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir; I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little: Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What? that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say, thou art quick in answers: Thou heat'st my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. He speaks the mere contrary, crosses<sup>a</sup> love not him. [Aside.]

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fits the spirit of a lapster.

Moth. You are a gentleman, and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both; they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Moth. Which the base vulgar call, three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now here's three studied, ere you'll thrice wink: and how easy it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. To prove you a cipher. [Aside.]

Arm. I will hereupon confess, I am in love: and, as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised courtesy. I think scorn to sigh; methinks, I should outswear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: What great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules!—More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Sampson, master; he was a man of good carriage, great carriage; for he carried the town-gates on his back, like a porter: and he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Sampson! strong-jointed Sampson! I do excel thee in my rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too,—Who was Sampson's love, my dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two; or one be four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

<sup>a</sup> Crosser. A cross is a coin.

Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir: and the best of them too.

Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks, Sampson had small reason for it. He, surely, affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir; for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Moth. Most maculate<sup>a</sup> thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

Moth. My father's wit, and my mother's tongue, assist me.

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty, and pathetic!

Moth. If she be made of white and red,

Her faults will ne'er be known;

For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,

And fears by pale-white shown:

Then, if she fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know;

For still her cheeks possess the same,

Which native she doth owe.<sup>b</sup>

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since: but, I think, now 't is not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing, nor the tune.

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard; she deserves well.

Moth. To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master. [Aside.]

Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.

Moth. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing.

Moth. Forbear till this company be past

Enter DULL, COSTARD, and JAQUENETTA.

Dull. Sir, the duke's pleasure is that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance; but a' must fast three days a-week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman.<sup>c</sup> Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing.—Maid.

Jaq. Man.

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Jaq. That's hereby.<sup>d</sup>

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jaq. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jaq. With that face?<sup>e</sup>

Arm. I love thee.

Jaq. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Jaq. Fair weather after you!

Dull. Come, Jaquenetta, away. [Ex. DULL and JAQ.]

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

<sup>e</sup> "With that face" was a vulgar idiomatic expression even in the time of Fielding, who says he took it. "Veilains, from very polite conversation."

Ans. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave; away.

Car. Let me not be pent up, sir; I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt be prison'd.

Car. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

Moth. What shall some see?

Car. Nay, nothing, master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be silent in their words; and therefore, I will say nothing: I thank God, I have a little patience as another man; and, therefore, I can be quiet.

[Exeunt MOTH and COSTARD.]

Ans. I do affect* the very ground, which is base, vice her shoe, which is base, guided by her foot, which is base, doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falsehood) if I love: And how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil: there is no evil angel but love. Yet Sampson was so tempted; and he had an excellent strength: yet was Solomon so seduced; and he had a very good wit. Cupid's buttshaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for, I am sure, I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio. [Exit.]

ACT II

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance.

Enter the PRINCESS OF FRANCE, ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, BOYET, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest<sup>b</sup> spirits;

Consider who the king your father sends;
To whom he sends; and what's his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem,
To parley with the sole inheritor

Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre: the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitain; a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As Nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,

Needs not the painted flourish of your praise;
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,
Not utter'd<sup>c</sup> by base sale of chapmen's<sup>d</sup> tongues:
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker,—Good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Behold noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall out-wear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to us seemeth it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor:
Tell him, the daughter of the king of France,
On serious business, craving quick despatch,
Importunes personal conference with his grace.
Base, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go. [Exit.]

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.

Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are you-fellows with this virtuous duke?

* To affect is to incline towards, and thence, metaphorically, to love.

<sup>d</sup> Chapman was formerly a seller—a cheapman, from cheap, a market. But it was also used indifferently for seller and buyer: the bargainer on either side was a cheapman, chapman, or negotiator.

1 Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

Mar. I know him, madam; at a marriage feast,
Between lord Perigot and the beauteous heir
Of Jaques Falconbridge, solemniz'd
In Normandy, saw I this Longaville:
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss
(If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil)
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is 't so?

Mar. They say so most, that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.

Who are the rest?

Kath. The young Dumain, a well-accomplish'd<sup>e</sup> youth,

Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report,<sup>f</sup> to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: As I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never soent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit:
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest;
Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love?

That every one her own hath garnish'd

With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

Mar. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter BOYET.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord!

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;

And he and his competitors in oath

Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,

Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,

<sup>e</sup> Compared to his great worthiness.

He rather means to lodge you in the field,
(Like one that comes here to besiege his court,)
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre.

[The Ladies mask.]

Enter KING, LONGAVILLE, DUMAIN, BIRON, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.
Prin. Fair I give you back again; and welcome I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.
Prin. I will be welcome then; conduct me thither.
King. Hear me, dear lady, I have sworn an oath.
Prin. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.
King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.
Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.
Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise, Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance. I hear, your grace hath sworn-out housekeeping: 'T is deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord, And sin to break it: But pardon me, I am too sudden bold; To teach a teacher ill besemeth me. Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming, And suddenly resolve me in my suit. [Gives a paper.]

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.
Prin. You will the sooner, that I were away;
For you'll prove perjurd, if you make me stay.

Biron. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Biron. I know you did.
Ros. How needless was it then to ask the question!

Biron. You must not be so quick.
Ros. 'T is long of you that spur me with such questions.

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 't will tire.
Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron. What time o' day?
Ros. The hour that fools should ask.
Biron. Now fair befall your mask!
Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!
Biron. And send you many lovers!
Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Biron. Nay, then will I be gone.
King. Madam, your father here doth intimate The payment of a hundred thousand crowns; Being but the one half of an entire sum, Disbursed by my father in his wars. But say, that he, or we, (as neither have,) Receiv'd that sum; yet there remains unpaid A hundred thousand more; in surety of the which, One part of Aquitaine is bound to us, Although not valued to the money's worth. If then the king your father will restore But that one half which is unsatisfied, We will give up our right in Aquitaine, And hold fair friendship with his majesty. But that, it seems, he little purposeth, For here he doth demand to have repaid An hundred thousand crowns; and not demands, On payment of a hundred thousand crowns, To have his title live in Aquitaine; Which we much rather had depart withal, And have the money by our father lent, Than Aquitaine so gelded as it is.

Dear princess, were not his requests so far From reason's yielding, your fair self should make * Long of you—along of you, through you.

A yielding, 'gainst some reason, in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again.

Prin. You do the king my father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseemingly to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

King. I do protest, I never heard of it;
And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitaine.

Prin. We arrest your word:—
Boyet, you can produce acquittances,
For such a sum, from special officers
Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.
Boyet. So please your grace, the packet is not come,
Where that and other specialties are bound;
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which interview,
All liberal reason I will yield unto.

Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand
As honour, without breach of honour, may Make tender of to thy true worthiness:
You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied farther harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:
To-morrow we shall visit you again.

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace!
King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place!

[Exeunt KING and his Train.]
Biron. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.
Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Biron. I would you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Biron. Sick at the heart.

Ros. Alack, let it bleed.

Biron. Would that do it good?

Ros. My physic says, ay.

Biron. Will you prick 't with your eye?

Ros. No poynt<sup>b</sup> with my knife.

Biron. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Biron. I cannot stay thanksgiving. [Retiring.]

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word: What lady is that same?

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her name.

Dum. A gallant lady! Monsieur, fare you well.

[Exit.]
Long. I beseech you a word: What is she in the white?

Boyet. A woman sometimes, if you saw her in the light.

Long. Perchance, light in the light: I desire her name.

Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to desire that were a shame.

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard.

Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended:

She is an heir of Falconbridge.

Long. Nay, my choler is ended.

She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be. [Exit LONG.]

Biron. What's her name, in the cap?

Boyet. Katharine, by good hap.

Biron. Is she wedded, or no?

Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.

Biron. You are welcome, sir; adieu!

Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you.

[Exit BIRON.—Ladies unmask.]

* The Princess = to be lodged, according to her rank, without the gates, although denied a farther advance—lodgment—in the King's house.

<sup>b</sup> No poynt—the double negative of the French, non point.

Mar. That last is Biron, the merry madcap lord ;
Not a word with him but a jest.
Boyet. And every jest but a word.
Prin. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boyet. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board.
Mar. Two hot sheeps, marry !
Boyet. And wherefore not ships ?
No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.
Mar. You sheep, and I pasture : Shall that finish the jest ?
Boyet. So you grant pasture for me.
Mar. Not so, gentle beast ;
My lips are no common, though several they be.
Boyet. Belonging to whom ?
Mar. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be jangling ; but, gentles, agree :
This civil war of wits were much better us'd
On Navarre and his book-men ; for here 't is abus'd.
Boyet. If my observation, (which very seldom lies,)
By the heart's still rhetoric, disclosed with eyes,
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
Prin. With what ?
Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle, affected.
Prin. Your reason.
Boyet. Why, all his behaviours do make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire :
His heart, like an agate, with your print impressed,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed :

His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be ;
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair :
Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy ;
Who, tend'ring their own worth, from whence they were glass'd,
Did point out to buy them, along as you pass'd.
His face's own margent did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes :
I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
Prin. Come, to our pavilion : Boyet is dispos'd—
Boyet. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclos'd :
I only have made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speakest skilfully.
Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.
Ros. Then was Venus like her mother ; for her father is but grim.
Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches ?
Mar. No.
Boyet. What, then, do you see ?
Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.
Boyet. You are too hard for me. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Warble, child ; make passionate my sense of hearing.
Moth. Concolinel — [Singing.]
Arm. Sweet air ! Go, tenderness of years ! take this boy, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither ; I must employ him in a letter to my love.
Moth. Will you win your love with a French brawl ?
Arm. How meanest thou ? brawling in French ?
Moth. No, my complete master : but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids ; sigh a note, and sing a note ; sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love ; sometime through the nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love ; with your hat, perchance-like, o'er the shop of your eyes ; with your arms crossed on your thin belly-doublet, like a rabbit on a spit ; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting ; and keep not too long in one tune, but a nip and away : These are complements, these are lemons ; these betray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these ; and make them men of note, (do you note, men ?) that most are affected to these.
Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience ?
Moth. By my penny of observation.
Arm. But O,—but O—
Moth. —the hobby-horse is forgot.
Arm. Callest thou my love, hobby-horse ?
Moth. No, master ; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have you forgot your love ?
Arm. Almost I had.
Moth. Negligent student ! learn her by heart.
Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.
Moth. And out of heart, master : all those three I will prove.
Arm. What wilt thou prove ?

Moth. A man, if I live ; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant : By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her : in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her : and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.
Arm. I am all these three.
Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.
Arm. Fetch hither the swain ; he must carry me a letter.
Moth. A message well sympathized ; a horse to be embassador for an ass !
Arm. Ha, ha ! what sayest thou ?
Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited : But I go.
Arm. The way is but short ; away.
Moth. As swift as lead, sir.
Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious ?
Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow ?
Moth. Minimè, honest master ; or rather, master, no.
Arm. I say, lead is slow.
Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so :
Is that lead slow which is fired from a gun ?
Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric !
He reputes me a cannon ; and the bullet, that 's he :—
I shoot thee at the swain.
Moth. Thump, then, and I flee. [Exit.]
Arm. A most acute juvenal ; voluble and free of grace !
By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face :
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is return'd.
Re-enter MOTH and COSTARD.
Moth. A wonder, master ; here 's a Costard broken in a shin.
Arm. Some enigma, some riddle : come,—thy Tenvoy ;—begin.
Cost. No egma, no riddle, no Tenvoy ; no salve

in them all, sir: O sir, plantain, a plain plantain; no Fenoy, no Fenoy, no salve, sir, but a plantain!

Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling; O, pardon me, my stars! Both the inconsiderate take salve for Fenoy, and the word Fenoy for a salve!

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not Fenoy a salve?

Arm. No, page; it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain

Some obscure precedence that hath before been said. I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

There 's the moral: Now the Fenoy.

Moth. I will add the Fenoy; say the moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my Fenoy.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three:

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good Fenoy, ending in the goose; would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that 's fat:

Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be fat.— To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose:

Let me see a fat Fenoy; ay, that 's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither: How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain: Thus came your argument on;

Then the boy's fat Fenoy, the goose that you bought, And he ended the market.

Arm. But tell me: how was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you some day.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth; I will speak that to thee.

I challenge nothing out that was saidly within, You may be honest, and I broke my shin.

Arm. Will you talk no more of this matter?

Cost. Will you be more kind on the subject?

Arm. Speak Costard; I will be more so to you.

Cost. It makes me to cry Fainest; I shall some time or other curse this.

Arm. If you will, say so; I will be more so to you.

Cost. I will say so; I will be more so to you.

Arm. I will be more so to you.

Cost. I will be more so to you.

Arm. I will be more so to you.

Cost. I will be more so to you.

Arm. I will be more so to you.

Cost. I will be more so to you.

Arm. I will be more so to you.

inable? a penny:—No. I'll give you a remuneration: why, it carries it.—Remuneration.—why, it is a faire name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter BIRON.

Biron. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, halfpenny farthing.

Biron. O, why then, three-farthings-worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship: God be with you!

Biron. O, stay, slave; I must employ thee:

As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave, Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Biron. O, this afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir: Fare you well.

Biron. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Biron. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:—

The princess comes to hunt here in the park, And in her train there is a gentle lady;

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name, And Rosaline they call her: ask for her;

And to her white hand see thou do commend This seal'd-up counsel. There 's thy gerdon; go.

[Gives him money.]

Cost. Gerdon.—O sweet garden! better than remuneration; eleven-pence farthing better: Most sweet garden!—I will do it, sir, in print.—Gerdon—remuneration.

[Exit.]

Biron. O!—And I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh; A critic; nay, a night-watch constable;

A domineering psalnt o'er the boy, Than whom no mortal so magnificent!

This wimpled,* whining, putlibal, wayward boy; This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;

Regent of loves-rhymes, lord of foli'd arms, The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,

Liege of all letterers and malcontents, Dread prince of plackets, king of cedgpieces,

Sole imperator, and great general, Of trotting paravers? O my little heart!—

And I to be a corporal of his band!

And wear his colours like a turnip's leaf!

What! I love! I love! I seek a wife!

A woman that is like a German cock, Still a repairing, and out of frame;

And never going a pace with a warlike, Skulking, and a dollar's way with a single!

Nay, to be married to such a worst of all; And among a hundred to be the worst of all;

A wife that is like a German cock, Still a repairing, and out of frame;

And never going a pace with a warlike, Skulking, and a dollar's way with a single!

Nay, to be married to such a worst of all; And among a hundred to be the worst of all;

A wife that is like a German cock, Still a repairing, and out of frame;

And never going a pace with a warlike, Skulking, and a dollar's way with a single!

Nay, to be married to such a worst of all; And among a hundred to be the worst of all;

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.

Enter the PRINCESS, ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, BOYET, LORDS, ATTENDANTS, and a Forester.

Prin. Was that the king, that spur'd his horse so hard
Against the steep uprising of the hill?

Boyet. I know not; but, I think, it was not he.

Prin. Whoe'er he was, he show'd a mounting mind.

Well, lords, to-day we shall have our despatch;

On Saturday we will return to France.—

Then, Forester, my friend, where is the bush

That we must stand and play the murderer in?*

For. Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;

A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.

Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,

And thereupon thou speak'st, the fairest shoot.

For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.

Prin. What, what! first praise me, and then again say no!

O short-liv'd pride! Not fair? alack for woe!

For. Yes, madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now;

When fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.

Then, good my glass,<sup>b</sup> take this for telling true;

[Giving him money.]
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.

For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.

O honey in fair, fit for these days!

A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.—

But come, the bow:—Now mercy goes to kill,

And shooting well is then accounted ill.

Then will I save my credit in the shoot:

Not wounding, pity would not let me do 't;

If wounding, then it was to show my skill,

That more for praise, than purpose, meant to kill.

And, out of question, so it is sometimes;

Gleety grows guilty of detested crimes;

When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part,

We bend to that the working of the heart:

As I, for praise alone, now seek to spill

The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.

Boyet. Do not curse<sup>c</sup> wives hold that self-sovereignty<sup>d</sup>

Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be

Leeds o'er their lords?

Prin. Only for praise: and praise we may afford

To any lady that subdues a lord.

Enter COSTARD.

Boyet. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.

Cost. God dig-you-den<sup>e</sup> all! Pray you, which is the best lady?

Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.

Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?

Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.

Cost. The thickest, and the tallest! it is so; truth is truth.

As your waist, mistress, were as slender as my wit,

One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit.

Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.

* Royal and noble ladies. In the days of Elizabeth, delighted in the somewhat unrefined sport of shooting deer with a cross-bow.

<sup>d</sup> Self-sovereignty—used in the same way as self-sufficiency;—in a sovereignty over themselves, but in themselves.

Prin. What 's your will, sir? what 's your will?

Cost. I have a letter from monsieur Biron, to one lady Rosaline.

Prin. O, thy letter, thy letter; he 's a good friend of mine:

Stand aside, good bearer.—Boyet, you can carve;

Break up this capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serve.—

This letter is mistook, it importeth none here;

It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, I swear:

Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet. [Reads.]

"By Heaven, that thou art fair is most infallible; true, that thou artauteous; truth itself, that thou art lovely; More fairer than fair, beautiful thanauteous, truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroical vassal! The magnanimous and most illustre king Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon; and he it was that might rightly say, venis, vidi, vici; which to annotanize<sup>a</sup> in the vulgar, (O base and obscure vulgar!) videlicet, he came, saw, and overcame: he came, one; saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? the king; Why did he come? to see; Why did he see? to overcome: To whom came he? to the beggar; What saw he? the beggar; Who overcame he? the beggar: The conclusion is victory; On whose side? the king's: the captive is enrich'd; On whose side? the beggar's: The catastrophe is a nuptial; on whose side? the king's?—no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king; for so stands the comparison: thou the beggar; for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may: Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will: What shalt thou exchange for rags? robes; For titles, titles; For thyself, me. Thus, expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Thine, in the dearest design of industry,
DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar

'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey;

Submissive fall his princely feet before,

And he from forage will incline to play:

But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?

Food for his rage, repasture for his den.

Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

What vane? what weather-cock? did you ever hear better?

Boyet. I am much deceived, but I remember the style.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it ere-while.

Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;

A phantasm, a Monarcho,<sup>b</sup> and one that makes sport

To the prince, and his book-mates.

Prin. Thou, fellow, a word:

Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord.

Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.

Prin. From which lord, to which lady?

Cost. From my lord Biron, a good master of mine,

To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this; 't will be thine another day.

[Exeunt PRINCESS and TRAIN.]

Boyet. Who is the shooter? who is the shooter?

<sup>a</sup> Annotanize is evidently a pedantic form of annotate; and we willingly restore the coined word, which has been modernized into anatomize.

<sup>b</sup> This allusion is to a mad Italian, commonly called the monarch, whose epitaph, or description, was written by Churchyard, in 1580. He believed that he was sovereign of the world.

Ros. Shall I teach you to know?
 Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.
 Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.
 Finely put off!
 Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou marry,
 Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry.
 Finely put on!
 Ros. Well, then, I am the shooter.
 Boyet. And who is your deer?
 Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come not near.
 Finely put on, indeed!—
 Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.
 Boyet. But she herself is hit lower: Have I hit her
 now?
 Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?
 Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.
 Ros. [Singing.]—
 Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it.
 Thou canst not hit it, my good man.
 Boyet. An I cannot, cannot, cannot.
 An I cannot, another can.

[Exeunt ROS. and KATH.]
 Cost. By my troth, most pleasant! how both did fit it!
 Mar. A mark marvellous well shot; for they both did hit it.
 Boyet. A mark! O, mark but that mark! A mark, says my lady!
 Let the mark have a prick in 't to mete at, if it may be.
 Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! I' faith your hand is out.
 Cost. Indeed, a' must shoot nearer, or he 'll ne'er hit the clout.
 Boyet. An if my hand be out, then, belike your hand is in.
 Cost. Then will she get the upshot by cleaving the pin.
 Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily, your lips grow foul.
 Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir; challenge her to bowl.
 Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. [Exeunt BOYET and MARIA.]
 Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown!
 Lord, Lord! how the ladies and I have put him down!
 O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar wit!
 When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were,
 so fit.
 Armatho o' the one side,—O, a most dainty man!
 To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan!
 To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a' will swear!—
 And his page o' t' other side, that handful of wit!
 Ah, Heavens, it is a most pathological nit!
 Sola, sola! [Shouting within. Exit COST., running.]

SCENE II.—The same.

[Enter HOLOFERNES, SIR NATHANIEL, and DULL.] Nath. Very reverent sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.
 Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis,—in blood; ripe as a pomewater,<sup>a</sup> who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of coelo,—the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab, on the face of terra,—the soil,
 the land, the earth.
 Nath. Truly, master Holofernes, the epithets are <sup>a</sup> Pomewater—a species of apple.

sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: But, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.
 Dull. 'T was not a haud credo; 't was a pricket.<sup>a</sup> Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were in via, in way, of explication;
facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my haud credo for a deer.

Dull. I said, the deer was not a haud credo; 't was a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!—O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts;
 And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be

(Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts that do fructify in us more than he.

For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet,
 or a fool,

So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:

But, omne bene, say I; being of an old father's mind,
 Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind

Dull. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wit,

What was a month old at Cain's birth, that 's not five weeks old as yet?

Hol. Dictynna, good man Dull; Dictynna, good man Dull.

Dull. What is Dictynna?
 Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old, when Adam was no more;

And raught<sup>b</sup> not to five weeks, when he came to fivescore.
 The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'T is true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the pollution holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old: and I say, beside, that 't was a pricket that the princess killed.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I have called the deer the princess killed, a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter;<sup>c</sup> for it argues facility.

The praiseful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing
 pricket;

Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The dogs did yell; put I to sore, then sore jumps from thicket;

Or pricket, sore, or else sore; the people fall a hooting.
 If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sores;<sup>d</sup> O sore L!

Of one sore I an hundred make, by adding but one more L.
 Nath. A rare talent!

Dull. If a talent be a claw,<sup>e</sup> look how he claws him with a talent.

<sup>a</sup> Pricket. The buck acquires a new name every year as he approaches to maturity. The first year he is a fawn; the second, a pricket; the third, a scroell; the fourth, a weate;
 the fifth, a buck of the first head; the sixth, a complete buck.

<sup>b</sup> Raught—reached.

 fifty.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions: these are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pis mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion: But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you; and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

Hol. Moherecle, if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them: But, vir sapiit qui pauca loquitur. A good feminine saluteth us.

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jaq. God give you good morrow, master person.*

Hol. Master person,—quasi pers-on. And if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hog'shead.

Hol. Of piercing a hog'shead! a good lustre of connect in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 't is pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good master parson, be so good as read me this letter; it was given me by Costard, and sent me from san Armatho; I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fuante, precor gelidâ quando pecus omne sub umbra Ruminat,—and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan!<sup>b</sup> I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

—Vinegia, Vinegia,

Chi non te vede, ei non te pregia.<sup>c</sup>

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not.—Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa.<sup>d</sup>—Under janson, sir, what are the contents? Or, rather, as Horace says in his—What, my soul, verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a verse; Lege, domine.

Nath.

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd!

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove;

Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book these eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend:

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend:

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;

(Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:)

Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder.

Which, not to anger bent, is music, and sweet fire.

O celestial as thou art, oh pardon, love, this wrong!

That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!

Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canzonet. Here are only unlearn'd ratiſies; but, for the elegancy, facility, and golden evidence of poesy, carot. Ovidius Naso was the man; and why, indeed, Naso; but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention?

* Master person. The derivation of person was, perhaps, commonly understood in Shakspeare's time, and person and pers were used indifferently. Blackstone has explained the word: "A person, persona ecclesie, is one that hath full possession of all the rights of a parochial church. He is called person, because, by his person, the church, which is an invisible body, is represented."—Commentaries, b. 1.

Imitari is nothing: so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired horse his rider. But, damoiselle virgin, was this directed to you?

Jaq. Ay, sir, from one monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overglance the superscript. "To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous lady Rosaline." I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:

"Your ladyship's in all desired employment, BIRON."

Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it may concern much: Stay not thy compliment; I forgive thy duty; adieu!

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me.—Sir, God save your life!

Cost. Have with thee, my girl. [Ex. Cost. and Jaq.]

Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain father saith—

Hol. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear colourable colours. But, to return to the verses: Did they please you, sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where if, before repast, it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention: I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too: for society (saith the text) is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it. Sir, I do invite you too; you shall not say me nay: pauca verba.

Away; the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation.<sup>b</sup> [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the same.

Enter BIRON with a paper.

Biron. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursing myself: they have pitched a toil; I am toiling in a pitch; pitch that defiles; defile! a foul word. Well, Set thee down, sorrow! for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool. Well proved, wit! By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep: Well proved again o' my side! I will not love: if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O, but her eye,—by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By Heaven, I do love: and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already: the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in: Here comes one with a paper; God give him grace to groan. [Gets up into a tree.]

Enter the KING, with a paper.

King. Ah me!

Biron. [Aside.] Shot, by Heaven.—Proceed, sweet Cupid; thou hast thumped him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap:—In faith, secrets.—

* Tired—caparisoned; adorned with trappings.

<sup>b</sup> These lines are hexameters, and all the better for being very bad.

King. [Reads.]

So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not,
To those fresh morning drops upon the rose.
As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smot;<sup>a</sup>
The sight of dew that on my cheeks down flows:
Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright
Through the transparent bosom of the deep,
As doth thy face through tears of mine give light.
Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep;
No drop but as a coach doth carry thee,
Do but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will show:
But do not love thyself; thou thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O queen of queens, how far dost thou excel!
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.—

How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper;
Sweet leaves shade folly. Who is he comes here?

[Steps aside.]

Enter LONGAVILLE, with a paper.

What, Longaville! and reading! listen, ear.

Biron. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear!
[Aside.]

Long. Ah me! I am forsworn.

Biron. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers.<sup>b</sup> [Aside.]

King. In love, I hope: Sweet fellowship in shame!
[Aside.]

Biron. One drunkard loves another of the name.
[Aside.]

Long. Am I the first that have been perjurd so?

Biron. [Aside.] I could put thee in comfort; not by two, that I know:

Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner cap of society,
The shape of Love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move:
O sweet Maria, empress of my love!

These numbers will I tear and write in prose.

Biron. [Aside.] O, rhymes are guards<sup>c</sup> on wanton Cupid's hose:

Disfigure not his slop.<sup>d</sup>

Long. This same shall go.—[He reads the sonnet.]

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye
(Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument)
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but, I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Exhal'st this vapour vow; in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine,
If by me broke. What fool is not so wise,
To lose an oath to win a paradise?

Biron. [Aside.] This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity;

A green goose, a goddess: pure, pure idolatry.

God amend us, God amend! we are much out o' the way.

Enter DUMAIN, with a paper.

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay.
[Stepping aside.]

Biron. [Aside.] All hid, all hid, an old infant play:
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O Heavens, I have my wish;

Dumain transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!

Dum. O most divine Kate!

Biron. O most profane coxcomb! [Aside.]

<sup>a</sup> Smot—the old preterite of smote.
<sup>b</sup> The perjure—the perjurer—when exposed on the pillory wore "papers of perjury."

<sup>c</sup> Guards—the hems or boundaries of a garment; generally ornamented.

<sup>d</sup> Slop. A clothesman is still a slop-seller.

Dum. By Heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!

Biron. By earth, she is not, corporal: there you lie
[Aside.]

Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber coted.<sup>a</sup>

Biron. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.
[Aside.]

Dum. As upright as the cedar.

Biron. Stoop, I say;
Her shoulder is with child. [Aside.]

Dum. As fair as day.

Biron. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine. [Aside.]

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long. And I had mine! [Aside.]

King. And I mine too, good lord! [Aside.]

Biron. Amen, so I had mine: Is not that a good word? [Aside.]

Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.

Biron. A fever in your blood! why, then incision

Would let her out in saucers: Sweet misprision! [Aside.]

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.
[Aside.]

Dum. On a day, (alack the day!)
Love, whose mouth is ever May,
Spied a blossom, passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alack, my hand is sworn,
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack, for youth unmeet;
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee:
Thou for whom Jove would swear,
Juno but an Ethiopie were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love

This will I send; and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.

O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,

Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,

Would from my forehead wipe a perjurd note;

For none offend, where all alike do dote.

Long. Dumain, [advancing] thy love is far from charity,

That in love's grief desir'st society:

You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,

To be o'erheard, and taken napping so.

King. Come, sir, [advancing] you blush; as his your case is such;

You chide at him, offending twice as much:

You do not love Maria; Longaville

Did never sonnet for her sake compile;

Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart

His loving bosom, to keep down his heart.

I have been closely shrouded in this bush,

And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.

I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your passion;

Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion:

Ah me! says one; O Jove! the other cries;

One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:

You would for paradise break faith and troth; [To LONGAVILLE]

And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
[To DUMAIN]

What will Biron say, when that he shall hear

Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?

How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!

How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it!

For all the wealth that ever I did see,

I would not have him know so much by me

Coted—quoted.

n. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.—
 And my liege, I pray thee pardon me :

[Descends from the tree.

part, what grace hast thou, thus to reprove forms for loving, that art most in love ?
 How do make no coaches ; in your tears
 no certain princess that appears :
 not be perjur'd, 't is a hateful thing ;
 none but minstrels like of sonneting.
 you not asham'd ? nay, are you not,
 we of you, to be thus much o'ershot ?
 and his mote ; the king your mote did see ;
 beam do find in each of three.
 a scene of foolery have I seen,
 of groans, of sorrow, and of teen !
 with what strict patience have I sat,
 a king transformed to a gnat !
 great Hercules whipping a gig, profound Solomon tuning a jig,
 a pastor play at push-pin with the boys,
 Titus Timon laugh at idle toys !
 lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumain ?
 gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain ?
 here my liege's ? all about the breast :—
 He, ho !

t. Too bitter is thy jest.
 betray'd thus to thy over-view ?
 n. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you :
 I am honest ; I that hold it sin to ask the view I am engaged in ;
 stray'd, by keeping company with men like men, of strange inconstancy.
 shall you see me write a thing in rhyme ?
 or for Joan ? or spend a minute's time singing me ? When shall you hear that I raise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
 a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
 a limb ?—

p. Soft ; Whither away so fast ?
 a man, or a thief, that gallops so ?
 n. I post from love ; good lover, let me go.

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

God bless the king !
 f. What present hast thou there ?
 t. Some certain treason.

f. What makes treason here ?
 t. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

f. If it mar nothing neither,
 reason, and you, go in peace away together.

f. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read ;
 reason misdoubts it ; it was treason, he said.

f. Biron, read it over. [Giving him the letter.]
 hadst thou it ?

f. Of Costard.
 g. Where hadst thou it ?

f. Of dum Adramadio, dum Adramadio.
 g. How now ! what is in you ? why dost thou tear it ?

n. A toy, my liege, a toy ; your grace needs not fear it.

f. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

n. It is Biron's writing, and here is his name.
 [Picks up the pieces.]

n. Ah, you whoreson loggerhead, [to COSTARD] you were born to do me shame.—

n. My lord, guilty ; I confess, I confess.
 t. What ?

n. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess ;

like men, Biron appears to us to say—I keep company with men like men—men having the inconstancy of humanity.
 he is—preening ; tripping himself up as a bird trims its tail.

He, he, and you ; and you, my liege, and I,
 Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
 O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Biron. True, true ; we are four :—
 Will these turtles be gone ?

King. Hence, sirs ; away.

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

[Exeunt Cost. and Jaq.]

Biron. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us embrace !
 As true we are, as flesh and blood can be :

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face ;

Young blood doth not obey an old decree :

We cannot cross the cause why we are born ;

Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rent lines show some love of thine ?

Biron. Did they, quoth you ? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,

At the first opening of the gorgeous east,

Bows not his vassal head ; and, stricken blind,

Kisses the base ground with obedient breast ?

What peremptory eagle-sighted eye

Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,

That is not blinded by her majesty ?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd these
 now ?

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon ;

She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron :

O, but for my love, day would turn to night !

Of all complexions, the cull'd sovereignty

Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek ;

Where several worthies make one dignity ;

Where nothing wants, that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,—

Fie, painted rhetoric ! O, she needs it not :

To things of sale a seller's praise belongs ;

She passes praise : then praise too short doth blot.

A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,

Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye :

Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,

And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy

O, 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine !

King. By Heaven, thy love is black as ebony

Biron. Is ebony like her ? O wood divine !

A wife of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath ? where is a book ?

That I may swear, beauty doth beauty lack,

If that she learn not of her eye to look :

No face is fair, that is not full so black.

King. O paradox ! Black is the badge of hell,

The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night ;

And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,

It mourns, that painting, and usurping hair,

Should ravish doters with a false aspect ;

And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Her favour turns the fashion of the days ;

For native blood is counted painting now ;

And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,

Paints itself black to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her, are chimney-sweepers black.

Long. And, since her time, are colliers counted bright.

King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack

Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Biron. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
 For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'T were good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,
I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.
Biron. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.
King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.
Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.
Long. Look, here's thy love: my foot and her face see.
[Showing his shoe.]
Biron. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread!
Dum. O vile! then as she goes, what upward lies
The street should see as she walk'd over head.
King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?
Biron. O, nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.
King. Then leave this chat; and, good Biron, now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.
Dum. Ay, marry, there;—some flattery for this evil.
Long. O, some authority how to proceed;
Some tricks, some quilllets,* how to cheat the devil.
Dum. Some salve for perjury.
Biron. O, 't is more than need!—
Have at you then, affection's men at arms:
Consider, what you first did swear unto;—
To fast,—to study,—and to see no woman;—
Flat treason against the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young;
And abstinence engenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book:
Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look?
For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence,
Without the beauty of a woman's face?
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the academes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, universal plodding prisons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries;
As motion, and long-during action, tires
The sinewy vigour of the traveller.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes;
And study too, the causer of your vow:
For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are, our learning likewise is.
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
With ourselves,—
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O, we have made a vow to study, lords;
And in that vow we have forsworn our books;
For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,
In leaden contemplation, have found out
Such fiery numbers, as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;
And therefore finding barren practisers,
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil:

* Quillet and quodlibet each signify a fallacious subtlety—what you please—an argument without foundation.

But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain;
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power;
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye;
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd:
Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible,
Than are the tender horns of cockled snails:
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste:
For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as sphynx; as sweet, and musical,
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And, when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.*
Never durst poet touch a pen to write,
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs.
O, then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world;
Else, none at all in aught proves excellent:
Then fools you were these women to forswear;
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love;
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men;
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;
Or women's sake, by whom we men are men;
Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths:
It is religion to be thus forsworn:
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?
King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!
Biron. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords;
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.
Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these gloves by;
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?
King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.
Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;
Then, homeward, every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours,
Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.
Biron. Allons! Allons!—Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;
And justice always whirls in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn;
If so, our copper buys no better treasure. [Exeunt]

* When Love speaks, the responsive harmony of the voice & all the gods makes heaven drowsy.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Another part of the same.

Enter HOLOPERNES, SIR NATHANIEL, and DULL.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection,<sup>a</sup> audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intitled, nominated, or called, don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed,<sup>b</sup> his eye ambitious, his gait majestic, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical.<sup>c</sup> He is too picked,<sup>d</sup> too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fantastical phantasies, such insociable and point-devise<sup>e</sup> comparisons; such rackers of orthography, as to speak, last, fine, when he should say, doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt;—d, e, b, t; not d, e, t:—he depths a calf, canf; half, hauf; neighbour, vocatur, aisour; neigh, abbreviated, ne: This is abominable, (which he would call abominable,) it insinuateth me of insanity; Ne intelligis domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Læus Deo bene intelligo.

Hol. Bone!—bone, for bone: Priscian a little snatch'd; 't will serve.

Enter ARMADO, MOTHS, and COSTARD.

Nath. Videane quis venit!

Hol. Video et gaudeo.

Arm. Chirra!

Hol. Quare Chirra, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Math. They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

[To COSTARD aside.

Cost. O, they have lived long on the alms-basket of words! I marvel, thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinis:<sup>f</sup> thou art easier swallowed than a lap-dog.

Math. Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. Monsieur [to HOL.], are you not lettered?

Math. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book;—

What is a, b, spelt backward, with a horn on his head?

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Math. Ba, most silly sheep, with a horn.—You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Math. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them, a, e, i.—

Math. The sheep; the other two concludes it; o, u.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>f</sup> Taylor, the water poet, has given us a syllable more of this height of scholasticism—honorificabilitudinitatibus. But he has not equalled Rabelais, who has thus furnished the title of a book that might puzzle Petermaster Row—Astipericatanactoparagogogonophortheritosis.

<sup>g</sup> The poet asks who is the silly sheep—quis, quis? "The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them," says Moth; and the poet does repeat them—a, e, i; the other two clinches it.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit:<sup>h</sup> snip, snap, quick, and home; it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit.

Moth. Offer'd by a child to an old man; which is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip thy gig.

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy circum circa: A gig of a cuckold's horn!

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the Heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard! what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for unquem.

Arm. Arts-man, præambula; we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Hol. Or, mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the princess at her pavilion, in the posteriors of this day; which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, chose; sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend:—For what is inward between us, let it pass:—I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy:—I beseech thee, apparel thy head:—And among other importunate and most serious designs,—and of great import indeed, too;—but let that pass:—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder; and with his royal finger, thus, dally with my excrement, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable; some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass.—The very all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,—that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the nine worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance,—the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman,—before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the nine worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the great; the page, Hercules.

Arm. Pardon, sir, error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake! that is the way to make an offence gracious; though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the worthies?—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge* not, an antic. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport, away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the same. Before the Princess's Pavilion.

Enter the PRINCESS, KATHARINE, ROSALINE, and MARIA.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart, if fairings come thus plentifully in: A lady wall'd about with diamonds! Look you, what I have from the loving king.

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much love in rhyme, As would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper, Write on both sides of the leaf, margent and all; That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his godhead wax;<sup>b</sup> For he hath been five thousand years a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him; he kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy; And so she died: had she been light, like you, Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit, She might have been a grandam ere she died: And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light, by taking it in snuff; Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do; you do it still in the dark.

Kath. So do not you; for you are a light wench.

Ros. Indeed, I weigh not you; and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not,—O, that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason; for, Past care is still past cure.

Prin. Well bandied both; a set<sup>c</sup> of wit<sup>e</sup> well play'd. But, Rosaline, you have a favour too: Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew:

As if my face were but as fair as yours, My favour were as great; be witness this. Nay, I have verses too, I thank Biron:

Fadge. This word is from the Anglo-Saxon feg-an—to join—, and thence to fit, to agree.
Wax—to grow; as we say, the moon waxeth.
Set of wit. Set is a verb used at tennis.

The numbers true; and, were the numbring too, I were the fairest goddess on the ground; I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs. O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!

Prin. Anything like?

Ros. Much in the letters; nothing in the praise.

Prin. Beauteous as ick; a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Ros. 'Ware pencils! How? let me not die your debtor, My red dominical, my golden letter:<sup>a</sup> O that your face were not so full of O's!

Kath. A pox of that jest! and I beshrew all shrows!

Prin. But, Katharine, what was sent to you from fair Dumain?

Kath. Madam, this glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover, Some thousand verses of a faithful lover;

A huge translation of hypocrisy, Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.

Mar. This, and these pearls, to me sent Longaville; The letter is too long by half a mile.

Prin. I think no less: Dost thou not wish in heart, The chain were longer, and the letter short?

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

Prin. We are-wise girls to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.

That same Biron I'll torture ere I go. O, that I knew he were but in by the week!

How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek;

And wait the season, and observe the times,

And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes;

And shape his service wholly to my behests;

And make him proud to make me proud that jests!

So portent-like would I o'ersway his state,

That he should be my fool, and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,

As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd,

Hath wisdom's warrant, and the help of school;

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excess,

As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note,

As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;

Since all the power thereof it doth apply,

To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter BOYET.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter! Where's her grace?

Prin. Thy news, Boyet?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!—

Arm, wench, arm! encounters mounted are

Against your peace: Love doth approach disguis'd,

Armed in arguments; you'll be surpris'd:

Muster your wits; stand in your own defence;

Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Dennis to saint Cupid! What are they,

That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say.

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore,

I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour;

When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,

Toward that shade I might behold address'd

The king and his companions: warily

I stole into a neighbour thicket by,

And overheard what you shall overhear;

That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here.

* Rosaline, it appears, was a brunette; Katharine fair, perhaps red-haired, marked with small-pox. In the early alphabets for children, A was printed in red, B, as well as the remainder of the alphabet, in black; and thus the ladies just upon their complexions.

Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath comm'd his embassy;
Action, and accent, did they teach him there;
"Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear:"
And ever and anon they made a doubt,
Presence majestical would put him out;
"For," quoth the king, "an angel shalt thou see,
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously."
The boy replied, "An angel is not evil;
I should have fear'd her had she been a devil."
With that all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder;
Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.
One rubb'd his elbow, thus; and flier'd, and swore,
A better speech was never spoke before;
Another with his finger and his thumb,
Cried, "Via! we will do 't, come what will come:"
The third he caper'd, and cried, "All goes well;"
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.
With that, they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter, so profound,
That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?
Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus,— Like Muscovites, or Russians, as I guess.

Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance;
And every one his love-feat will advance
Unto his several mistress; which they 'll know
By favours several, which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd:—

For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd;
And not a man of them shall have the grace,
Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.

Held, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear,
And then the king will court thee for his dear;
Held, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine;
So shall Biron take me for Rosaline.—
And change your favours too; so shall your loves
Who contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.

Ros. Come on then; wear the favours most in sight.
Kath. But, in this changing, what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs:
They do it but in mocking merriment;
And mock for mock is only my intent.

Their several counsels they unbosom shall
To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal,
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to 't?
Prin. No; to the death we will not move a foot:
Not to their perm'd speech render we no grace:
But, while 't is spoke, each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and, I make no doubt,
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.
There's no such sport as sport by sport o'erthrown;
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game;
And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.

[Trumpets sound within.
The ladies mask.]

Boyet. The trumpet sounds; be mask'd, the maskers come.

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGVILLE, and DUMAIN, in Business habits and masked; MORN, Musicians, and Attendants.

Mask. "All hail the richest beauties on the earth!"
Biron. Beauties no richer than rich taffata. [Aside.]

Mask. "A holy parcel of the fairest dames,
[The ladies turn their backs to him.]
That ever turn'd their"—backs—"to mortal views!"

Biron. "Their eyes," villain, "their eyes!"
Moth. "That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!"
Out"—

Boyet. True; out, indeed.
Moth. "Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouch safe
Not to behold"—

Biron. "Once to behold," rogue.
Moth. "Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,"—
"With your sun-beamed eyes"—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet,
You were best call it, daughter-beamed eyes.
Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me
out.

Biron. Is this your perfectness? begone, you rogue!
Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet:

If they do speak our language, 't is our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:
Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.
Ros. What would they, say they?

Boyet. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.
Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.
Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.
King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,
To tread a measure with her on the grass.

Boyet. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so: ask them how many inches
Is in one mile: if they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told.

Boyet. If, to come hither, you have measur'd miles,
And many miles, the princess bids you tell,
How many inches do fill up one mile.

Biron. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps
Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Biron. We number nothing that we spend for you;
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without account.
Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!
Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine
(Those clouds remov'd) upon our watery cye.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;
Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.
King. Then, in our measure, vouchsafe but one change:
Thou bidd'st me beg; this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, music, then: nay, you must do it soon.
[Music plays.]

Not yet;—no dance:—thus change I like the moon.
King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?

Ros. You took the moon at full; but now she's changed.
King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.
The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.
King. But your legs should do it.
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by
chance,
We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands then?
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by
chance,
We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands then?
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by
chance,
We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands then?
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by

We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands then?
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by
chance,
We 'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

Ros. Only to part friends :—
Court'sy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure; be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Prize you yourselves: What buys your company?

Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so adieu;
Twice to your visor, and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private then.

King. I am best pleas'd with that.

[They converse apart.]

Biron. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is three.

Biron. Nay then, two treys (an if you grow so nice),
Metheglin, wort, and malmsey.—Well run, dice!
There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu!

Since you can cog,<sup>a</sup> I'll play no more with you.

Biron. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Biron. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin. Gall? bitter.

Biron. Therefore meet.

[They converse apart.]

Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?

Mar. Name it.

Dum. Fair lady,—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord,—
Take you that for your fair lady.

Dum. Please it you,

As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

[They converse apart.]

Kath. What, was your visor made without a tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.

Kath. O for your reason! quickly, sir; I long.

Long. You have a double tongue within your mask,
And would afford my speechless visor half.

Kath. Veal, quoth the Dutchman:—Is not veal a calf?

Long. A calf, fair lady?

Kath. No, a fair lord calf.

Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half:

Take all, and wean it; it may prove an ox.

Long. Look, how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks!

Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I die.

Kath. Bleat softly then, the butcher hears you cry.

[They converse apart.]

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the razor's edge invisible,

Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen;

Above the sense of sense: so sensible

Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings,

Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.

Ros. Not one word more, my maids; break off, break off.

Biron. By Heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff!

King. Farewell, mad wenches; you have simple wits.

[Exeunt KING, LORDS, MOTH, MUSIC, and ATTENDANTS.]

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovites.—

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd
out.

Ros. Well-liking wits<sup>b</sup> they have; gross, gross; fat, fat.

Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!

<sup>a</sup>Iron says, "Well run, dice!" The Princess says he can cog the dice is to load them—and thence, generally, to liking is used in the same sense in which the young of goats in Job are said to be in good-liking.

Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night?

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?

This pert Biron was out of countenance quite.

Ros. O! they were all in lamentable cases!

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Biron did swear himself out of all suit.

Mar. Dumain was at my service, and his sword:

No point, quoth I; my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart,

And trow you what he call'd me?

Prin. Qualm, perhaps.

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain<sup>c</sup> statute-caps<sup>d</sup>

But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.

Prin. And quick Biron hath plighted faith to me.

Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.

Mar. Dumain is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:

Immediately they will again be here

In their own shapes; for it can never be,

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?

Boyet. They will, they will, God knows,

And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:

Therefore, change favours; and, when they repair,

Blew like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.

Boyet. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud:

Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds,<sup>b</sup> or roses blown.

Prin. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do,

If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,

Let's mock them still, as well known, as disguis'd:

Let us complain to them what fools were here,

Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder what they were; and to what end

Their shallow shows, and prologue vilely penn'd,

And their rough carriage so ridiculous,

Should be presented at our tent to us.

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.

Prin. Whip to our tents, as roes run over land.

[Exeunt PRINCESS, ROS., KATH., and MARIA.]

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN,

in their proper habits.

King. Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?

Boyet. Gone to her tent: Please it your majesty,

Command me any service to her thither?

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord. [Exit.]

Biron. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons peas,

And utters it again when Jove doth please:

He is wit's peddler; and retails his wares

At wakes, and wassels, meetings, markets, fairs;

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve;

Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve:

He can carve too, and lisp: Why, this is he,

That kiss'd away his hand in courtesy;

This is the ape of forth, monsieur the nice,

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms; nay, he can sing

A mean most meanly;<sup>e</sup> and, in ushering,

<sup>a</sup> By an act of parliament of 1571 it was provided that all above the age of six years, except the nobility and other persons of degree, should, on sabbath-days and holidays, wear caps of wool, manufactured in England.

<sup>b</sup> To rail—to avale, to cause to fall down; the clouds open as the angels descend.

<sup>c</sup> A mean most meanly. The mean, in vocal music, is an intermediate part; a part—whether tenor, or second soprano, or contra-tenor—between the two extremes of highest and lowest.

Meed him who can : the ladies call him, sweet ;
The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet :
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To show his teeth as white as whales' bone ; *
And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.

King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,
That put Armado's page out of his part !

Enter the PRINCESS, ushered by BOYET ; ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, and Attendants.

Biron. See where it comes !—Behaviour, what wert
thou,

Till this man show'd thee ? and what art thou now ?

King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day !

Prin. Fair, in all hail, is foul, as I conceive.

King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you ; and purpose now

To lead you to our court : vouchsafe it then.

Prin. This field shall hold me ; and so hold your vow :

Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.

King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke ;

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Prin. You nick-name virtue : vice you should have spoke ;

For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.

Nor, by my maiden honour, yet as pure

As the unsullied lily, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not yield to be your house's guest :

So much I hate a breaking cause to be

Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.

King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord, it is not so, I swear ;

We have had pastimes here, and pleasant game ;

A crew of Russians left us but of late.

King. How, madam ? Russians ?

Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord ;

Tim gallants, full of courtship, and of state.

Ros. Madam, speak true :—It is not so, my lord ;

My lady, (to the manner of the days,) <sup>in</sup>

in courtesy, gives undeserving praise.

We four, indeed, confronted were with four

In Russian habit ; here they stay'd an hour,

And talk'd apace ; and in that hour, my lord,

They did not bless us with one happy word.

I dare not call them fools ; but this I think,

When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.

Biron. This jest is dry to me. Gentle sweet,

Your wit makes wise things foolish ; when we greet

With eyes best seeing heaven's fiery eye,

By light we lose light : Your capacity

Is of that nature, that to your huge store

Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye,—

Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty.

Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.

Ros. All the fool mine ?

Biron. I cannot give you less.

Ros. Which of the visors was it that you wore ?

Biron. Where ? when ? what visor ? why demand

you this ?

Ros. There, then, that visor ; that superfluous case,

That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.

King. We are desir'd : they 'll mock us now downright.

Dem. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.

* Whales' bone—the tooth of the walrus.

Prin. Amaz'd, my lord ? Why looks your highness sad ?

Ros. Help, hold his brows ! he 'll swoon ! Why look you pale ?—

Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

Biron. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.

Can any face of brass hold longer out ?—

Here stand I, lady ; dart thy skill at me ;

Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout ;

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance ;

Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit ;

And I will wish thee never more to dance,

Nor never more in Russian habit wait.

O ! never will I trust to speeches penn'd,

Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue ;

Nor never come in visor to my friend ;

Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song ;

Taffata phrases, silken terms precise,

Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,

Figures pedantical ; these summer-flies

Have blown me full of maggot ostentation :

I do forswear them : and I here protest,

By this white glove, (how white the hand God knows !)

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd

In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes ;

And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, la !—

My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.

Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.

Biron. Yet I have a trick

Of the old rage :—bear with me, I am sick ;

I 'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see ;—

Write " Lord have mercy on us," * on those three ;

They are infected, in their hearts it lies ;

They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes :

These lords are visited ; you are not free,

For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.

Biron. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undo us.

Ros. It is not so. For how can this be true,

That you stand forfeit, being those that sue ?

Biron. Peace ; for I will not have to do with you.

Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Biron. Speak for yourselves, my wit is at an end ;

King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression

Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd ?

King. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd ?

King. I was, fair madam.

Prin. When you then were here,

What did you whisper in your lady's ear ?

King. That more than all the world I did respect her

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject

her.

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace, peace, forbear ;

Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will : and therefore keep it :—Rosaline,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear ?

Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear

As precious eye-sight : and did value me

Above this world : adding thereto, moreover,

That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him ! the noble lord

Most honourably doth uphold his word.

King. What mean you, madam ? by my life, my troth,

I never swore this lady such an oath.

* Lord have mercy on us—the fearful inscription on houses visited with the plague.

Ros. By Heaven, you did: and to confirm it plain.
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith, and this, the princess I did give;
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.

Prin. Parlon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;
And lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear:—
What; will you have me, or your pearl again?

Biron. Neither of either; I remit both twain.
I see the trick on't:—Here was a consent,

(Knowing aforehand of our merriment.)

To dash it like a Christmas comedy:

Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,—

That smiles his cheek in years; and knows the trick

To make my lady laugh, when she's dispos'd—

Told our intents before: which once disclos'd,

The ladies did change favours; and then we,

Following the signs, woo'd but the sign of she.

Now, to our perjury to add more terror,

We are again forsworn: in will, and error.

Much upon this it is:—And might not you,

[To BOYET.

Forestal our sport, to make us thus untrue?

Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,<sup>a</sup>

And laugh upon the apple of her eye?

And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,

Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?

You put our page out: Go, you are allow'd;<sup>b</sup>

Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.

You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye,

Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily

Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.

Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace; I have done.

Enter COSTARD.

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.

Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know,

Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no.

Biron. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir, but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.

Biron. And three times thrice is nine.

Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir; I hope, it is not so:

You cannot beg us,<sup>c</sup> sir, I can assure you, sir; we know what we know;

I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—

Biron. Is not nine.

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know whereuntil it doth amount.

Biron. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.

Cost. O Lord, sir, it were a pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.

Biron. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount: for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man, in one poor man; Pompion the great, sir.

Biron. Art thou one of the worthies?

Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompion the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the worthy; but I am to stand for him.

Biron. Go bid them prepare.

Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care. [Exit COSTARD.

<sup>c</sup> Costard means to say we are not idiots. One of the most abominable corruptions of the feudal system of government was for the sovereign, who was the legal guardian of idiots, to grant the wardship of such an unhappy person to some favourite who bestowed him, granting with the idiot the right of using his pro-

King. Biron, they will shame us, let them not approach.

Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord: and 't is some policy

To have one show worse than the king's and his company.

King. I say, they shall not come.

Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule you
now:

That sport best pleases that doth least know how:

Where zeal strives to content, and the contents

Die in the zeal, of that which it presents

The form confounded makes most form in mirth;<sup>a</sup>

When great things labouring perish in their birth.

Biron. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter ARMADO.

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.

[ARMADO converses with the KING, and delivers him a paper.

Prin. Doth this man serve God?

Biron. Why ask you?

Prin. He speaks not like a man of God's making.

Arm. That's all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch:
for, I protest the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical;

too, too vain; too, too vain; But we will put it, as they say, to fortuna della guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal complement! [Exit ARMADO.

King. Here is like to be a good presence of worthies:
He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Machabæus.

And if these four worthies in their first show thrive,

These four will change habits, and present the other five.

Biron. There is five in the first show.

King. You are deceiv'd, 't is not so.

Biron. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:—

Abate a throw at novum;<sup>b</sup> and the whole world again
Cannot prick out five such, take each one in his vein.

King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

[Seats brought for the KING, PRINCESS, &c.

Pageant of the Nine Worthies.

Enter COSTARD, armed, for Pompey.

Cost. "I Pompey am,"—

Boyet. You lie, you are not he.

Cost. "I Pompey am,"—

Boyet. With libbard's<sup>c</sup> head on knee.

Biron. Well said, old mocker; I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. "I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big,"—
Dum. The great.

Cost. It is great, sir;—"Pompey surnam'd the great"
That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat:

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by
chance;

And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France."

If your ladyship would say, "Thanks, Pompey," I had done.

Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.

<sup>a</sup> We understand the reading thus:—Where zeal strives to give content, and the contents (things contained) die in the zeal, the form of that which zeal presents, being confounded, makes most form in mirth.

<sup>b</sup> Abate a throw. Novum, or quinquenove, was a game at dice, of which nine and five were the principal throws. Biron therefore says, Abate a throw—that is, leave out the nine—and the world cannot prick out five such.

Cost. 'T is not so much worth; but, I hope, I was perfect: I made a little fault in "great."

Biron. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best worthy.

Enter NATHANIEL, armed, for Alexander.

Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;

By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might;

My 'wutcherson plain declares that I am Alisander."

Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Biron. Your nose smells, no, in this, most tender-smelling knight.

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd: Proceed, good Alexander.

Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;"—

Boyet. Most true, 't is right; you were so, Alisander.

Biron. Pompey the great,—

Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

Biron. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

Cost. O, sir, [to NATH.] you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-ax sitting on a close stool, will be given to A-jax: he will be the ninth worthy. A conqueror, and afeard to speak!

Run away for shame, Alisander. [NATH. retires.]

There, an 't shall please you; a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed! He is a marvellous good neighbour, in sooth; and a very good lawyer: but, for Alisander, alas, you see how 't is;—a little o'erparted:—But there are worthies a coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter HOLOVERNES for Judas, and MORN for Hercules.

Hol. "Great Hercules is presented by this imp,

Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed comus;

And, when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,

Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus:

Quoniam, he seemeth in minority;

Ergo, I come with this apology."—

Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish. [Exit MORN.]

Hol. "Judas, I am,"—

Dum. A Judas!

Hol. Not, Iscariot, sir,—

"Judas, I am, cyeleped Machabæus."

Dum. Judas Machabæus clipt, is plain Judas.

Biron. A kissing traitor:—How art thou prov'd Judas?

Hol. "Judas, I am,"—

Dum. The more sname for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir?

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder.

Biron. Well follow'd: Judas was hang'd on an elder.<sup>b</sup>

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern-head.<sup>c</sup>

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pommel of Cæsar's falchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a flask.<sup>d</sup>

Biron. St. George's half-cheek in a brooch.

<sup>b</sup> The common tradition was that Judas hanged himself on an elder-tree.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer.

And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Biron. False: we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have out-faced them all.

Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Biron. For the ass to the Jude; give it him:—Jud-as, away!

Hol. This is not generous; not gentle; not humble.

Boyet. A light for monsieur Judas: it grows dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas, poor Machabæus, how hath he been baited!

Enter ARMADO, armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles; here comes Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

Dum. I think Hector was not so clean-timbered.

Long. His leg is too big for Hector.

Dum. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.

Biron. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He 's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. "The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gift,"—

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Biron. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven.

Arm. Peace!

"The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Iliou:

A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight, yea, From morn till night, out of his pavilion.

I am that flower,"—

Dum. That mint.

Long. That columbine.

Arm. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector 's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten; sweet clucks, beat not the bones of the buried: when he breathed, he was a man—but I will forward with my device: Sweet royalty, [to the PRINCESS] bestow on me the sense of hearing. [BIRON whispers COSTARD.]

Prin. Speak, brave Hector: we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Arm. "This Hector far surmounted Hannibal,"—

Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away: she 's quick; the child brags in her belly already; 't is yours.

Arm. Dost thou infamelize me among potentates? thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipped, for Jaquenetta that is quick by him; and hanged, for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey!

Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey!

Pompey the huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Biron. Pompey is moved :—More Ates, more Ates ; stir them on ! stir them on !

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in 's belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man ; I 'll slash ; I 'll do it by the sword :—I pray you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed worthies.

Cost. I 'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey !

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat ? What mean you ? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen, and soldiers, pardon me ; I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it ; Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for 't ?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt ; I go woolward for penance.<sup>a</sup>

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen : since when, I 'll be sworn, he wore none but a dishclout of Jaquenetta's ; and that 'a wears next his heart, for a favour.

Enter MERCADE.

Mer. God save you, madam !

Prin. Welcome, Mercade ;

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mer. I am sorry, madam ; for the news I bring is heavy in my tongue. The king, your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life.

Mer. Even so ; my tale is told.

Biron. Worthies, away ; the scene begins to cloud.

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath : I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier. [Ex. Worthies.]

King. How fares your majesty ?

Prin. Boyet, prepare ; I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so ; I do beseech you stay.

Prin. Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious lords, for all your fair endeavours ; and entreat, Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe In your rich wisdom, to excuse, or hide, The liberal opposition of our spirits : If over-boldly we have borne ourselves In the converse of breath, your gentleness Was guilty of it.—Farewell, worthy lord ! A heavy heart bears not a humble tongue : Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely form All causes to the purpose of his speed ; And often, at his very loose, decides That which long process could not arbitrate : And though the mourning brow of progeny Forbid the smiling courtesy of love, The holy suit which fain it would convince ; Yet, since love's argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it From what it purpos'd ; since, to wail friends lost, Is not by much so wholesome, profitable, As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not ; my griefs are double. Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the ears of grief ;—

—these badges understand the king.

—our sakes have we neglected time ;

—play with our oaths. Your beauty, ladies, wanting the shirt, so as to leave the woollen er coal next the skin.

Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours
Even to the opposed end of our intents :

And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—

As love is full of unbefitting strains :

All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain ;

Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,

Full of stray shapes, of habits, and of forms,

Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll

To every varied object in his glance :

Which party-coated presence of loose love

Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,

Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities,

Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,

Suggested us to make : Therefore, ladies,

Our love being yours, the error that love makes

Is likewise yours : we to ourselves prove false,

By being once false for ever to be true

To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you :

And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,

Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters, full of love ;

Your favours, the ambassadors of love ;

And, in our maiden council, rated them

At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,

As bombast,<sup>a</sup> and as lining to the time :

But more devout than this, in our respects,

Have we not been ; and therefore met your loves

In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest.

Long. So did our looks.

Ros. We did not quote them so

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,

Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short

To make a world-without-end bargain in :

No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd much,

Full of dear guiltiness ; and, therefore this,—

If for my love (as there is no such cause)

You will do aught, this shall you do for me :

Your oath I will not trust ; but go with speed

To some forlorn and naked hermitage,

Remote from all the pleasures of the world ;

There stay, until the twelve celestial signs

Have brought about their annual reckoning :

If this austere insociable life

Change not your offer made in heat of blood ;

If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thin weeds,

Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,

But that it bear this trial, and last love ;

Then, at the expiration of the year,

Come challenge, challenge me by these deserts,

And, by this virgin palm, now kissing thine,

I will be thine ; and, till that instant, shut

My woeful self up in a mourning house ;

Raining the tears of lamentation

For the remembrance of my father's death.

If this thou do deny, let our hands part ;

Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,

To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,

The sudden hand of death close up mine eye !

Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast.

Biron. And what to me, my love ? and what to me ?

Dum. But what to me, my love ? but what to me ?

Kath. A wife !—A beard, fair health, and honesty ;

With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife ?

Kath. Not so, my lord ;—a twelvemonth and a day

I 'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say :

Come when the king doth to my lady come,

Then, if I have much love, I 'll give you some.

Dum. I 'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest you be forsworn again.

<sup>a</sup> Bombast, from bombagia, cotton wool used as stuffing.

What says Maria ?

At the twelvemonth's end,
I'll wear my black gown for a faithful friend.
I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

The liker you; few taller are so young.
Studies my lady? mistress, look on me,
The window of my heart, mine eye,
The humble suit attends thy answer there;
I'll serve thee on me for thy love.
Hast thou heard of you, my lord Biron,
How you are for a man replete with mocks;
Comparisons and wounding flouts;
That on all estates will execute,
Within the mercy of your wit:
This wormwood from your fruitful brain,
Withal, to win me, if you please,
(The which I am not to be won,)—
This twelvemonth term from day to day
Speechless sick, and still converse
With wretches; and your task shall be,
The fierce endeavour of your wit,
To move the pained impotent to smile.
To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
Is it possible:—
To move a soul in agony.

Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whence is begot of that loose grace
Which follow laughing bearers give to fools:
Whence lies the ear
Which hears it, never in the tongue
Which makes it: then, if sickly ears,
Which the clamours of their own dear groans,
Your idle scorns, continue then,
I'll have you, and that fault withal;
You will not, throw away that spirit,
I'll find you empty of that fault,
Which is the fault of your reformation.

A twelvemonth? well, befall what will befall,
I'll twelvemonth in an hospital.
Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave.

[To the KING.]

No, madam, we will bring you on your way.
Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
Our Jill: these ladies' courtesy
I'll have made our sport a comedy.
Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
'Till it will end.

That's too long for a play.

Enter ARMADO.

Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—
Was not that Hector?

Dem. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled, in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.

Arm. Holla! approach.

Enter HOLOFERNES, NATHANIEL, MOTH, COSTARD, and others.

This side is Hiems, winter: This Ver, the spring: the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo.
Ver, begin.

SONG.

I.

SPRING. When daisies nod, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

II.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer-smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

III.

WINTER. When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who:
Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

IV.

When all about the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who:
Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way. [Exeunt

<sup>a</sup> Kiel—skien.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS comedy was first printed in the folio collection of 1623. In the original copy the play is divided into acts, but not into scenes. There are several examples of corruption in the text; but, upon the whole, it is very accurately printed, both with regard to the metrical arrangement and to punctuation.

In an early number of the 'Pictorial Edition' of Shakspeare we expressed an opinion as to the date of this comedy:—"Meres has also mentioned, amongst the instances of Shakspeare's excellence for comedy, 'Love's Labour Won.' This is generally believed to be 'All's Well that Ends Well;' and probably, in some form or other, this was an early play." Malone, in the first edition of his 'Chronological Order of Shakspeare's Plays,' assigns the date of this comedy to 1598, upon the authority of the passage in Meres. He says, "No other of our author's plays could have borne that title ('Love's Labour Won') with so much propriety as that before us." This is the real argument in the matter; and Coleridge, therefore, describes this play as "originally intended as the counterpart of 'Love's Labour's Lost.'" Shakspeare's titles, in the judgment of that philosophical critic, always exhibit "great significance." The Labour of Love which is Lost is not a very earnest labour. The King and his courtiers are fantastical lovers. They would win their mistresses by "bootless rhymes" and "speeches peun'd," and their most sincere declarations are thus only received as "mocking merriment." What would naturally be the counterpart of such a story? One of passionate, enduring, all-pervading love,—of a love that shrinks from no difficulty, resents no unkindness, fears no disgrace, but perseveres, under the most adverse circumstances, to vindicate its own claims by its own energy, and to achieve success by the strength of its own will. This is the Labour of Love which is Won. Is not this the story of 'All's Well that Ends Well'?

Of the characters we may say a few words.

Mrs. Jameson quotes a passage from Foster's 'Essays' to explain the general idea of the character of Helena: "To be tremblingly alive to gentle impressions, and yet be able to preserve, when the prosecution of a design requires it, an immovable heart amidst even the most imperious causes of subduing emotion, is perhaps not an impossible constitution of mind, but it is the utmost and rarest endowment of humanity." This "constitution of mind" has been created by Shakspeare in his Helena, and who can doubt the truth and nature of the conception?

Bertram, like all mixed characters, whether in the drama or in real life, is a great puzzle to those who look without tolerance on human motives and actions. In a one-sided view he has no redeeming qualities. Johnson says, "I cannot reconcile my heart to Bertram; a man noble without generosity, and young without truth; who marries Helena as a coward, and leaves her as a profligate: when she is dead by his unkindness sneaks home to a second marriage: is accused by a woman whom he has wronged, defends himself by falsehood, and is dismissed to happiness." We have no desire to reconcile our hearts to Bertram; all that we demand is, that he should not move our indignation beyond the point in which his qualities shall consist with our sympathy for Helena in her love for him. And in this view the poet, as it appears to us, has drawn Bertram's character most skilfully. Without his defects the dramatic action could not have proceeded; without his merits the dramatic sentiment could not have been maintained.

"In this piece," says Schlegel, "age is exhibited to singular advantage: the plain honesty of the King, the good-natured impetuosity of old Lafeu, the maternal indulgence of the Countess to Helena's love of her son, seem all, as it were, to vie with each other in endeavours to conquer the arrogance of the young Count." The general benevolence of these characters, and their particular kindness towards Helena, are the counterpoises to Bertram's pride of birth, and his disdain of virtue unaccompanied by adventitious distinctions. The love of the Countess towards Helena is habit, that of the King is gratitude: in Lafeu the admiration which he perseveringly holds towards her is the result of his honest sagacity. He admires what is direct and unpretending, and he therefore loves Helena: he hates what is evasive and boastful, and he therefore despises Parolles.

"Parolles has many of the lineaments of Falstaff." We think that this opinion of Johnson exhibits a singular want of discrimination in one who relished Falstaff so highly. Parolles is literally what he is described by Helena:—

"I know him a notorious liar,

Think him a great way fool, solely a coward."

Is this crawling, empty, vapouring, cowardly representative of the off-scourings of social life, to be compared for a moment with the unimitable Falstaff? The comparison will not bear examining with patience, and much less with painstaking. But Parolles in his own way is infinitely comic. "The scene of the drum," according to a French critic, "is worthy of Molière." This is the highest praise which a French writer could bestow; and here it is just. The character belongs to the school of which Molière is the head, rather than to the school of Shakspeare. And what shall we say of the Clown? He is the "artificial fool;" and we do not like him, therefore, quite so much as dear Launce and dearer Touchstone. To the Fool in 'Lear' he can no more be compared than Parolles to Falstaff; but he is, nevertheless, great—something that no other artist but Shakspeare could have produced. Our poet has used him as a vehicle for some biting satire. There can be no doubt that he is "a witty fool," "a shrewd knave, and an unhappy."

SCENE,—IN FRANCE AND IN TUSCANY.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter BERTRAM, the COUNTESS OF ROUSILLON, HELENA, and LAFEU, in mourning.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam;—you, sir, a father: He that so generally is at all times poor, must of necessity hold his virtue to you; whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, (O, that had! how sad a passage* 't is!) whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far,

* Passage—what passes.

would* have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. 'Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, madam?
Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam; the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly: he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious.—Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity,—they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

* Would—it would.

Count. 'T is the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelikehood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena—go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow, indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead; excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Hel. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou bless'd, Bertram! and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! thy blood, and virtue,
Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness
Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend
Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What Heaven more will,
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down,
Fall on thy head! Farewell.—My lord,
'T is an unseason'd courtier; good my lord,
Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him!—Farewell, Bertram. [Exit.]

Ber. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts [to HELENA] be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: You must hold the credit of your father. [Exeunt BERTRAM and LAFEU.]

Hel. O, were that all!—I think not on my father;
And these great tears grace his remembrance more
Than those I shed for him.<sup>a</sup> What was he like?
I have forgot him: my imagination
Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's.
I am undone; there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. It were all one
That I should love a bright particular star,
And think to wed it, he is so above me:
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
The ambition in my love thus plagues itself:
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'T was pretty, though a plague,
To see him every hour; to sit and draw
His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls,
In our heart's table;<sup>b</sup> heart too capable
Of every line and trick<sup>c</sup> of his sweet favour:<sup>d</sup>
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter PAROLLES.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake;
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Look bleak i' the cold wind: withal, full oft we see Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen.

Hel. And you, monarch.<sup>e</sup>

Par. No.

<sup>a</sup> The "great tears" which the departure of Bertram causes her to shed, being imputed to her grief for her father, grace his remembrance more than those which she really shed for him.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stam of soldier in; let me ask you a question: Man is enemy to virginity, how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though va in the defence, yet is weak: unfold to us some way of resistance.

Par. There is none: man, sitting down before will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers blowers up!—Is there no military policy how we might blow up men?

Par. Virginity, being blown down, man will qu pier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down a with the breach yourselves made, you lose your It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to serve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase and there was never virgin got till virginity was lost. That you were made of is metal to make virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times got by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 't is too cold a companion; away with 't.

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I a virgin.

Par. There 's little can be said in 't; 't is ag the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity to accuse your mothers; which is most infallible obedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virgin murders itself; and should be buried in highways, of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress ag nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a che consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is poe proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most i bited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot ch but lose by 't: Out with 't: within ten year it make itself two, which is a goodly increase; and principal itself not much the worse: Away with 't.

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her liking?

Par. Let me see: Marry, ill, to like him that it likes. 'T is a commodity will lose the gloss y lying; the longer kept the less worth: off with 't, w 't is vendible: answer the time of request. Virgin like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashi richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch the toothpick, which wear not now: Your date is b in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek: A your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; ma 't is a withered pear; it was formerly better; ma yet, 't is a withered pear: Will you anything with

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There, shall your master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A phoenix, captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear;
His humble ambition, proud humility,
His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet,
His faith, his sweet disaster: with a world

The Florentines and Senoys are by the ears;

So 't is reported, sir.

Nay, 't is most credible; we here receive it es the business, and would seem at credence.

er gentlemen that mean to see en service, freely have they leave

It well may serve

A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

King. What 's he comes here?

Enter BERTRAM, LAPEU, and PAROLLES.

I Lord. It is the count Rousillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face;
Frank Nature, rather curious than in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts
Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father and myself, in friendship,
First tried our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Discipled of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father: In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.

So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and, at this time,
His tongue obey'd his hand: * who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place;
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them now
But goes backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb;
So in approof lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King. 'Would I were with him! He would always say,

(Methinks I hear him now: his plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear,)—"Let me not live,"—
This his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out,—“Let me not live,” quoth he,
“After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions:”—This he wish'd;
I, after him, do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2 Lord. You are lov'd, sir:
They that least lend it you shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know 't.—How long is 't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living I would try him yet;—
Lend me an arm;—the rest have worn me out
With several applications:—nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son 's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty.

[Exeunt. Flourish.

* The metaphor of a "clock" is continued; his tongue, in speaking what "exception" bade him, obeyed the hand of honour's clock—his hand being put for its hand.

SCENE III.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear : what say you of this gentlewoman ?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours : for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here ? Get you gone, sirrah : The complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe ; 't is my slowness that I do not : for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'T is not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 't is not so well that I am poor ; though many of the rich are damned : But, if I may have your ladyship's good-will to go to the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar ?

Clo. I do beg your good-will in this case.

Count. In what case ?

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage : and I think I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue o' my body ; for, they say, barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it : I am driven on by the flesh ; and he must needs go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason ?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them ?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are ; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam ; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. You 're shallow, madam, in great friends ; for the knaves come to do that for me which I am a-weary of. He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to in the crop : If I be his cuckold, he 's my drudge : He that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood ; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood ; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend ; ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage : for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist, howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one,—they may jowl horns together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouth'd and calumnious knave ?

Clo. A prophet I, madam ; and I speak the truth the next way :<sup>a</sup>

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find ;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

Count. Get you gone, sir ; I 'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you ; of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak to her ; Helen I mean.

<sup>a</sup> The wurt way—the nearest way.

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy ?<sup>a</sup>
Fond done, slute fond,
Was this king Priam's joy ?
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
And gave this sentence then ;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There 's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in ten ? you con-song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam, whi-purifying o' the song : 'Would God would a world so all the year ! we 'd find no fault with woman, if I were the parson : One in ten, quoth we might have a good woman born but for every star, or at an earthquake, 't would mend the lotte-

Count. You 'll be gone, sir knave, and do as mand you !

Clo. That man should be at woman's cost and yet no hurt done !—Though honesty be no yet it will do no hurt ; it will wear the surplice militly over the black gown of a big heart.—I as forsooth ; the business is for Helen to come hither.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentle-entirely.

Count. Faith, I do : her father bequeathed me ; and she herself, without other advantage, im-fully make title to as much love as she finds :
more owing her than is paid ; and more shall her than she 'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her think, she wished me : alone she was, and did en-nicate to herself her own words to her own en-thought, I dare vow for her, they touched n stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved yo Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had p difference betwixt their two estates ; Love, no go would not extend his might only where qualilevel ; Diana, no queen of virgins, that would su poor knight to be surprised, without rescue in assault, or ransom afterward : This she deliver most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I heard virclaim in : which I held my duty, speedily to ac-you withal ; sithence, in the loss that may hap concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly ; to yourself : many likelihoods informed me of fore, which hung so tottering in the balance, could neither believe nor misdoubt : Pray you me : stall this in your bosom, and I thank you honest care : I will speak with you further anon.

[Exit S

Enter HELENA.

Count. Even so it was with me when I was y

If ever we are nature's, these are ours ; this

Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong :

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born ;

It 's the show and seal of nature's truth,

Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth

By our remembrances of days foregone,

Such were our faults ;—or then we thought none.

Her eye is sick on 't ; I observe her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam ?

Count. You know, Helen, I am a mother to y

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a moth

Why not a mother ? When I said, a mother,

<sup>a</sup> The mention of Helen is associated in the mind
Clown with some popular ballad on the war of Troy.

if you saw a serpent: What 's in mother start at it? I say, I am your mother:
you in the catalogue of those enwomb'd mine: 'T is often seen,

ness to you a mother's care:—
cy, maiden! does it curd thy blood am thy mother? What 's the matter, distemper'd messenger of wet,
colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?
What you are my daughter?

That I am not.

I say, I am your mother.

Pardon, madam;

Rousillon cannot be my brother:
a humble, he from honour'd name;
upon my parents, his all noble:
is, my dear lord he is: and I not live, and will his vassal die:
not be my brother.

Nor I your mother?

you are my mother, madam. ('Would you were,
y lord, your son, were not my brother.)
my mother!—(Or were you both our mothers, more for than I do for heaven, not his sister.) Can 't be other or daughter, he must be my brother?

Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law:

And you mean it not! daughter, and mother,
upon your pulse: What, pale again?
with catch'd your fondness: Now I see ery of your loneliness, and find as then, 't is so:—for, look, thy cheeks grossly shown in thy behaviours, their kind they speak it: only sin

sh obstinacy tie thy tongue,
h should be suspected: Speak, is 't so?
s, you have wound a goodly clue;
ot, forswear 't: how'er, I charge thee,
n shall work in me for thine avail,
e truly.

Good madam, pardon me.

Do you love my son?

Your pardon, noble mistress!

Love you my son?

Do not you love him, madam?

Go not about; my love hath in 't a bond,
the world takes note; come, come, disclose of your affection; for your passions
the full approach'd.

Then, I confess,
my knees, before high Heaven and you,
are you, and next unto high Heaven,
our son:—

ids were poor but honest; so 's my love:
fended; for it hurts not him is lov'd of me: I follow him not taken of presumptuous suit;

Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him;
Yet never know how that desert should be.

I know I love in vain, strive against hope;

Yet, in this captious and intenable* sieve,

I still pour in the waters of my love,

And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like,

Religious in mine error, I adore

The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,

But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,

Let not your hate encounter with my love,

For loving where you do: but, if yourself,

Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,

Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,

Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian

Was both herself and love; O then, give pity

To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose

But lend and give, where she is sure to lose;

That seeks not to find that her search implies,

But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Count. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,

To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Count. Wherefore? tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself, I swear.

You know my father left me some prescriptions

Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading,

And manifest experience, had collected

For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me

In heedfullest reservation to bestow them,

As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,

More than they were in note: amongst the rest,

There is a remedy, approv'd, set down,

To cure the desperate languishings whereof

The king is render'd lost.

Count. This was your motive for Paris, was it?

Hel. speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this;

Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,

Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,

Haply, been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,

If you should tender your supposed aid,

He would receive it? He and his physicians

Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,

They, that they cannot help: How shall they credit

A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,

Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off

The danger to itself?

Hel. There 's something hints,

More than my father's skill, which was the greatest

Of his profession, that his good receipt

Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified

By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour

But give me leave to try success, I 'd venture

The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,

By such a day and hour.

Count. Dost thou believe 't?

Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and

love,

Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings

To those of mine in court; I 'll stay at home,

And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:

Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,

What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss. [Exit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING, with young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine war; BERTRAM, PAROLLES, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lord, these warlike principles Do not throw from you:—and you, my lord, farewell:—

Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all, The gift doth stretch itself as 't is receiv'd, And is enough for both.

1 Lord. It is our hope, sir, After well enter'd soldiers, to return And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart Will not confess he owes the malady That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords; Whether I live or die, be you the sons Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy (Those 'bated, that inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy) see, that you come Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek, That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

2 Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them; If they demand; beware of being captives, Before you serve.

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell.—Come hither to me.

[The KING retires to a couch.]

1 Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. 'T is not his fault; the spark—

2 Lord. O, 't is brave wars!

Par. Most admirable; I have seen those wars.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with, "Too young," and "the next year," and "'t is too early."

Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock, Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry, Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn But one to dance with!* By Heaven, I 'll steal away.

1 Lord. There 's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, count.

2 Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell.

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

1 Lord. Farewell, captain.

2 Lord. Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals:—You shall find in the regiment of the Spinii one captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live; and observe his reports for me.

2 Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! [Exeunt Lords.] What will you do?

Ber. Stay; the king—

[Seeing him rise.]

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of an advice; be more expressive to them: for 't themselves in the cap of the time; there, do not sit, eat, speak, and move under the insid of fashion—the dress-makers as we still call it.

fluence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen. [Exeunt BERTRAM and PAROLLES.]

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. Pardon, my lord, [kneeling] for me and for my tidings.

King. I 'll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here 's a man stands that has brought his pardon.

I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy, And that, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate, And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across: But, my good lord, 't is thus; Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?

Yes, but you will my noble grapes, an if My royal fox could reach them: I have seen a medicine,

That 's able to breathe life into a stone; Quickens a rock, and makes you dance canary, With sprightly fire and motion; whose simple touch Is powerful to raise king Pepin, nay, To give great Charlemain a pen in 's hand And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why, doctor she; My lord, there 's one arriv'd, If you will see her:—Now, by my faith and honour, If seriously I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have spoke With one, that, in her sex, her years, profession,* Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness: Will you see her (For that is her demand) and know her business? That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafeu,

Bring in the admiration; that we with thee May spend our wonder too, or take off thine, By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf. Nay, I 'll fit you,

And not be all day neither. [Exit.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Re-enter LAFEU, with HELENA.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways;

This is his majesty, say your mind to him: A traitor you do look like; but such traitors His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle, That dare leave two together: fare you well. [Exit.]

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord.

Geard de Narbon was my father,

In what he did profess well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;

Knowing him is enough. On his bed of death

Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,

Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,

And of his old experience the only darling,

He had me store up, as a triple eye,

Safer than mine own two, more dear; I have so:

* Profession—declaration of purpose.

earing your high majesty is touch'd that malignant cause wherein the honour
dear father's gift stands chief in power, to tender it, and my appliance,
all bound humbleness.

g. We thank you, maiden ;
ay not be so credulous of cure,
our most learned doctors leave us ; and agregated college have concluded labouring art can never ransom Nature er inaidable estate,—I say we must not our judgment, or corrupt our hope, stitute our past-cure malady eries ; or to dissever so eat self and our credit, to esteem less help, when help past sense we deem.

g. My duty then shall pay me for my pains :
no more enforce mine office on you ;
ly entreating from your royal thoughts
est one, to bear me back again.
g. I cannot give thee less to be call'd grateful ought'st to help me ; and such thanks I give,
dear death to those that wish him live ;
hat at full I know thou know'st no part ;
ing all my peril, thou no art.

g. What I can do can do no hurt to try,
you set up your rest 'gainst remedy :
it of greatest works is finisher
es them by the weakest minister :
y writ in babes hath judgment shown, judges have been babes. Great floods have flown simple sources ; and great seas have dried, miracles have by the greatest been denied.
pectation fails, and most oft there most it promises ; and oft it hits, hope is coldest, and despair most shifts.
g. I must not hear thee ; fare thee well, kind
maid ;

ains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid :
rs not took reap thanks for their reward.
g. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd :
ot so with Him that all things knows,
is with us that square our guess by shows :
est it is presumption in us, when elp of Heaven we count the act of men.
ir, to my endeavours give consent :
aven, not me, make an experiment.
not an impostor, that proclaim lf against the level of mine aim ;
now I think, and think I know most sure,
it is not past power, nor you past cure.
g. Art thou so confident ? Within what space st thou my cure ?

g. The greatest grace lending grace, rice the horses of the sun shall bring ery torcher his diurnal ring ;
rice in muck and occidental damp
Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp ;
ur-and-twenty times the pilot's glass told the thievish minutes how they pass ;
is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
th shall live free, and sickness freely die.
g. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
st dar'st thou venture ?

g. Tax of impudence,— umpet's boldness, a divulged shame,— uc'd by odious ballads ; my maiden's name d otherwise ; no worse of worst extended, vildest torture let my life be ended.
g. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth
speak ;
powerful sound within an organ weak :
what impossibility would slay
savage sense, sense saves another way.

Thy life is dear ; for all that life can rate
Worth name of life in thee hath estimate ;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happiness and prime can happy call :
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death, if I die.
Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die ;
And well deserv'd : Not helping, death's my fee ;
But, if I help, what do you promise me ?

King. Make thy demand.
Hel. But will you make it even ?
King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me, with thy kingly hand,
What husband in thy power I will command :
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France ;
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state :
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand ; the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd ;
So make the choice of thy own time, for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
More should I question thee, and more I must,
Though more to know could not be more to trust ;
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on,—But rest
Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted bless'd.—
Give me some help here, ho !—If thou proceed
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rousillon. *A Room in the Countess's
Palace.*

Enter COUNTESS and CLOWN.

Count. Come on, sir ; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed, and lowly taught :
I know my business is but to the court.

Count. To the court ? why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt—
But to the court ?

Clo. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court : he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap ; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court : but for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair, that fits all buttocks ;
the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock,
or any buttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions ?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney as your French crown for your taffata punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth ;
nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions ?

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable,
it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it : here it is, and all that belongs to't : ask me if I am a courtier : it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could, I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer—
I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, sir,—There 's a simple putting off;—more, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord, sir,—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord, sir,—Nay, put me to 't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir,—Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, "O Lord, sir," at your whipping, and "spare not me"? Indeed, your "O Lord, sir," is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to 't.<sup>a</sup>

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life in my—"O Lord, sir:" I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, To entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord, sir,—Why, there 't serves well again.

Count. An end, sir: To your business: Give Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back: Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son; This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

Count. Not much employment for you: You understand me?

Clo. Most fruitfully; I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. [Exit severally.]

SCENE III.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

Laf. They say, miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors; ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 't is the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 't is.

Laf. To be relinquish'd of the artists,—

Par. So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows,—

Par. Right, so I say.

Laf. That gave him out incurable,—

Par. Why, there 't is; so say I too.

Laf. Not to be helped,—

Par. Right: as 't were a man assured of a—

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just, you say well; so would I have said.

Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is indeed: if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in,—What do you call there?<sup>b</sup>

Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.

Par. That 't is: I would have said the very same.

Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'fore me I speak in respect—

Par. Nay, 't is strange, 't is very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he 's of a most facinorous spirit that will not acknowledge it to be the—

Laf. Very hand of Heaven.

Par. Ay, so I say.

Laf. In a most weak—

The now vulgar expression, "O Lord, sir," was for a long time fashionable phrase, and has been ridiculed by other writers. The whipping of a domestic fool was not an uncommon occurrence.

<sup>a</sup> do you call there?—equivalent to "What d' ye call

Par. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence: which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made, than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—
Laf. Generally thankful.

Enter KING, HELENA, and Attendants.

Par. I would have said it; you say well. Hese comes the king.

Laf. Lustick,<sup>a</sup> as the Dutchman says: I 'll like a maid the better whilst I have a tooth in my head: Why, he 's able to lead her a coranto.

Par. Mort du Vinaigre! Is not this Helen?

Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords in court.—

[Exit an Attendant.]

Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side;
And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd sense
Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive
The confirmation of my promis'd gift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel
Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
O'er whom both sovereign power and father's voice
I have to use: thy frank election make;
Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress
Fall, when love please—marry to each—but one.<sup>b</sup>

Laf. I 'd give bay Curtal, and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken than these boys';
And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well:

Not one of those but had a noble father.

Hel. Gentlemen,

Heaven hath, through me, restor'd the king to health.

All. We understand it, and thank Heaven for you.

Hel. I am a simple maid; and therein wealthiest,
That, I protest, I simply am a maid:—

Please it your majesty, I have done already:
The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,—
"We blush, that thou shouldst choose; but, be refus'd,
Let the white death<sup>c</sup> sit on thy cheek for ever;
We 'll ne'er come there again."

King. Make choice; and, see,

Who shuns thy love shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly;

And to imperial Love, that god most high,

Do my sighs stream.—Sir, will you hear my suit?

1 Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mine.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice than throw amercement for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,

Before I speak, too threateningly replies:

Love make your fortunes twenty times above

Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

2 Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,

Which great Love grant! and so I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I 'd have them whipped; or I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs of.

Hel. Be not afraid [to a Lord] that I your hand should take;

I 'll never do you wrong for your own sake:

Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed

Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they 'll none have her: sure they are bastards to the English; the French ne'er got them.

as are too young, too happy, and too good,
yourself a son out of my blood.
Fair one, I think not so.
There 's one grape yet,—I am sure thy father is.—But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth as; I have known thee already.
dare not say I take you; [to BERTRAM] but I give my service, ever whilst I live, guiding power.—This is the man.
Why, then, young Bertram, take her, she 's thy wife.
My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your highness,
business give me leave to use of mine own eyes.
Know'st thou not, Bertram, what she has done
for me?
Yes, my good lord; but never hope to know why marry her.
Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.
But follows it, my lord, to bring me down over for your raising? I know her well;
her breeding at my father's charge;
physician's daughter my wife!—Disdain arrest me ever?
'T is only title thou disdain'st in her, the which I'll up. Strange is it, that our bloods, weight, and heat, pour'd all together, quite confound distinction, yet stand off as if so mighty: If she be is virtuous, (save what thou dislik'st, physician's daughter,) thou dislik'st for the name: but do not so:
best place when virtuous things proceed,
is dignified by the doer's deed:
great additions swell, and virtue none,
copied honour: good alone without a name; vileness is so:
worthy by what it should go,
the title. She is young, wise, fair;
to nature she 's immediate heir, or breed honour: that is honour's scorn challenges itself as honour's born, yet like the sire: Honours thrive, either from our acts we them derive or fore-goers: the mere word 's a slave,
I on every tomb, on every grave trophy; and as oft is dumb, best, and damn'd oblivion, is the tomb or'd losses indeed. What should be said?
canst like this creature as a maid,
state the rest: virtue, and she,
win slower; honour and wealth from me.
I cannot love her, nor will strive to do 't.
Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.
That you are well restor'd, my lord, I 'm glad;
rest go.
My honour 's at the stake; which to defeat,
produce my power: Here, take her hand,
costly boy, unworthy this good gift, set in vile misprision shackle up a, and her desert; that canst not dream, bring us in her defective scale,
weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know us to plant thine honour, where we to have it grow: Check thy contempt:
or will, which travails in thy good:
not thy disdain, but presently e own fortunes that obedient right both thy duty owes and our power claims;
I'll show thee from my care for ever,

Into the staggers,* and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and late Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity: Speak! thine answer!

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit My fancy to your eyes: When I consider
What great creation, and what dole of honour,
Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,
Is, as 't were, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise; if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune, and the favour of the king,
Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love 's to me religious; else, does err.

[Exeunt KING, BER., HEL., Lords, and Attendants.]

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir?

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his re-cantation.

Par. Recantation?—My lord? my master?

Laf. Ay: Is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one; and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master?

Laf. Are you companion to the count Rousillon?

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.

Laf. To what is count's man; count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, sir: let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries,<sup>b</sup> to be a pretty wise fellow; thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass: yet the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burthen. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up; and that thou art scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial;—which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well; thy casement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it: and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. Even as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf, and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say, in the default, he is a man I know.

* The staggers—a metaphorical expression for uncertainty, insecurity.

<sup>b</sup> For two ordinaries—during two ordinaries at the same
table.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. [Exit.]

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me, scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord!—Well, I must be patient; there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age, than I would have of—I'll beat him, an if I could but meet him again.

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married; there's news for you; you have a new mistress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: He is my good lord: whom I serve above is my master.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee: methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages, than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you. [Exit.]

Enter BERTRAM.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then.—Good, very good; let it be concealed a while.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Par. What's the matter, sweet heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what, sweet heart?

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me:—I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits The tread of a man's foot: to the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother; what the import is, I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known: To the wars, my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen
That hugs his kickie-wickie here at home;
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery steed: To other regions!
France is a stable; we, that dwell in 't, jades;
Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so; I'll send her to my house;
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the king
That which I durst not speak: His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,
Where noble fellows strike: War is no strife
To the dark house, and the detested wife.*

Par. Will this capricio hold in thee, art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.

* Bertram would say—the strife of war is nothing, compared to that of the dark house, &c. By the "dark house," we understand the house which is the seat of gloom and discontent.

I'll send her straight away: To-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it.
'T is hard:

A young man married is a man that's marr'd:

Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go:

The king has done you wrong: but, hush! 't is so.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter HELENA and CLOWD.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: Is she well?

Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health: she's very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail that she's not very well?

Clo. Truly, she's very well, indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on: and to keep them on, have them still.—O, my knave! How does my old lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away, thou'rt a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou'rt a knave; that's before me thou'rt a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i' faith, and well fed.—

Madam, my lord will go away to-night:

A very serious business calls on him.

The great prerogative and right of love,
Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge;

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint;

Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets,

Which they distil now in the curbed time,

To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,

And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king,

And make this haste as your own good proceeding,

Strengthen'd with what apology you think

May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently

Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you.—Come, sirrah.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Room in the same.Enter LAFU and BERTRAM.

Laf. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant proof.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true: I took this lark to a bunting.*

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes; I pray you, make us friends;
 I will pursue the amity.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. These things shall be done, sir. [To BERTRAM.]

Laf. Pray you, sir, who 's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well: Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. Is she gone to the king? [Aside to PAROLLES.]

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you 'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure,
 Given orders for our horses; and to-night,
 When I should take possession of the bride,
 End, ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three-thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten.—God save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard;<sup>b</sup> and out of it you 'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.]

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter HELENA.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you,
 Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave
 For present parting; only, he desires
 Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.
 You must not marvel, Helen, at my course,
 Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
 The ministration and required office

On my particular: prepar'd I was not
 For such a business; therefore am I found
 So much unsettled: This drives me to entreat you,
 That presently you take your way for home;
 And rather muse, than ask, why I entreat you:
 For my respects are better than they seem;
 And my appointments have in them a need
 Greater than shows itself, at the first view,
 To you that know them not. This to my mother:

[Giving a letter

'T will be two days ere I shall see you; so
 I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
 But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall
 With true observance seek to eke out that,
 Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd
 To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go:
 My haste is very great: Farewell; hie home.

Hel. Pray, sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe;

Nor dare I say 't is mine; and yet it is;

But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal
 What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something; and scarce so much:—nothing, indeed.—

I would not tell you what I would: my lord—faith,
 yes;—

Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

Where are my other men? Monsieur, farewell.

[Exit HELENA.

Ber. Go thou toward home; where I will never come,

Whilst I can shake my sword or hear the drum:—
 Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, coragio! [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Florence. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the DUKE OF FLORENCE, attended; two French Lords, and others.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war;
 Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
 And more thirsts after.

1 Lord. Holy seems the quarrel

* The lark and the common bunting greatly resemble each other, but the bunting has no song.

<sup>b</sup> The leaper into the custard was the city fool.

* The wedding must be—than you have deserved, or are willing to deserve.

Upon your grace's part; black and fearful
 On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much, our cousin France
 Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom
 Against our borrowing prayers.

2 Lord. Good my lord,

The reasons of our state I cannot yield
 But like a common and an outward man,
 That the great figure of a council frames
 By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it; since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail
 As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

2 Lord. But I am sure, the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will, day by day,
Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be ;
And all the honours that can fly from us
Shall on them settle. You know your places well ;
When better fall, for your avails they fell :
To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rousillon. *A Room in the Countess's
Palace.*

Enter COUNTESS and CLOWN.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you ?
Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing ;
mend the ruff,* and sing ; ask questions, and sing ;
pick his teeth, and sing : I know a man that had this trick of melancholy hold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. [Opening a letter.]

Clo. I have no mind to Isabel, since I was at court ;
our old ling and our Isbels o' the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o' the court : the brains of my Cupid 's knocked out ; and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here ?

Clo. E'en that you have there. [Exit.]

Count. [Reads.]

" I have sent you a daughter-in-law : she hath recovered the ring, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her ; and sworn to make the not eternal. You shall hear I am run away ; know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you. " Your unfortunate son,
" BERTRAM."

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a king ;
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprizing of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter CLOWN.

Clo. O madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter ?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort ; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be killed ?

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does : the danger is in standing to 't ; that 's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more : for my part, I only hear your son was run away. [Exit.]

Enter HELENA and two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2 Gent. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience.—Pray you, gentlemen,—

I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unto 't,—Where is my son, I pray you ?

2 Gent. Madam, he 's gone to serve the duke of Florence.

We met him thitherward ; for, thence we came,
And, after some despatch in hand at court,
Thither we bend again.

* The top of the loose boot, which turned over, was called the ruff, or ruffle.

Hel. Look on his letter, madam ; here 's my pasport. [Reads.]

" When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body that I am father to, then call me husband : but in such a then I write a never."

This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen ?

1 Gent. Ay, madam.

And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.

Count. I prithee, lady, have a better cheer ;
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moiety : He was my son ;
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my child.—Towards Florence is he ?

2 Gent. Ay, madam.

Count. And to be a soldier ?

2 Gent. Such is his noble purpose : and, believe 't,
The duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither ?

1 Gent. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. " Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

'T is bitter.

Count. Find you that there ?

Hel. Ay, madam.

1 Gent. 'T is but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to.

Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife !

There 's nothing here that is too good for him,
But only she : and she deserves a lord

That twenty such rude boys might tend upon,
And call her hourly, mistress. Who was with him ?

1 Gent. A servant only, and a gentleman

Which I have some time known.

Count. Parolles, was 't not ?

1 Gent. Ay, my good lady, he.

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness.
My son corrupts a well-derived nature
With his inducement.

1 Gent. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that, too much,
Which holds him much to have.

Count. You are welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses : more I 'll entreat you,
Written, to bear along.

2 Gent. We serve you, madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies.

Will you draw near ? [Exeunt COUNTESS and GENTLEMEN.]

Hel. " Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

Nothing in France, until he has no wife !

Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France.

Then hast thou all again. Poor lord ! is 't I

That chase thee from thy country, and expose

Those tender limbs of thine to the event

Of the none-sparing war ? and is it I

That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou

Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark

Of smoky muskets ? O, you leaden messengers,

That ride upon the violent speed of fire,

Fly with false aim ; move the still-peering* air,

That sings with piercing ; do not touch my lord !

Whoever shoots at him, I set him there ;

Whoever charges on his forward breast,

I am the catiff that do hold him to it ;

And, though I kill him not, I am the cause

His death was so effected : better 't were,

I met the ravin lion when he roar'd

* Still-peering—appearing still

With sharp constraint of hunger; better 't were,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once: No, come thou home, Rousillon,
Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
As all it loses all; I will be gone:
My being here it is that holds thee hence;
Shall I stay here to do 't? no, no, although
The air of paradise did fan the house,
And angels offic'd all: I will be gone;
That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
To circulate thine ear. Come, night; end, day!
Fw, with the dark, poor thief, I 'll steal away. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Florence. Before the Duke's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the DUKE OF FLORENCE, BERTRAM, Louis, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we,
Gent in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength: but yet
We 'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake,
To the extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then, go thou forth;
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber. This very day,
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:
Make me but like my thoughts; and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know she would do as she has done,
By sending me a letter? Read it again.

Stew.
I am St. Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone.
Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That barefoot plod I the cold ground upon,
With saint's vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that, from the bloody course of war,
My dearest mascot, your dear son, may live;
Toss him at home in peace, whilst I from far
His name with zealous fervour sanctify:
He takes labours bid him me forgive;
I, his despiteful Jans, sent him forth
From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Whose death and danger dog the heels of worth:
He is too good and fair for death and me;
When I myself embrace, to set him free.

Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!—

Emilda, you did never lack advice so much
As letting her pass so; had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam:
If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,
Punish would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom Heaven delights to hear,
And leaves to grant, relieve him from the wrath
Of greatest justice.—Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife:
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Despatch the most convenient messenger:—
When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love. Which of them both

Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction:—Provide this messenger:—
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Without the Walls of Florence.

A tucket afar off. Enter an old Widow of Florence, DIANA, VIOLENTA, MARIANA, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city,
we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count nas done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander; and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour: they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come, let 's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid is her name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles:
a filthy officer he is in those suggestions<sup>a</sup> for the young earl.—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wrack of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but, I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter HELENA, in the dress of a pilgrim.

Wid. I hope so.—Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house: thither they send one another: I 'll question her.—God save you, pilgrim!
Whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry is 't.—Hark you, they come this way:— [A march afar off.]

If you will tarry, holy pilgrim, but till the troops come by,

I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;

The rather, for I think I know your hostess

As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,

That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The count Rousillon: Know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear that hears most nobly of him:
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsoe'er he is,
He 's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 't is reported, for<sup>b</sup> the king had married him
Against his liking: Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth; I know his lady

Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the count

Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What 's his name?

<sup>a</sup> Suggestions—temptations. <sup>b</sup> For—because.

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him,

In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated; all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!

'T is a hard bondage, to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. Ay, right; good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might do her
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?
May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Enter, with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, BERTRAM, and PAROLLES.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come:—
That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;
That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He;
That with the plume: 't is a most gallant fellow;
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest
He were much goodlier:—Is 't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'T is pity he is not honest: Yond 's that same knave,
That leads him to these places; were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That jack-an-apes with scarfs: Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he 's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mar. He 's shrewdly vexed at something: Look, he nas spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesies, for a ring-carrier!

[Exit BER., PAR., Officers, and Soldiers.]

Wid. The troop is pass'd: Come, pilgrim, I will bring you

Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents
There 's four or five, to great saint Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
Please it this matron, and this gentle maid,
To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We 'll take your offer kindly. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Camp before Florence.

Enter BERTRAM and the two French Lords.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't; let him save his way.

2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direction, without any malice, but to speak of him as on, he 's a most notable coward, an infinite liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

2 Lord. It were fit you knew him; lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might, at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail
you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

2 Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hoodwink him, so that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents: Be but your lordship present at his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum; he says, he has a stratagem for 't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment,* you inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter PAROLLES.

1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the humour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Ber. How now, monsieur? this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2 Lord. A pox on 't, let it go; 't is but a drum.

Par. But a drum! Is 't but a drum? A drum so lost!—There was excellent command! to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers!

2 Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service; it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success:
some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered: but that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or his facet.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to 't, monsieur, if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I 'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and, by midnight, look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?

* There is an old interlude, printed in 1601, called 'Jack Drum's Entertainment'; and it appears that this species of hospitality to which Jack Drum, or John Drum, or Tom Drum (for he is called by each name), was subjected, consisted in abuse and teasing.

I know not what the success will be, my lord ; attempt I vow.

I know thou 'rt valiant ; the possibility of thy soldiership scribe for thee. Farewell.

I love not many words. [Exit.

d. No more than a fish loves water.—Is not ange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems take this business, which he knows is not to be unns himself to do, and dares better be damned to 't ?

d. You do not know him, my lord, as we do : it is, that he will steal himself into a man's and, for a week, escape a great deal of discoat when you find him out, you have him ever

Why, do you think he will make no deed at us, that so seriously he does address himself

d. None in the world ; but return with an in- and clap upon you two or three probable lies : are almost embossed* him ; you shall see his ight : for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's

d. We 'll make you some sport with the fox, as him. He was first smoked by the old lord when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what you shall find him ; which you shall see 't night.

d. I must go look my twigs ; he shall be

Your brother, he shall go along with me.

d. As 't please your lordship : I 'll leave you.

[Exit. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you I spoke of.

d. But, you say she 's honest. That 's all the fault : I spoke with her but once, and her wondrous cold ; but I sent to her, some coxcomb that we have i' the wind, and letters which she did re-send ; 's is all I have done : She 's a fair creature ; go see her ?

d. With all my heart, my lord. [Exeunt.

ACT VII.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA and Widow.

If you misdoubt me that I am not she, not how I shall assure you further, shall lose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be fallen, I was wel born,

Nothing acquainted with these businesses ; And would not put my reputation now In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.

First, give me trust, the count he is my husband ; And, what to your sworn counsel I have spoken Is so, from word to word ; and then you cannot, By the good aid that I of you shall borrow, Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you ; For you have show'd me that which well approves You are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold, And let me buy your friendly help thus far, Which I will over-pay, and pay again, When I have found it. The count he woos your daughter,

Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty, Resolves to carry her ; let her, in fine, consent, As we 'll direct her how 't is best to bear it, Now his important blood will nought deny That she 'll demand ; A ring the county wears, That downward hath succeeded in his house, From son to son, some four or five descents Since the first father wore it : this ring he holds In most rich choice ; yet, in his idle fire, To buy his will, it would not seem too dear, Howe'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see the bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then : It is no more, But that your daughter, ere she seems as won Desires this ring ; appoints him an encounter In fine, delivers me to fill the time, Herself most chastely absent ; after this, To marry her, I 'll add three thousand crowns To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded : Instruct my daughter how she shall persever, That time and place, with this deceit so lawful, May prove coherent. Every night he comes With musics of all sorts, and songs compos'd To her unworthiness : It nothing steads us To chide him from our eaves ; for he persists, As if his life lay on 't.

Hel. Why, then, to-night Let us assay our plot ; which, if it speed, Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed, And lawful meaning in a lawful act ; Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact : But let 's about it. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Florentine Camp.

First Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

d. He can come no other way but by this corner : When you sally upon him, speak what language you will ; though you understand it selves, no matter ; for we must not seem to and him ; unless some one among us, whom we aduce for an interpreter.

d. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

d. Art not acquainted with him ? knows he not e ?

d. No, sir, I warrant you.

d. But what linsy-woolsy hast thou to speak to ?

ans. The word is probably here used in the sense of

1 Sold. E'en such as you speak to me.

1 Lord. He must think us some band of strangers i' the adversary's entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages ; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another ; so we seem to know is to know straight our purpose : chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho ! here he comes ; to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Ten o'clock : within these three hours 't will be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done ? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it : They begin to smoke me : and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find my tongue is too fool-hardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1 Lord. This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. [Aside].

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum; being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: Yet slight ones will not carry it: They will say, Came you off with so little? and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore? what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1 Lord. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is? [Aside].

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn; or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1 Lord. We cannot afford you so. [Aside].

Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say it was in stratagem.

1 Lord. 'T would not do. [Aside].

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1 Lord. Hardly serve. [Aside].

Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

1 Lord. How deep? [Aside].

Par. Thirty fathom.

1 Lord. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed. [Aside].

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's; I would swear I recovered it.

1 Lord. You shall hear one anon. [Aside].

Par. A drum now of the enemy's! [Alarum within].

1 Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom: do not hide mine eyes.

[They seize him and blindfold him.]

1 Sold. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment, And I shall lose my life for want of language: If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me, I will discover that which shall undo The Florentine.

1 Sold. Boskos vauvado :—

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue :—
Kerelybonto :—Sir,

Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards
Are at thy bosom.

Par. Oh!

1 Sold. O, pray, pray, pray.—
Manka revania dulce.

1 Lord. Oscorbi dulchos volivoro.

1 Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet; And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on To gather from thee: haply thou mayst inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live,
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,
Their force, their purposes: nay, I'll speak that Which you will wonder at.

1 Sold. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1 Sold. Acordo tinta.—

Come on, thou art granted space.

[Exit, with PAROLLES guarded.]

1 Go, tell the count Rousillon, and my brother, Sought the woodcock, and will keep him affled far from them.

2 Sold. Captain, I will.

1 Lord. He will betray us all unto ourselves;—
Inform on that.<sup>a</sup>

2 Sold. So I will, sir.

1 Lord. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd. [Exeunt].

SCENE II.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter BERTRAM and DIANA.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess;

And worth it, with addition!—But, fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality?

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one

As you are now, for you are cold and stern;

And now you should be as your mother was,

When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord,
As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more of that!

I prithee do not strive against my vows:

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee

By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us,

Till we serve you: but when you have our roses,

You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves,

And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn!

Dia. 'T is not the many oaths that make the truth;

But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by,

But take the Highest to witness: Then, pray you, tell

me,

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes

I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,

When I did love you ill? this has no holding,

To swear by him whom I protest to love,

That I will work against him: Therefore, your oaths

Are words, and poor conditions; but unseal'd;

At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it;

Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;

And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts

That you do charge men with: Stand no more off,

But give thyself unto my sick desires,

Who then recover: say, thou art mine, and ever

My love, as it begins, shall so persevere.

Dia. I see that men make ropes, in such a scarce,

That we'll forsake ourselves.<sup>b</sup> Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear, but have no power

To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world

In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour's such a ring:

My chastity's the jewel of our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors;

<sup>b</sup> A scarre is a rock—a precipitous cliff; and thus, figuratively, a difficulty to be surmounted. Men, says Diana, pretend to show how we can overpass the obstacle. Such terms as "love is holy"—"my love shall persevere"—are the ropes by the aid of which the steep rock is to be climbed. The ropes "that we'll forsake, ourselves," are the supports of which we ourselves lose our hold, after we have unwisely trusted to them.

ere the greatest obloquy i' the world lose: Thus your own proper wisdom the champion honour on my part,
our vain assault.

Here, take my ring:
mine honour, yea, my life, be thine,
be bid by thee.
When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window;
take my mother shall not hear.
I charge you in the band of truth,
I have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
here but an hour, nor speak to me:
as are most strong; and you shall know them,
ck again this ring shall be deliver'd:
our finger, in the night, I'll put ing; that what in time proceeds n to the future our past deeds.
If then; then, fail not: You have won me, though there my hope be done.
heaven on earth I have won, by wooing thee.

[Exit.]
for which live long to thank both Heaven and me!
so in the end.—

er told me just how he would woo, sat in his heart; she says, all men like oaths: he had sworn to marry me, wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him un buried. Since Frenchmen are so braid,<sup>a</sup> it will, I live and die a maid:
this disguise, I think 't no sin him that would unjustly win.

[Exit.]
SCENE III.—The Florentine Camp.

two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.
L You have not given him his mother's letter?
C I have delivered it an hour since: there is in 't that stings his nature; for, on the read-changed almost into another man.
L He has much worthy blame laid upon him,
ge off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.
C Especially he hath incurred the everlasting re of the king, who had even tuned his bounty spiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but let it dwell darkly with you.
L When you have spoken it 't is dead, and I are of it.

L He hath perverted a young gentlewoman
Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this flashes his will in the spoil of her honour: he s her his monumental ring, and thinks himself the unchaste composition.

C Now, God delay our rebellion; as we are what things are we!

L Merely our own traitors. And as in the course of all treasons we still see them reveal e, till they attain to their abhorred ends; so a this action contrives against his own nobility, per stream o'erflows himself.

C Is it not meant damnably in us to be trum-our unlawful intents? We shall not then company to-night?

L Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to L That approaches apace: I would gladly see his company<sup>b</sup> anatomized; that he might measure of his own judgments, wherein so cu-had set this counterfeit.

<sup>a</sup>—crafty, according to Steevens. Horne Tooke has a son that the word here means brayed—as a fool is in a mortar. Mr. Richards<sup>n</sup>, in his Dictionary, but in this passage it bears the sense of violent.
<sup>b</sup>—companion.

2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come;
for his presence must be the whip of the other.

1 Lord. In the mean time, what hear you of these wars?

2 Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.

1 Lord. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

2 Lord. What will count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

1 Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

2 Lord. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a great deal of his act.

1 Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since, fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to saint Jaques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished: and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

2 Lord. How is this justified?

1 Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2 Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1 Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

2 Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

1 Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!

2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1 Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Servant.

How now? where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter BERTRAM.

1 Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now. How now, my lord, is 't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have conge'd with the duke; done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife; mourned for her; writ to my lady mother I am returning; entertained my convoy;
and, between these main parcels of despatch, effected many nicer needs; the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?—Come, bring forth this counterfeit module; he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophesier.

2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Exit Soldiers] he has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood,—he sways like a wench that had died her milk: he hath confessed himself to Mungon, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting; if the stocks: And what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

3 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in 't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me; hush! hush!

1 Lord. Hoodman comes! Forso' durtarous.

1 Sold. He calls for the tortures: What will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint; if ye pinch me like a pesty I can say no more.

1 Sold. Basta chincarcia.

2 Lord. Bobbincio chincarciano.

1 Sold. You are a merciful general:—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1 Sold. "First demand of him how many horse the duke is strong." What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and un-serviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do; I'll take the sacrament on 't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving share is this!

1 Lord. You are deceived, my lord; this is monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist, (that was his own phrase,) that had the whole theoretic of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2 Lord. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have everything in him, by wearing his apparel neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or therabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truth.

1 Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I can him no thanks for 't, in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir; a truth's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.

1 Sold. "Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot." What say you to that?

Par. By my truth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jacques so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowic, and Gratii, two hundred fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, Vsumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each; so that the number-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1 Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down. "You shall demand of him, whether one captain Dumain be 't the camp, a Veremman; what his reputation is with the duke, what 't, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether him to the game of blindman's buff, formerly called

he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt." What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories: Demand them singly.

1 Sold. Do you know this captain Dumain?

Par. I know him; he was a botcher's prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the striere's fool with child; a dumb innocent that could not say him nay. [The First Lord—DUMAIN—lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

1 Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

1 Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

1 Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.

1 Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1 Sold. Here 't is; here's a paper. Shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it, or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

1 Lord. Excellently.

1 Sold.

"Dian. The count's a fool, and full of gold,"—

Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one count Roussillon, a foolish idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish: I pray you, sir, put it up again.

1 Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in 't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy; who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable, both sides rogue!

1 Sold.

"When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;
After he scores, he never pays the score:
Half won is match well made; match, and well make it;
He ne'er pays after debts, take it before;
And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this,
Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss:
For count of this the count's a fool, I know it,
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine, as he vowed to thee in thine ear,
"PAROLLES."

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in his forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and the arnipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by the general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.

1 Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this captain Dumain: You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister; for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such y, that you would think truth were a fool; me is his best virtue; for he will be swindled in his sleep he does little harm, save to his es about him; but they know his conditions, him in straw. I have but little more to say, s honesty: he has everything that an honest ld not have; what an honest man should have, thing.

L. I begin to love him for this.
For this description of thine honesty? A pox for me, he 's more and more a cat.
L. What say you to his expertness in war?
Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the Eng-dians,—to belie him I will not,—and more of ship I know not; except, in that country, he ansour to be the officer at a place there called , to instruct for the doubling of files: I would nan what honour I can, but of this I am not

L. He hath out-villain'd villainy so far, that the seems him.
A pox on him! he 's a cat still.
L. His qualities being at this poor price, I need k you if gold will corrupt him to revolt.
Sir, for a quart d'ecu<sup>a</sup> he will sell the fee-
f his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut l from all remainders, and a perpetual suc-or it perpetually.

L. What 's his brother, the other captain Du-
d. Why does he ask him of me?
L. What 's he?
E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in exceeds his brother for a coward, yet his brother d one of the best that is: In a retreat he any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the

Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile oution of that lascivious young boy the count, un into this danger: Yet who would have sus-n ambush where I was taken? [Aside.]
L. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die:
sal says, you, that have so traitorously discoe secrets of your army, and made such pestiferets of men very nobly held, can serve the world next use; therefore you must die. Come, heads-with his head.

O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my about you: Know you any here?

Good morrow, noble captain.
L. God bless you, captain Parolles.
L. God save you, noble captain.
L. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord
I am for France.

L. Good captain, will you give me a copy of et you writ to Diana in behalf of the count
o? an I were not a very coward I 'd compel it but fare you well. [Exeunt BER., Lords, &c.]
L. You are undone, captain: all but your scarf, a knot on 't yet.

L. Cos—sometimes written cardoue—a French piece being the fourth part of the gold crown.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

L. Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir;
I am for France, too; we shall speak of you there. [Exit.]

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great
'T would burst at this: Captain I 'll be no more;
But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall; simply the thing I am
Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass,
That every braggart shall be found an ass.
Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live
Safest in shame! being fool'd by foolery thrive!
There 's place and means for every man alive.
I 'll after them. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd
you,

One of the greatest in the christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 't is needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel:
Time was, I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude
Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer, thanks: I duly am inform'd
His grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convoy. You must know
I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home; where, Heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We 'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress,
Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love; doubt not, but Heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But O, strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night! so lust doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away:
But more of this hereafter:—You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you,—
But with the word, the time will bring on summer,
When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our waggon is prepar'd,<sup>a</sup> and time revives us:
All 's well that ends well: still the fine 's the crown;<sup>b</sup>
Whate'er the course, the end is the renown. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Rousillon. *A Room in the Countess's
Palace.*

Enter COUNTESS, LAFEU, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipttaffata fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in <sup>a</sup> The probability is that, in using the term waggon in the text, our poet meant a public vehicle. The early coaches were not much unlike waggons.

nis colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him! it was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'T was a good lady, 't was a good lady: we may pick a thousand sallets, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet marjoram of the sallet, or, rather, the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not sallet-herbs, you knave, they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself—a knave or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee; thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who 's that? a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, sir, a has an English name; but his phisnomy is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir, alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there 's my purse: I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they 'll be for the flowery way, that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee;

and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways; let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks; which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.*

Count. So he is. My lord, that 's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 't is not amiss: And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters, that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder 's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on 's face; whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 't is a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so, belike, is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you; I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. 'Faith, there 's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Marseilles. A Street.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it;
But since you have made the days and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Be bold you do so grow in my requital,
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time;—

*Enter a gentle Astringer.**

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Ast. And you.

* An astringer is a falconer. A "gentle astringer" probably meant the head of the king's hawking establishment—not a zensual, but an officer of rank in his household.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.

Ast. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen
From the report that goes upon your goodness;
And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Ast. What 's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the king;
And aid me with that store of power you have,
To come into his presence.

Ast. The king 's not here.

Hel. Not here, sir?

Ast. Not, indeed!

try, as I take it, to Rousillon;
am going.

I do beseech you, sir,
we like to see the king before me,
the paper to his gracious hand;
renew, shall render you no blame,
make you thank your pains for it:

will make us means.

This I'll do for you.

alls more.—We must to horse again;—

last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall

Par. I praise God for you.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—*The same. A Room in the Countess's
Palace.*

Flourish. Enter KING, COUNTESS, LAFEU, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her; and our esteem
Was made much poorer by it: but your son,
As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know
Her estimation home.

Count. 'T is past, my liege:
And I beseech your majesty to make it
Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth;
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
O'erbears it, and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all;
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,—
But first I beg my pardon,—The young lord
Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady,
Offence of mighty note; but to himself
The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took captive;
Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve
Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost,
Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him hither;—

We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition:—Let him not ask our pardon;
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
The incensing relics of it; let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 't is our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. [Exit.]

King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me

That set him high in fame.

Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on 't.

King. I am not a day of season,*
For thou mayst see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once: But to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way; so stand thou forth,
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repent'd blames,
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them: You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege: at first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:

* A day of season—a seasonable day. Sunshine and hail mark a day out of season.

Where the impression of mine eye inflicting,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warr'd the line of every other favour;
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it still;
Extended or contracted all proportions,
To a most hideous object: Thence it came,
That she, whom all men priz'd, and whom myself
Since I have lost have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well expos'd:
That thou didst love her strikes some scars away
From the great count: But love that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, That's good that's gone: our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grace:
Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love waking cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous tokens for fair Maullin:
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Count. Which better than the first, O dear Heaven,
bles!

Or, ere they meet in me, O nature come.

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
Must be digested, give a favour from you,
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come.—By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that ere I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not.

King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to it.—
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessity to help, that by this token
I would relieve her; Had you that craft, to reave
her

Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
How'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought
I stood engag'd;<sup>a</sup> but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 't was mine, 't was Helen's,
Whoever gave it you: Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 't was hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her: she call'd the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,

<sup>a</sup> Engag'd. We think that the lady is represented by Bertram to have considered him "engag'd"—pledged—to herself.

(When you have never come,) or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

King. Thus speak it falsely, as I love mine oaths,
And null't conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out: If it should prove
That thou art an informant,—'t will not prove so;
And yet I know not:—thou didst hate her deadly,
And she's dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—

[Guards seize BERTRAM.
My firm-past proof, how'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd the little.—Away with him;—
We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit BERTRAM, guarded.

Enter the Astringer.

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thoughts.

Laf. Gracious sovereign,

Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not;
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath, for four or five removes,<sup>b</sup> come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know,
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage; and she told me,
In a sweet vestal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.]

"Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Rousillon a widower; his vows are forbidden to me, and by honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking so leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: Grant me, O king; in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone. DIANA CAPULET."

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this: I'll none of him.<sup>c</sup>

King. The Heavens have thought well on thee, Lafes,
To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suitors:
Go speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exeunt the Astringer and some Attendants.
I am afraid the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that?

Re-enter the Astringer, with Widow and DIANA.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capulet;
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count: Do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them: Do they charge me further?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

<sup>a</sup> Removes—stages.

<sup>b</sup> The tolling in a fair was necessary to the validity of a loss gain; and Lafes will get rid of Bertram by toll and sale, according to one reading, or he will buy a son-in-law, and toll him, according to the other.

She 's none of mine, my lord.

If you shall marry,
away this hand, and that is mine ;
away Heaven's vows, and those are mine ;
away myself, which is known mine ;
now am so embodied yours,
which marries you must marry me,
th or none.

Your reputation [to BERTRAM] comes too short oughter ; you are no husband for her.
My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, sometime I have laugh'd with : let your highness ere noble thought upon mine honour, to think that I would sink it here.
Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to
friend,
deeds gain them : Fairer prove your honour,
my thought it lies !

Good my lord,
upon his oath, if he does think not my virginity.

What say'st thou to her ?

She 's impudent, my lord ;
a common gamester to the camp.
He does me wrong, my lord ; if I were so I have bought me at a common price :
believe him : O, behold this ring,
high respect, and rich validity,
a parallel ; yet, for all that,
it to a commoner o' the camp,
me.

He blushes, and 't is it :
ceeding ancestors, that gem
I by testament to the sequent issue, born ow'd and worn. This is his wife ;
g 's a thousand proofs.

Methought, you said,
one here in court could witness it.
I did, my lord, but loth am to produce an instrument ; his name 's Parolles.
I saw the man to-day, if man he be.
Find him, and bring him hither.

What of him ?
sted for a most perfidious slave,
the spots o' the world tax'd and debosh'd ;
sture sickens but to speak a truth :
that, or this, for what he 'll utter,
I speak anything ?

She hath that ring of yours.
I think she has : certain it is I lik'd her,
led<sup>b</sup> her i' the wanton way of youth :
her distance, and did angle for me,
my eagerness with her restraint,
gaelments in fancy's course
res of more fancy ; and, in fine,
it coming with her modern grace,
me to her rate : she got the ring ;
d that which any inferior might t-price have bought.

I must be patient ;
I have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
ly diet me. I pray you yet, as lack virtue I will lose a husband,)
your ring, I will return it home, me mine again.

I have it not.
What ring was yours, I pray you ?
er, much like the same upon your finger.
Know you this ring ? this ring was his of late.
And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.
The story then goes false, you threw it him casement.

I have spoke the truth.

<sup>a</sup> valley—value

<sup>b</sup> Boaried—accoated

Enter PAROLLES.

Ber. My lord, I do confess the ring was hers.

King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts
you.—

Is this the man you speak of ?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you
Not fearing the displeasure of your master,
(Which, on your just proceeding, I 'll keep off.)
By him, and by this woman here, what know you ?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman ; tricks he hath had in him which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose : Did he love this woman ?

Par. 'Faith, sir, he did love her : But how ?

King. How, I pray you ?

Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that ?

Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave:—What an equivocal companion is this !

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He 's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know he promised me marriage ?

Par. 'Faith, I know more than I 'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st ?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty : I did go between them, as I said ; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what : yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed ; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill will to speak of, therefore I will not speak what know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married : But thou art too fine<sup>a</sup> in thy evidence ; therefore stand aside.—This ring, you say, was yours ?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it ? or who gave it you ?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you ?

Dia. It was not lent me neither

King. Where did you find it then ?

Dia. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,

How could you give it him ?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman 's an easy glove, my lord ; she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away, I do not like her now ;

To prison with her : and away with him.—

Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring,

Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I 'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I 'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 't was you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while ?

Dia. Because he 's guilty, and he is not guilty :

He knows I am no maid, and he 'll swear to 't :

I 'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.

Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life :

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Pointing to LAFED.]

<sup>a</sup> Too fine—too full of finesse.

King. She does abuse our ears; to prison with her.

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail.—Stay, royal sir;

[Exit Widow.]

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this lord,
Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him:
He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd;
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick;
So there's my riddle,—One that's dead is quick;
And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with HELENA.

King. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?
Is 't real that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;
'T is but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both; O, pardon!

Hel. O, my good lord, when I was like this maid,
I found you wond'rous kind. There is your ring,
And, look you, here 's your letter: This it says,
"When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child," &c.—This is done:
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clear,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you!—
O, my dear mother, do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon:
Good Tom Drum [to PAROLLES] lend me a hand!
chief: So, I thank thee; wait on me home, I'll m sport with thee: Let thy courtesies alone, they scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow:—
If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower, [To DIAI]
Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower,
For I can guess, that, by thy honest aid,
Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.—
Of that and all the progress, more and less,
Resolvedly more leisure shall express:
All yet seems well; and, if it end so meet,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet. [Flouri]

(Advancing.)

The king's a beggar, now the play is done:
All is well ended, if this suit be won,
That you express content; which we will pay,
With strife to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts:
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

[Exeun]

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'A MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM' was first printed in 1609. In that year there appeared two editions of the play;—the one published by Thomas Fisher, a bookseller; the other by James Roberts, a printer. The differences between these two editions are very slight. The play was not reprinted after 1609, till it was collected into the folio of 1623; and the text in that edition differs in few instances from that of the quartos.

Malone has assigned the composition of 'A Midsummer-Night's Dream' to the year 1594. We are not disposed to dissent from this; but we entirely object to the reason upon which Malone attempts to show that it was one of our author's "earliest attempts in comedy." It appears to us a misapplication of the received meaning of words, to talk of "the warmth of a youthful and lively imagination" with reference to 'A Midsummer-Night's Dream' and the Shakspeare of thirty. Of all the dramas of Shakspeare there is none more entirely harmonious than 'A Midsummer-Night's Dream.' All the incidents, all the characters, are in perfect subordination to the will of the poet. "Throughout the whole piece," says Malone, "the more exalted characters are subservient to the interests of those beneath them." Precisely so. An unpractised author—one who had not "a youthful and lively imagination" under perfect control—when he had got hold of the Theseus and Hippolyta of the heroic ages, would have made them ultra-heroical. They would have commanded events, instead of moving with the supernatural influence around them in harmony and proportion. An immature poet, again, if the marvellous creation of Oberon and Titania and Puck could have entered into such a mind, would have laboured to make the power of the fairies produce some strange and striking events. But the exquisite beauty of Shakspeare's conception is, that, under the supernatural influence, "the human mortals" move precisely according to their respective natures and habits. Demetrius and Lysander are impatient and revengeful;—Helena is dignified and affectionate, with a spice of female error;—Hermia is somewhat vain and shrewish. And then Bottom! Who but the most skilful artist could have given us such a character? Of him Malone says, "Shakspeare would naturally copy those manners first with which he was first acquainted. The ambition of a theatrical candidate for applause he has happily ridiculed in Bottom the weaver." A theatrical candidate for applause! Why, Bottom the weaver is the representative of the whole human race. His confidence in his own power is equally profound, whether he exclaims, "Let me play the lion too;" or whether he sings alone, "that they shall hear I am not afraid;" or whether, conscious that he is surrounded with spirits, he cries out, with his voice of authority, "Where 's Peas-blossom?" In every situation Bottom is the same,—the same personification of that self-love which the simple cannot conceal, and the wise can with difficulty suppress. Lastly, in the whole rhythmical structure of the versification, the poet has put forth all his strength. We venture to offer an opinion that, if any single composition were required to exhibit the power of the English language for purposes of poetry, that composition would be the 'Midsummer-Night's Dream.' This wonderful model, which, at the time it appeared, must have been the commencement of a great poetical revolution,—and which has never ceased to influence our higher poetry from Fletcher to Shelley,—was, according to Malone, the work of "the genius of Shakspeare, even in its minority."

"This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard," says Hippolyta, when Wall has "discharged" his part. The answer of Theseus is full of instruction:—"The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse if imagination amend them." It was in this humble spirit that the great poet judged of his own matchless performances. He felt the utter inadequacy of his art, and indeed of any art, to produce its due effect upon the mind, unless the imagination, to which it addressed itself, was ready to convert the shadows which it presented into living forms of truth and beauty. "I am convinced," says Coleridge, "that Shakspeare availed himself of the title of this play in his own mind, and worked upon it as a dream throughout." The poet says so, in express words:—

"If we shadows have offended,
Think but this (and all is mended),
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend."

But to understand this dream—to have all its gay, and soft, and harmonious colours impressed upon the vision—to hear all the golden cadences of its poetry—to feel the perfect congruity of all its parts, and thus to receive it as a truth—we must not suppose that it will enter the mind amidst the lethargic slumbers of the imagination. We must receive it—

"As youthful poets dream
On summer eves by haunted stream."

To offer an analysis of this subtle and ethereal drama would, we believe, be as unsatisfactory as the attempts to associate it with the realities of the stage. With scarcely an exception, the proper understanding of the other plays of Shakspeare may be assisted by connecting the apparently separate parts of the action, and by developing and reconciling what seems obscure and anomalous in the features of the characters. But to follow out the caprices and illusions of the loves of Demetrius and Lysander,—of Helena and Hermia;—to reduce to prosaic description the consequence of the jealousies of Oberon and Titania;—to trace the Fairy Queen under the most fantastic of deceptions, where grace and vulgarity blend together like the Cupids and Chimeras of Raphael's Arabesques;—and, finally, to go along with the scene till the illusions disappear—till the lovers are happy, and "sweet bully Bottom" is reduced to an ass of human dimensions;—such an attempt as this would be worse even than unreverential criticism. No,—the 'Midsummer-Night's Dream' must be left to its own influences.

SCENE.—ATHENS, AND A WOOD NEAR.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Room in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, and Attendants.

Theseus. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace: four happy days bring in
Her moon: but, oh, methinks, how slow
Old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame, or a dowager,
Withering out a young man's revenue.
Four days will quickly steep themselves in Nights;
Nights will quickly dream away the time;
When the moon, like to a silver bow
Bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of solemnities.

Theseus. Go, Philostrate,
To fetch the Athenian youth to merriments;
Let the pest and nimble spirit of mirth
Lead melancholy forth to funerals,
The pale companion is not for our pomp. [Exit PHIL.]
Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword,
I won thy love, doing thee injuries;
I will wed thee in another key,
To pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter EGEUS, HERMIA, LYSANDER, and DEMETRIUS.
Egeus. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!

The word duke was a corruption of the Latin dux, which indiscriminately applied to any military chief. Chaucer calls Theseus—Gower, duke Spartacus,—Stanyhurst, duke
was. The word is also used in our translation of the Bible.

The. Thanks, good Egeus: What's the news with thee?

Egeus. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth, Demetrius: My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.—
Stand forth, Lysander:—and, my gracious duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child:
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child:
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats; messengers
Of strong prevailment in unhardened youth:
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;
Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness:—And, my gracious duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens:
As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death; according to our law,
Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you, Hermia? Be advis'd, fair maid:

To you your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a firm in wax,
By him imprinted, and with his power

To leave the figure, or disfigure it.

Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.

The. In himself he is :

But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.

Her. I do entreat your grace to pardon me.

I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty,
In such a presence here, to plead my thoughts :
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.

Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun ;
For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage :
But earthly happier<sup>a</sup> is the rose distill'd,
Than that, which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship,<sup>b</sup> whose unwish'd yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.<sup>c</sup>

The. Take time to pause ; and, by the next new moon,
(The sealing-day betwixt my love and me,
For everlasting bond of fellowship,)
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your father's will ;
Or else, to wed Demetrius, as he would ;
Or on Diana's altar to protest,
For aye, austerity and single life.

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia :—And, Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius ;
Let me have Hermia's : do you marry him.

Ege. Scornful Lysander ! true, he hath my love ;
And what is mine my love shall render him ;
And she is mine ; and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd ; my love is more than his,
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius' ;
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia :
Why should not I then prosecute my right ?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul ; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted<sup>d</sup> and inconstant man.

The. I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof ;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come ;
And come, Egeus ; you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.
*See you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will ;*

<sup>c</sup> This is one of those elliptical expressions which frequently occur in our poet : it must be understood after sovereignty.

Or else the law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.

Come, my Hippolyta : What cheer, my love ?
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along :

I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial ; and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Ege. With duty and desire, we follow you.

[Exeunt THEA, HERMIA, EGEO, DEM., and TRIN.]

Lys. How now, my love ? Why is your cheek so pale ?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast ?

Her. Belike for want of rain ; which I could well
Beteem<sup>a</sup> them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Ah me ! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth :

But, either it was different in blood ;—

Her. O cross ! too high to be enthralld to low !

Lys. Or else misgraffed, in respect of years ;—

Her. O spite ! too old to be engag'd to young !

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends ;—

Her. O hell ! to choose love by another's eye !

Lys. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it ;
Making it momentary as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied<sup>b</sup> night,
That, in a spleen,<sup>c</sup> unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say,—Behold !
The jaws of darkness do devour it up :
So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true lovers have been ever cross'd,
It stands as an edict in destiny :

Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross ;
As due to love, as thoughts, and dreams, and sighs,
Wishes, and tears, poor fancy's followers.<sup>d</sup>

Lys. A good persuasion ; therefore, hear me, Hermia,
I have a widow aunt, a dowager
Of great revenue, and she hath no child ;
From Athens is her house remov'd seven leagues ;
And she respects me as her only son.
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee ;
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us : If thou lov'st me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night ;
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander !

I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow ;
By his best arrow with the golden head ;
By the simplicity of Venus' doves ;
By that which knitteth souls, and prospers loves,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen ;
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke ;
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love : Look, here comes Helena

Enter HELENA.

Her. God speed fair Helena ! Whither away ?

Hel. Call you me fair ? that fair again unsay.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in a Cottage.

Enter SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOUT, QUINCE, and STARVELING.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.<sup>a</sup>

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and the duchess, on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors; and so grow on to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is—The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll: Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest:—Yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Eracles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

"The raging rocks,
 And shivering shocks,
 Shall break the locks
 Of prison-gates;
 And Phibbus' car
 Shall shine from far,
 And make and mar
 The foolish fates."

This was lofty!—Now name the rest of the players.—
 This is Eracles<sup>b</sup> vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flu. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman; I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask,<sup>c</sup> and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice;—"Thisne, Thisne,—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby
 dear! and lady dear!"

Quin. No, no, you must play Pyramus; and, Flute you, Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

<sup>b</sup> Eracles—Hercules—was one of the roaring heroes of the rude drama, which preceded Shakspeare.

<sup>c</sup> In Shakspeare's time the parts of women were personated by men and boys. The objection of Flute, that he had "a beard coming," was doubtless a common objection; and the remedy was equally common—"You shall play it in a mask."

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus's father; myself, Thisby's father; Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part:—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too: I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, "Let him roar again, let him roar again."

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us; but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an't were any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus: for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-coloured beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.—But, masters, here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night: and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight; there we will rehearse: for if we meet in the city we shall be dogg'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time I will draw a bill of properties<sup>a</sup> such as our play wants. I pray you fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough. Hold, or cut bow-strings.<sup>b</sup> [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Wood near Athens.

Enter a Fairy on one side, and Puck on the other.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,

Thorough bush, thorough brier,

Over park, over pale,

Thorough flood, thorough fire,

I do wander everywhere,

Swifter than the moon's sphere;

And I serve the fairy queen,

To dew her orbs<sup>a</sup> upon the green:

The cowslips tall her pensioners<sup>b</sup> be;

In their gold coats spots you see;

Those be rubies, fairy favours,

In those freckles live their savours:

Must go seek some dew-drops here,

And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

Farewell, thou lob<sup>c</sup> of spirits, I'll be gone;

Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to-night;

Take heed the queen come not within his sight.

For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,

Because that she, as her attendant, hath

A lovely boy stol'n from an Indian king;

She never had so sweet a changeling:<sup>d</sup>

And jealous Oberon would have the child

Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild:

But she, perforce, withholds the loved boy,

Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy:

And now they never meet in grove, or green,

By fountain clear, or spangled starlight sheen,

But they do square;<sup>e</sup> that all their elves, for fear,

Creep into acorn-cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite, Call'd Robin Goodfellow; are you not he,
That frights the maidens of the villagery;
Skim milk; and sometimes labour in the quern;<sup>a</sup>
And bootless make the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime make the drink to bear no barm;<sup>d</sup>
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good luck:
Are not you he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a filly foal:
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither'd dewlap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And "Tailor" cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips and loffe,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.—
But room, Fairy, here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress:—Would that ne were gone!

SCENE II.—Enter OBERON, on one side, with his Train, and TITANIA, on the other, with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania.
Tita. What, jealous Oberon? Fairy, skip hence;
I have forsworn his bed and company.

<sup>a</sup> Properties. The person who has charge of the wooden swords, and pasteboard shields, and other trumpery required for the business of the stage, is still called the property man.

<sup>b</sup> A proverbial expression derived from the days of archery.—"When a party was made at butts, assurance of meeting was given in the words of that phrase."

Carry, rash wanton. Am not I thy lord?
 Then I must be thy lady: But I know thou hast stolen away from fairy land, in shape of Corin sat all day,
 in pipes of corn, and versing love
 as Phillida. Why art thou here, in the farthest steep of India?
 forsooth, the bouncing Amazon,
 thy mistress, and your warrior love,
 as must be wedded; and you come for bed joy and prosperity.
 How canst thou thus, for shame, Titania,
 thy credit with Hippolyta,
 I know thy love to Theseus?
 Thou shalt not lead him through the glimmering night in genia, unless he ravished?
 Thou shalt not lead him with fair Æglé break his faith,
 and Antiope?
 These are the forgeries of jealousy:
 Thou shalt not, since the middle summer's spring,
 in a hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
 fountain,<sup>b</sup> or by rushy brook,
 beached margent of the sea,
 our ringlets to the whistling wind,
 thy brows thou hast disturb'd our sport.
 The winds, piping to us in vain,
 once have suck'd up from the sea
 the fogs; which, falling in the land, have pelting a river made so proud,
 have overcome their continents:<sup>d</sup>
 Thou therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
 the man lost his sweat; and the green corn shall ere his youth attain'd a beard:
 The sands empty in the drowned field,
 are fasted with the murrain flock;
 men's morris is fill'd up with mud;<sup>e</sup> quaint mazes in the wanton green,
 if tread, are undistinguishable;
 in mortals' want; their winter here,<sup>f</sup> is now with hymn or carol bless'd:—
 the moon, the governess of floods, her anger, washes all the air,
 her matic diseases do abound:
 though this distemperature, we see is alter: hoary-headed frosts in fresh lap of the crimson rose;
 and Hyems' chin, and icy crown,
 in chaplet of sweet summer buds
 mockery, set: The spring, the summer, in autumn, angry winter, change their liveries; and the mazed world, increase,<sup>h</sup> now knows not which is which:
 the same progeny of evils comes to debate, from our dissension;
 their parents and original.
 Will you amend it then: it lies in you:
 Will Titania cross her Oberon?

summer's spring. The spring is the beginning—as False day, a common expression in our early writers.
summer is the midsummer.
fountain—a fountain, or clear stream, rushing over certainly not an artificially paved fountain.
 —poetry, contemptible.
the sands. A conceit is that which contains the error of their commons the shepherds and of England were wont to cut a rude series of lines, they arranged eighteen stones, divided between two to mow them alternately, as at chess or draughts, he was finished by one of the players having all his is impounded. This was the nine men's morris.
quaint. Chapman, in his 'Homer,' has an inversion —"mortal humans."
in mortals' want. Their winter is here—is come—he season is the latter summer, or autumn; and in the hymns and carols which gladdened the nights able winter are wanting to this premature one.
 —producing.
 —produce.

I do but beg a little changeling boy,
 To be my henchman.<sup>a</sup>

Tita. Set your heart at rest,
 The fairy land buys not the child of me.
 His mother was a votress of my order:
 And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
 Full often hath she gossip'd by my side;
 And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
 Marking th' embarked traders on the flood;
 When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive,
 And grow big-bellied, with the wanton wind:
 Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait,
 Following (her womb then rich with my young squire),
 Would imitate; and sail upon the land,
 To fetch me trifles, and return again,
 As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
 But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
 And, for her sake, I do rear up her boy:
 And, for her sake, I will not part with him.

Obe. How long within this wood intend you stay?

Tita. Perchance, till after Theseus' wedding-day.

If you will patiently dance in our round,
 And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
 If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom. Fairies, away:
 We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.

[Exit TITANIA and her Train.

Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove,

Till I torment thee for this injury.

My gentle Puck, come hither: Thou remember'st

Since once I sat upon a promontory,

And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,

Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,

That the rude sea grew civil at her song;

And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,

To hear the sea-maid's music.

Puck. I remember.

Obe. That very time I saw, (but thou couldst not,) Flying between the cold moon and the earth,

Cupid all arm'd; a certain aim he took

At a fair vestal, throned by the west;

And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,

As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:

But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft

Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon;

And the imperial votaress passed on,

In maiden meditation, fancy-free.

Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:

It fell upon a little western flower,—

Before, milk-white; now, purple with love's wound,—

And maidens call it love-in-idleness.

Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee once;

The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid,

Will make or man or woman madly dote

Upon the next live creature that it sees.

Fetch me this herb: and be thou here again,

Ere the leviathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth

In forty minutes. [Exit Puck.

Obe. Having once this juice,

I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,

And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:

The next thing then she waking looks upon,

(Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
 On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,)

She shall pursue it with the soul of love.

And ere I take this charm off from her sight,

(As I can take it, with another herb,)

I'll make her render up her page to me.

But who comes here? I am invisible;

And I will overhear their conference.

<sup>a</sup> Henchman—a page; originally a horseman.

Enter DEMETRIUS, HELENA following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia?
The one I'll stay, the other stayeth me.
Thou told'st me, they were stol'n into this wood,
And here am I, and wood<sup>a</sup> within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant;
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you—I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more.
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What wosser place can I beg in your love,
(And yet a place of high respect with me,
Than to be used as you use your dog?)

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit;

For I am sick when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am sick when I look not on you.

Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,
To leave the city, and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
To trust the opportunity of night,
And the ill counsel of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my privilege for that.
It is not night, when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night:
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company;
For you, in my respect, are all the world:
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
Makes speed to catch the tiger: Bootless speed!
When cowardice pursues, and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go:
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, and field,
You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!
Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex:
We cannot fight for love, as men may do:
We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo.
I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.

[Exeunt DEM. and HEL.

Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this
grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Re-enter PUCK.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.

Puck. Ay, there it is.

Obe. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where ox-lips and the nodding violet grows;
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine

<sup>a</sup> Wood—wild, mad.

There sleeps Titania, some time of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:
A sweet Athenian lady is in love
With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
But do it when the next thing he espies
May be the lady: Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care; that he may prove
More fond on her, than she upon her love:
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.
[Exeunt

SCENE III.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter TITANIA, with her Train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel, and a fairy song;
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds;
Some, war with rear-mice<sup>a</sup> for their leathern wings,
To make my small elves coats; and some, keep back
The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots and wonders
At our quaint spirits: Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

SONG.

I.

1 Fai. You spotted snakes, with double tongue,
Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen;
Newts, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen:

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby;
Never harm, nor spell nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.

II.

2 Fai. Weaving spiders, come not here;
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence;
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm, nor snail, do no offence.

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody, &c.

2 Fai. Hence, away; now all is well:
One, aloof, stand sentinel.

[Exeunt Fairies. TITANIA sleepeth.

Enter OBERON.

Obe. What thou seest, when thou dost wake, [Squeezes the flower on TITANIA'S eye
Do it for thy true-love take;
Love and languish for his sake:
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear
Wake, when some vile thing is near.

Enter LYSANDER and HERMIA.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in wood;
And, to speak troth, I have forgot our way;
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

<sup>a</sup> Rear-lice—bats.

it so, Lysander, find you out a bed,
 this bank will rest my head.
 e turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
 one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.
 ay, good Lysander; for my sake, my ar,
 off yet, do not lie so near.
 take the sense, sweet, of my innocence;
 the meaning, in love's conference.
 t my heart unto yours is knit;
 one heart we can make of it:
 interchained with an oath;
 bosoms, and a single troth.
 ur side, no bed-room me deny;
 o, Hermia, I do not lie.
 ander riddles very prettily:—
 beshrew my manners and my pride, meant to say, Lysander lied.
 friend, for love and courtesy off; in human modesty
 tion, as, may well be said,
 virtuous bachelor and a maid:
 stant; and good night, sweet friend:
 er alter, till thy sweet life end!
 en, Amen, to that fair prayer say I;
 id life, when I end loyalty!
 bed: Sleep give thee all his rest!
 th half that wish the wisher's eyes be press'd!

[They sleep.]

Enter Puck.

rough the forest have I gone,
 it Athenian find I none, whose eyes I might approve as flower's force in stirring love.
 ight and silence! who is here?
 eads of Athens he doth wear:
 as is he my master said
 spised the Athenian maid;
 d here the maiden, sleeping sound,
 the dank and dirty ground.
 etty soul! she durst not lie ar this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
 url, upon thy eyes I throw the power this charm doth owe:
 hen thou wak'st, let love forbid
 ep his seat on thy eyelid.
 awake, when I am gone;
 t I must now to Oberon.

[Exit.]

DEMETRIUS and HELENA, running.

though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
 barge thee, hence, and do not haunt me
 a.
 ilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
 , on thy peril; I alone will go. [Exit DEM.] am out of breath in this fond chase!
 r prayer, the lesser is my grace.
 ermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
 blessed and attractive eyes.
 er eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
 s are oftener wash'd than hers.
 as ugly as a bear;
 at meet me run away for fear:

Therefore, no marvel, though Demetrius
 Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
 What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
 Made me compare with Hermia's spherish eyne?
 But who is here?—Lysander! on the ground!
 Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound!
 Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

[Waking.]

Transparent Helena! Nature shows her art,
 That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
 Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
 Is that vile name to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so:
 What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.

Lys. Content with Hermia? No: I do repent
 The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
 Not Hermia, but Helena now I love:
 Who will not change a raven for a dove?
 The will of man is by his reason sway'd:
 And reason says you are the worthier maid.
 Things growing are not ripe until their season;
 So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
 And touching now the point of human skill,
 Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
 And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
 Love's stories, written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?

When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?

Is 't not enough, is 't not enough, young man,

That I did never, no, nor never can,

Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,

But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do,

In such disdainful manner me to woo.

But fare you well: perforce I must confess,

I thought you lord of more true gentleness.

O, that a lady of one man refus'd

Should of another therefore be abus'd!

[Exit.]

Lys. She sees not Hermia:—Hermia, sleep thou

there;

And never mayst thou come Lysander near!

For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things

The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;

Or, as the heresies that men do leave

Are hated most of those they did deceive;

So thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,

Of all be hated; but the most of me!

And all my powers address your love and might

To honour Helen, and to be her knight.

[Exit.]

Her. [starting.] Help me, Lysander, help me! do thy best

To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!

Ah me, for pity!—what a dream was here!

Lysander, look how I do quake with fear!

Methought a serpent ate my heart away,

And you sat smiling at his cruel prey:

Lysander! what, remov'd? Lysander! lord!

What, out of hearing? gone? no sound, no word?

Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear;

Speak, of all loves; I swoon almost with fear.

No?—then I well perceive you are not nigh:

Either death, or you, I'll find immediately.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Wood. The Queen of Fairies lying asleep.

Enter QUINCE, SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOOT, and STARVELING.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here 's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal: This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,—

Quin. What say'st thou, Bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of 'Pyramus and Thisby' that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'r'lakin,<sup>a</sup> a parlous<sup>b</sup> fear.

Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit; I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue: and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords; and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and, for the more better assurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and six.<sup>c</sup>

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing: for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect,—Ladies, or fair ladies, I would wish you, or I would request you, or I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: No, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are: and there, indeed, let him name his name; and tell them plainly he is Snug the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things; that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanac; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber-window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say, he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of moonshine. Then there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

<sup>c</sup> Eight and six—alternate verses of eight and six syllables.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall.—What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall: and let him have some plaster, or some lome, or some rough-cut about him, to signify wall; or let him hold his finger thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

Enter PUCK behind.

Puck. What hempen homespuns have we swaggering here,

So near the cradle of the fairy queen?

What, a play toward? I'll be an auditor;

An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus:—Thisby, stand forth.

Pyr. Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweet;

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pyr. — odours savours sweet:

So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.

But, hark, a voice! stay thou but here a while,

And by and by I will to thee appear. [Exit.]

Puck. A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here! [Aside.—Exit.]

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you: for you must understand he goes but to see a noise<sup>a</sup> that he heard, and is to come again.

This. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily white of hue,

Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,

Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew,

As true as trust horse that yet would never tire,

I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb.

Quin. Ninus' tomb, man: Why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all.—Pyramus, enter; your cue is past; it is, "never tire."

Re-enter PUCK, and BOTTOM with an ass's head.

This. O,—As true as trust horse, that yet would never tire.

Pyr. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine:—

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.

Pray, masters! fly, masters! help! [Exit Clown.]

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round,

Through bog, through bush, through brake, through brier;

Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,

A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire;

And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and hum,

Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn. [Exit.]

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them to make me afeard.

Re-enter SNOOT.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass-head of your own: Do you?

Re-enter QUINCE.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated. [Exit.]

<sup>a</sup> Quince's description of Bottom going "to see a noise" akin to Sir Toby Belch's notion of "to hear by the nose" ("Twelfth Night," Act II. Scene 3.)

The wren with little quill ;
 That angel wakes me from my flowery bed ?

The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
 The plain-song cuckoo gray,
 Whose note full many a man doth mark,
 And dares not answer, nay—
 Who would set his wit to so foolish a bird ?
 To give a bird the lie, though he cry "Cuckoo,"

Pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again :
 My much enamour'd of thy note,
 My eye enthralled to thy shape ;
 And virtue's force perforce doth move me,
 To view, to say, to swear, I love thee.
 He thinks, mistress, you should have little reason
 And yet, to say the truth, reason and love
 Keep company together now-a-days : The more the
 Some honest neighbours will not make them

So art as wise as thou art beautiful.
 I so, neither : but if I had wit enough to get

 I purge thy mortal grossness so,

 with apricocks, and dewberries ;
 with grapes, green figs, and mulberries ;
 they steal from the humble-bees,
 they tapers, crop their waxen thighs,
 they see at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
 they love to bed, and to arise ;
 they see the wings from painted butterflies,
 they see the moonbeams from his sleeping eyes :
 they do him courtesies.

Oh, mortal !

Oh !

Oh !

Oh !

Pray your worships mercy, heartily.—I be-

Exeunt.

It is of ass or ass expressed the blackbird in av. It is used by Drayton as synonymous with an which there can be no doubt) in his descriptions of woodlands" of the Warwickshire Arden.
 This verb is generally used in the sense of to scuff ;
 head Bottom only means to say that he can joke.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master Cobweb : If I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman ?

Peas. Peas-blossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to mistress Squash, your mother, and to master Peas-cod, your father. Good master Peas-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.—Your name, I beseech you, sir ?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well : that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beer hath devoured many a gentleman of your house : I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come, wait upon him ; lead him to my bower.

The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye ;

And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,

Lamenting some enforced chastity.

Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently. [Ex.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter OBERON.

Obe. I wonder, if Titania be awak'd ;
 Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
 Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter PUCK.

Here comes my messenger.—How now, mad spirit ?
 What night-rule<sup>a</sup> now about this haunted grove ?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love.

Near to her close and consecrated bower,

While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,

A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,

That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,

Were met together to rehearse a play,

Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day.

The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,

Who Pyramus presented, in their sport

Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake :

When I did him at this advantage take,

An ass's now<sup>b</sup> I fixed on his head ;

Anon, his Thisbe must be answered,

And forth my mimic<sup>c</sup> comes : When they him spy,

As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,

Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,

Rising and cawing at the gun's report,

Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky ;

So at his sight away his fellows fly :

And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls :

He murmur cries, and help from Athens calls.

Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong ;

For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch ;

Some, sleeves ; some, hats ; from yielders all things catch.

I led them on in this distracted fear,

And left sweet Pyramus translated there :

When in that moment (so it came to pass)

Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

Obe. This falls out better than I could devise.

But hast thou yet latch'd<sup>d</sup> the Athenian's eyes

With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do ?

Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd too,—

And the Athenian woman by his side ;

That when he wak'd of force she must be ey'd.

Enter DEMETRIUS and HERMIA.

Obe. Stand close ; this is the same Athenian.

<sup>a</sup> Night-rule—night-revel. The old spelling of revel became rule ; and by this corruption we obtained "the lord of misrule."

<sup>d</sup> Latch'd—licked o'er

Puck. This is the woman, but not this the man.
Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so?
 Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.
Her. Now I but chide, but I should use thee worse;
 For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
 If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
 Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
 And kill me too.
 The sun was not so true unto the day,
 As he to me: Would he have stolen away
 From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon,
 This whole earth may be bor'd; and that the moon
 May through the centre creep, and so displease
 Her brother's nuptial with the Antipodes.
 It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him;
 So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murder'd look; and so should I,
 Pierc'd through the heart with your stern cruelty:
 Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
 As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
 Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I'd rather give his carcase to my hounds.
Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds

Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then?
 Henceforth be never number'd among men!
 Oh! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake;
 Durst thou have look'd upon him, being awake,
 And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!
 Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
 An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
 Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood:
 I am not guilty of Lysander's blood;
 Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.

Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A privilege never to see me more.—

And from thy hated presence part I so:

See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit.]

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein:

Here, therefore, for a while I will remain.

So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow

For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;

Which now, in some slight measure, it will pay,

If for thy tender here I make some stay. [Lies down.]

Obe. What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken quite,

And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight:

Of thy misprision must perforce ensue

Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.

Puck. Then fate o'er-rules; that one man holding troth,

A million fail, confounding oath on oath.

Obe. About the wood go swifter than the wind,

And Helena of Athens look thou find:

All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer*

With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear.

By some illusion see thou bring her here;

I'll charm his eyes against she doth appear.

Puck. I go, I go; look, how I go;

Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit.]

Obe. Flower of this purple die,

Hit with Cupid's archery,

Sink in apple of his eye!

When his love he doth espay

Let her shine as gloriously

As the Venus of the sky.

When thou wak'st, if she be by

Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter PUCK.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
 Helena is here at hand.

* Cheer—lacc.

And the youth, mistook by me,
 Pleading for a lover's fee;
 Shall we their fond pageant see?
 Lo! what fools these mortals be!

Obe. Stand aside: the noise they make
 Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Puck. Then will two at once woo one—
 That must needs be sport alone;
 And these things do best please me,
 That befall preposterously.

Enter LYSANDER and HELENA.

Lys. Why should you think that I should woo scorn?

Scorn and derision never come in tears.

Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,

In their nativity all truth appears.

How can these things in me seem scorn to you;

Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true?

Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more

When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray!

These vows are Hermia's; Will you give her o'

Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh

Your vows to her and me, put in two scales,

Will even weigh; and both as light as tales.

Lys. I had no judgment, when to her I swore.

Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.

Dem. [awaking.] O Helen, goddess, nymph, <sup>and</sup> <sup>perfect,</sup> divine!

To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne?

Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show

Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!

That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow,

Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow,

When thou hold'st up thy hand: O, let me kiss

This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!

Hel. O, spite! O, hell! I see you are all bent

To set against me, for your merriment.

If you were civil and knew courtesy,

You would not do me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you do,

But you must join, in souls, to mock me too?

If you were men, as men you are in show,

You would not use a gentle lady so.

To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,

When, I am sure, you hate me with your hearts.

You both are rivals, and love Hermia;

And now both rivals, to mock Helena:

A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,

To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes

With your derision! None of noble sort

Would so offend a virgin; and extort

A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport

Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so;

For you love Hermia: this, you know, I know:

And here, with all good will, with all my heart,

In Hermia's love I yield you up my part;

And yours of Helena to me bequeath,

Whom I do love, and will do to my death.

Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.

Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will none

If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone.

My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd;

And now to Helen it is home return'd,

There to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.

Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know

I, lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear.—

Look, where thy love comes; yonder is thy dear.

Enter HERMIA.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function t

The ear more quick of apprehension makes;

doth impair the seeing sense,
 hearing double recompense :
 not by mine eye, Lysander, found ;
 I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
 unkindly didst thou leave me so ?
 why should he stay whom love doth press to go ?
 that love could press Lysander from my side ?
 Lysander's love, that would not let him bide ;
 na ; who more engilds the night than fiery oes<sup>a</sup> and eyes of light.
 at thou me ? could not this make thee know,
 I have thee made me leave thee so ?
 can speak not as you think ; it cannot be.
 she is one of this confederacy !
 receive they have conjoin'd, all three,
 this false sport in spite of me.
 Hermia ! most ungrateful maid !
 conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd with this foul derision ?
 counsel that we two have shar'd,
 O vows, the hours that we have spent,
 have chid the hasty-footed time of us,—O, and is all forgot ?
 days' friendship, childhood innocence ?
 us, like two artificial gods,
 our needles created both one flower,
 our sampler, sitting on one cushion,
 sing of one song, both in one key ;
 and, our sides, voices, and minds, incorporate. So we grew together, like double cherry, seeming parted ;
 but union in partition,
 two berries moulded on one stem :
 so seeming bodies, but one heart,
 first, like coats in heraldry, separate, and crown'd with one crest<sup>b</sup>
 you rent our ancient love asunder, its men in scorning your poor friend ?
 cruelly, 't is not maidenly :
 as well as I, may chide you for it ;
 alone do feel the injury.
 am amazed at your passionate words :
 a not ; it seems that you scorn me.
 ave you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
 me, and praise my eyes and face ?
 your other love, Demetrius,
 but now did spurn me with his foot,
 goddess, nymph, divine, and rare, celestial ! Wherefore speaks he this hates ? and wherefore doth Lysander love, so rich within his soul,
 for me, forsooth, affection ;
 or setting on, by your consent ?
 igh I be not so in grace as you,
 gone with love, so fortunate ;
 able most, to love unlov'd !
 should pity, rather than despise.
 understand not what you mean by this.
 g, do, persevere, counterfeit sad looks,
 this upon me when I turn my back ;
 as at other ; hold the sweet jest up :
 well carried, shall be chronicled.
 any pity, grace, or manners,
 I do not make me such an argument.
 as well : 't is partly mine own fault,
 with, or absence, soon shall remedy.
 ay, gentle Helena ; hear my excuse,
 my life, my soul, fair Helena !

<sup>a</sup> oes.
<sup>b</sup> is a double comparison here—1st, Of the two bodies, in two crests of heraldry ; and, 2ndly, Of the one joined to the one crest and the one owner. "Our two, but they are as united under one heart, as two are (when quartered or impaled) are borne by one and the same crest."

Hel. O, excellent !
Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat ;
 Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.—
Helen, I love thee ; by my life I do ;
 I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
 To prove him false that says I love thee not.
Dem. I say, I love thee more than he can do.
Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.
Dem. Quick, come,—
Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this ?
Lys. Away, you Ethiopie !
Dem. No, no, sir :—
 Seem to break loose ; take on, as you would follow ;
 But yet come not : You are a tame man, go !
Lys. Hang off, thou cat, thou burr : vile thing, let loose ;
 Or I will shake thee from me, like a serpent.
Her. Why are you grown so rude ? what change is this,
 Sweet love ?
Lys. Thy love ? out, tawny Tartar, out
 Out, loathed medicine ! O, hated poison, hence
Her. Do you not jest ?
Hel. Yes, 'sooth ; and so do you.
Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond ; for I perceive
 A weak bond holds you ; I 'll not trust your word.
Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead ?
 Although I hate her, I 'll not harm her so.
Her. What, can you do me greater harm than hate ?
 Hate me ! wherefore ? O me ! what news, my love ?
 Am not I Hermia ? Are not you Lysander ?
 I am as fair now as I was erewhile.
 Since night you lov'd me ; yet, since night you left me :
 Why then you left me,—O, the gods forbid !
 In earnest, shall I say ?
Lys. Ay, by my life ;
 And never did desire to see thee more.
 Therefore, be out of hope, of question, of doubt,
 Be certain, nothing truer, 't is no jest,
 That I do hate thee, and love Helena.
Her. O me ! you juggler ! you canker-blossom !
 You thief of love ! what, have you come by night,
 And stol'n my love's heart from him ?
Hel. Fine, i' faith !
 Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
 No touch of bashfulness ? What, will you tear
 Impatient answers from my gentle tongue ?
 Fie, fie ! you counterfeit, you puppet, you !
Her. Puppet ! why so ? Ay, that way goes the game
 Now I perceive that she hath made compare
 Between our statures, she hath urg'd her height ;
 And with her personage, her tall personage,
 Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.
 And are you grown so high in his esteem,
 Because I am so dwarfish, and so low ?
 How low am I, thou painted maypole ? speak ;
 How low am I ? I am not yet so low,
 But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,
 Let her not hurt me : I was never curst ;<sup>a</sup>
 I have no gift at all in shrewishness ;
 I am a right maid for my cowardice ;
 Let her not strike me : You, perhaps, may think,
 Because she 's something lower than myself,
 That I can match her.
Her. Lower ! hark, again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
 I evermore did love you, Hermia.

<sup>a</sup> Curst—shrewish man.

Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you ;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood :
He follow'd you ; for love, I follow'd him.
But he hath chid me hence ; and threaten'd me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too :
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further : Let me go :
You see how simple and how fond I am.

Her. Why, get you gone : Who is 't that hinders you ?

Hel. A foolish heart that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander ?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid : she shall not harm thee, Helena.

Dem. No, sir ; she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O, when she 's angry, she is keen and shrewd :
She was a vixen when she went to school ;
And, though she be but little, she is fierce.

Her. Little again ? nothing but low and little ?
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus ?
Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf ;
You minimus, of hind'ring knot-grass<sup>a</sup> made ;
You head, you acorn

Dem. You are too officious
In her behalf that scorns your services.

Let her alone ; speak not of Helena ;

Take not her part : for if thou dost intend<sup>b</sup>

Never so little show of love to her,

Thou shalt aby it.<sup>c</sup>

Lys. Now she holds me not ;
Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Or thine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow ? nay, I 'll go with thee, cheek by jole. [Exit Lys. and Dem.]

Her. You, mistress, all this coil is long of you :
Nay, go not back.

Hel. I will not trust you, I ;
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray ;
My legs are longer though, to run away. [Exit.]

Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say.
[Exit, pursuing HELENA.]

Obe. This is thy negligence : still thou mistak'st,
Or else committ'st thy knaveries willingly.

Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me, I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on ?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
That I have 'ointed an Athenian's eyes :
And so far am I glad it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Obe. Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to fight :
Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night ;
The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog, as black as Acheron ;
And lead these testy rivals so astray,
As one come not within another's way.

Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong ;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius ;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep :
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye,
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eyeballs roll with wonted sight.

<sup>b</sup> Intend. This word is explained by pretend ; but the meaning is rather to direct.

<sup>c</sup> Aby it—suffer for it.

When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seem a dream, and fruitless vision ;
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,
With league, whose date till death shall never end
Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,
I 'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy ;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger ;
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and there,
Troop home to churchyards : damned spirits all,
That in cross-ways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy-beds are gone ;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully themselves exile from light,
And must for aye consort with black-brow'd night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort :
I with the morning's love have oft made sport ;
And, like a forester, the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt-green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste ; make no delay :
We may effect this business yet ere day. [Exit Obe.]

Puck. Up and down, up and down ;
I will lead them up and down ;
I am fear'd in field and town ;
Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one.

Enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius ? speak
now.

Puck. Here, villain ; drawn and ready. Where thou ?

Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Puck. Follow me then to plainer ground.

[Exit Lys. as following the Obe.]

Enter DEMETRIUS.

Dem. Lysander ! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled ?
Speak. In some bush ? Where dost thou hide thy ha-

Puck. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come ? Come, recreant ; come, thou dost !
I 'll whip thee with a rod : He is defil'd
That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea, art thou there ?

Puck. Follow my voice ; we 'll try no manhood
[Exit.]

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on ;
When I come where he calls then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter heel'd than I :
I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly ;
That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day !

[Lies down.]
For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I 'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite. [Exit.]

Re-enter PUCK and DEMETRIUS.

Puck. Ho, ho, ho ! Coward, why com'st thou to Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st ; for well I wot, Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place ;
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou now ?

Puck. Come hither ; I am here.

Dem. Nay, then, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt this dear,

If ever I thy face by daylight see :

Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me out my length on this cold bed.

approach look to be visited.

[Lies down and sleeps.]

Enter HELENA.

weary night, O, long and tedious night,
thy hours: shine, comforts, from the east,
y back to Athens by daylight,
these that my poor company detest:—
that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye, awhile from mine own company. [Sleeps.]
Yet but three? Come one more;
Two of both kinds makes up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad:
Cupid is a kvavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter HERMIA.

Never so weary, never so in woe,
abbled with the dew, and torn with briers;
further crawl, no further go;
legs can keep no pace with my desires.

Here will I rest me, till the break of day.
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!

[Lies down.]

Puck.

On the ground
Sleep sound:
I'll apply
To your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.
[Squeezing the juice on Lys.'s eye.]
When thou wak'st,
Thou tak'st
True delight
In the sight
Of thy former lady's eye:
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown:
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well. [Exit PUCK.—DEM., HEL., &c., sleep.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Wood.

TITANIA and BOTTOM, Fairies attending;
Oberon behind unseen.

Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
like I thy amiable cheeks do coy,<sup>a</sup>
kiss musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head, kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.
Where's Peas-blossom?

Ready.
Scratch my head, Peas-blossom.—Where's Cobweb?

Ready.
Monsieur Cobweb; good monsieur, get your in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-a top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring every-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in a, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care y-bag break not; I would be loth to have you s<sup>b</sup> with a honey-bag, signior.—Where's monstard-seed?

Ready.
Give me your neif,<sup>c</sup> monsieur Mustard-seed.
a, leave your courtesy, good monsieur.

What's your will?
Nothing, good monsieur, but to help cavalero to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur;
inks, I am marvellous hairy about the face;
n such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle et scratch.

What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet
I have a reasonable good ear in music: let us tungs and the bones.

Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.
Truly, a peck of provender: I could munch at dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

I have a venturous fairy that shall seek arvel's heard, and fetch thee new nuts.
I had rather have a handful, or two, of dried
But, I pray you, let none of your people stir have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.
be gone, and be all ways away.
the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle

<sup>a</sup> To say is here to crest.
neif, neef—neef and. <sup>c</sup> Neif—neef.

Gently entwist; the female ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the elm.<sup>a</sup>
O, how I love thee! how I dote on thee! [They sleep.]

OBERON advances. Enter PUCK.

Obe. Welcome, good Robin. See'st thou this sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pity.
For meeting her of late, behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her and fall out with her:
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flow'rets' eyes,
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had, at my pleasure, taunted her,
And she, in mild terms, begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;
Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes.
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair;
And think no more of this night's accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.

Be thou, as thou wast wont to be,
[Touching her eyes with an herb.]

See, as thou wast wont to see:
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.
Now, my Titania, wake you, my sweet queen.
Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.

Obe. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass?
O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now!

<sup>a</sup> Gifford pointed out the true meaning of this passage in his note upon a parallel passage in Ben Jonson:—

“ — behold!
How the blue bindweed doth itself enfold
With honeysuckle, and both these entwine Themselves with bryony and jessamine.”

“ In many of our counties,” says Gifford, “the woodbine is still the name for the great convulcus.”

Obe. Silence a while.—Robin, take off this head.—

Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep, of all these five the sense.

Tita. Music, ho! music; such as charmeth sleep.

Puck. When thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, music. [Still music.] Come, my queen,
take hands with me,

And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity;

And will, to-morrow midnight, solemnly,
Dance in duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair posterity:

There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark;
I do hear the morning lark.

Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade:
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wand'ring moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found,
With these mortals on the ground. [Exeunt.
[Horns sound within.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS, and Train.

The. Go one of you, find out the forester;

For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley; let them go:
Despatch, I say, and find the forester.

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-knee'd and dew-lapp'd like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Judge, when you hear.—But, soft; what nymphs are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep;
And this Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena:
I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt they rose up early, to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.

But, speak, Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

Horns, and shout within. DEMETRIUS, LYSANDER, HERMIA, and HELENA wake and start up.

The. Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;

Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

Lys. Pardon, my lord. [He and the rest kneel to THE.
The I pray you all, stand up.

I know, you two are rival enemies;

How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half 'sleep, half waking: But as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here:
But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,—
And now I do bethink me, so it is;) I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian law.<sup>a</sup>

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough
I beg the law, the law, upon his head.
They would have stol'n away, they would, Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my consent,—
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them;
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But, by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melted as the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gaud,
Which in my childhood I did dote upon:
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loathe this food:
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we will hear more anon.
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with us, to Athens: Three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
Come, Hippolyta.

[Exeunt THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS, and Train.
Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,

Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks I see these things with parted eye,
When everything seems double.

Hel. So, methinks:
And I have found Demetrius like a jewel,<sup>b</sup>
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. [Are you sure
That we are awake?] It seems to me,
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do not you think,
The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea, and my father.

Hel. And Hippolyta.

Lys. And he did bid us follow to the temple.

Dem. Why, then, we are awake; let's follow him;
And, by the way, let us recount our dreams. [Exeunt.

As they go out, BOTTOM awakes.

Bot. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer:—my next is, "Most fair Pyramus."—Hey, ho!
Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life! stolen henow,

<sup>a</sup> They intended to leave Athens for some place where they might be beyond (without) the perils of the Athenian law.

<sup>b</sup> She has found Demetrius, as a person picks up a jewel for the moment it is his own, but its value may cause it to be reclaimed. She feels insecure in the possession of her treasure.

II.—Athens. A Room in Quince's House.

QUINCE, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come? He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is el.

If he come not, then the play is marred; It forward, doth it?

It is not possible: you have not a man in all ble to discharge Pyramus, but he.

No: he hath simply the best wit of any handi- in Athens.

Yes, and the best person too: and he is a very for a sweet voice.

You must say, paragon: a paramour is, God a thing of naught.

Enter SNUG.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married if our sport had gone forward we had all been made men.

Flu. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost six- pence a-day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him six pence a-day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day, in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter BOTTOM.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts? Quin. Bottom!—O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders: but ask me not what; for if I tell you I am no true Athenian. I will tell you everything, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined: Get your apparel together; good strings to your beards,<sup>a</sup> new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace; every man look o'er his part; for, the short and the long is, our play is preferred.<sup>b</sup> In any case, let Thisby have clean linen; and let not him that plays the lion pare his nails, for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onions, nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath; and I do not doubt but to hear them say it is a sweet comedy. No more words; away; go, away.

ACT V.

I.—Athens. An Apartment in the Palace of Theseus.

THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, Lords, and Attendants.

It is strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

More strange than true. I never may believe like fables, nor these fairy toys.

And madmen have such seething brains, sing fantasies, that apprehend a cool reason ever comprehends.

So, the lover, and the poet, imagination all compact:

More devils than vast hell can hold— a madman: the lover, all as frantic,

Sees beauty in a brow of Egypt:

His eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,

Looks from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,

Imagination bodies forth

Of things unknown, the poet's pen

Turns to shapes, and gives to airy nothing

Objection and a name.

It hath strong imagination:

It would but apprehend some joy,

It sends some bringer of that joy;

It night, imagining some fear,

It is a bush suppos'd a bear!

Of all the story of the night told over,

Our senses transfigur'd so together,

So smooth as fancy's images,

It is something of great constancy;

It is, strange, and admirable.

<sup>b</sup> Possibly, at the death of Thisby.

Enter LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS, HERMIA, and HELENA.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.

Joy, gentle friends! joy, and fresh days of love, Accompany your hearts!

Lys. More than to us

Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

The. Come now; what masks, what dances, shall we have,

To wear away this long age of three hours,

Between our after-supper and bedtime?

Where is our usual manager of mirth?

What revels are in hand? Is there no play,

To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

Call Philostrate.

Philostr. Here, mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgment<sup>c</sup> have you for this evening?

What mask, what music? How shall we beguile

The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Philostr. There is a brief, how many sports are rife;

Make choice of which your highness will see first.

[Giving a paper.

Lys. [Reads.] "The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung,

By an Athenian eunuch to the harp."

<sup>a</sup> In the first act, Bottom has told us that he will "discharge" the part of Pyramus. "in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-coloured beard, your perfect yellow." He is now solicitous that the strings by which the artificial beards were to be fastened should be in good order.

<sup>b</sup> Preferred—not in the sense of chosen in preference, but offered—as a suit is preferred.

<sup>c</sup> Abridgment—pastime; something that may abridge "the lazy time." This is one explanation. Is it not, rather—what short thing have you, of play, or mask, or music?

The. We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

Lys. "The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage."

The. That is an old device, and it was play'd
When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.

Lys. "The thrice three Muses mourning for the death
Of learning, late deceas'd in beggary."

The. That is some satire, keen, and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.

Lys. "A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus,
And his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth."

The. Merry and tragical? Tedious and brief?
That is, hot ice, and wonderous strange snow.<sup>a</sup>
How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philost. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long;
Which is as brief as I have known a play;
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious: for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted.
And tragical, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself,
Which when I saw rehears'd, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

The. What are they that do play it?

Philost. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here,
Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories
With this same play, against your nuptial.

The. And we will hear it.

Philost. No, my noble lord,
It is not for you: I have heard it over,
And it is nothing, nothing in the world,
(Unless you can find sport in their intents,
Extremely stretch'd and conn'd with cruel pain,
To do you service.

The. I will hear that play;
For never anything can be amiss
When simpleness and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in: and take your places, ladies.

[Exit PHILOSTRATE.]

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharg'd,
And duty in his service perishing.

The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says, they can do nothing in this kind.

The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.

Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake:
And what poor duty cannot do,
Noble respect takes it in might,<sup>b</sup> not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,
And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome: Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence yet I pick'd a welcome;
And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,
In least speak most, to my capacity.

Enter PHILOSTRATE.

Philost. So please your grace, the prologue is address'd.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Snow is a common thing; and, therefore, "wonderous strange" is sufficiently antithetical—hot ice, and snow as strange.

<sup>b</sup> Might. This is not used to express power, but will—what one mayeth—the will for the deed.

<sup>c</sup> Address'd—ready.

The. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.]

Enter Prologue.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.

That you should think we come not to offend,
But with good will. To show our simple skill,

That is the true beginning of our end.

Consider, then, we come but in despite.

We do not come as minding to content you,

Our true intent is. All for your delight.

We are not here. That you should here repent you

The actors are at hand; and, by their show,

You shall know all that you are like to know.

The. This fellow doth not stand upon points.<sup>a</sup>

Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt:
He knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: It is enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath played on his prologue like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain; his sense impaired, but all disorder'd. Who is next?

Enter PYRAMUS and THISBE, WALL, MOONSHINE, and LION, in dumb show.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show;

But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.

This man is Pyramus, if you would know;

This beautiful lady Thisbe is, certain.

This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present

Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers Sunder

And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are come

To whisper, at the which let no man wonder.

This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,

Presenteth Moonshine: for, if you will know,

By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn

To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.

This grisly beast, which by name Lion light,

The trusty Thisbe, coming first by night,

Did scare away, or rather did affright;

And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall;

Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain:

Aun comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,

And finds his trusty Thisbe's mantle slain:

Whereat with blade, with bloody blameful blade,

He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;

And, Thisbe tarrying in mulberry shade,

His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,

Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain,
At large discourse, while here they do remain.

[Exeunt PROLOGUE, THISBE, LION, and MOONSHINE.]

The. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.

Dem. No wonder, my lord; one lion may speak, many asses do.

Wall. In this same interlude, it doth befall,

That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;

And such a wall as I would have you think,

That had in it a cranny'd hole, or chink,

Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisbe,

Did whisper often very secretly.

This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone doth shew

That I am that same wall; the truth is so:

And this the cranny is, right and sinister,

Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper.

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard of. My lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence.

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black

O night, which ever art when day is not!

O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,

I fear my Thisbe's promise is forgot!

<sup>a</sup> The Prologue is very carefully mis-pointed in the editions—"a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but ordered." Had the fellow stood "upon points" it would read thus:—

"If we offend, it is with our good will

That you should think we come not to offend;

But with good will to show our simple skill.

That is the true beginning of our end.

Consider then. We come: but in despite

We do not come. As, minding to content you,

Our true intent is all for your delight.

We are not here that you should here repent you

The actors are at hand; and, by their show,

You shall know all that you are like to know."

<sup>b</sup> Fall—used actively.

o. O wall, thou sweet and lovely wall, sands between her father's ground and mine;
 all, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall,
 me thy chink, to blink through with mine eyne.
 (Wall holds up his fingers.)
 courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!
 but see I? No Thisby do I see.
 I wall, through whom I see no bliss;
 I be thy stones for thus deceiving me!

The wall, methinks, being sensible, should die.

No, in truth, sir, he should not. "Deceiving Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to through the wall. You shall see, it will fall told you:—Yonder she comes.

Enter THISBE.

O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans,
 parting my fair Pyramus and me:
 merry lips have often kiss'd thy stones;
 my moans with lime and hair knit up in thee.
 I see a voice: now will I to the chink,
 ere an I can hear my Thisby's face.

My love! thou art my love, I think.
 Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace;
 like Limander am I trusty still.
 And I like Helen, till the fates me kill.
 Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true.
 As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.
 O, kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.
 I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.
 With thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway?
 'Tis the life, 'tis death, I come without delay.
 'Tis thus have I, Wall, my part discharged so;
 being done, thus Wall away doth go.

[Exeunt WALL, PYRAMUS, and THISBE.]

Now is the mural down between the two neigh-

No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful without warning.

This is the silliest stuff that e'er I heard.
 The best in this kind are but shadows; and the no worse, if imagination amend them.
 It must be your imagination, then, and not

If we imagine no worse of them than they of us, they may pass for excellent men. Here noble beasts in, a man and a lion.

Enter LION and MOONSHINE.

You ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
 the smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor, see, perchance, both quake and tremble here,
 as lions rough to wildest rage doth roar, know that I, one SONG the joiner, am a fell, nor else no lion's dam:
 I should as lion come in strife
 his place, 't were pity of my life.

A very gentle beast, and of a good con-

The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I

This lion is a very fox for his valour.

True; and a goose for his discretion.

Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry tion; and the fox carries the goose.

His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his for the goose carries not the fox. It is well:
 to his discretion, and let us hearken to the

This lantern doth the horned moon present.

He should have worn the horns on his head.
 He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible or circumference.

This lantern doth the horned moon present;
 if the moon 't' th' moon do seem to be.

This is the greatest error of all the rest: the old be put into the lantern: How is it else the moon?

He dares not come there for the candle: for,
 it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am weary of this moon: Would he would change.

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane: but yet, in courtesy, in all reason,
 we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, Moon.

Moon. All that I have to say is, to tell you, that the lantern is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for they are in the moon. But, silence; here comes Thisbe.

Enter THISBE.

This. Th's is old Ninny's tomb: Where is my love?

Lion. Oh— [The LION roars.—THISBE runs off]

Dem. Well roared, lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, moon. Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

The. Well moused, lion.

[The LION tears THISBE'S mantle, and exits]

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Lys. And so the lion vanished.

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;

I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright;

For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,

I trust to taste of truest Thisby's sight.

But stay;—O spite!

But mark;—Poor knight,

What dreadful dole is here?

Eyes, do you see?

How can it be?

O dainty duck! O dear!

Thy mantle good,

What, stain'd with blood?

Approach, ye furies fell!

O fates! come, come;

Out thread and thrum;

Quill, crush, conclude, and quell!

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyr. O, wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame?

Since lion vile hath here deflour'd my dear:

Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame,
 That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.

Come, tears, confound;

Out, sword, and wound

The pap of Pyramus:

Where heart doth hop:—

Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead,

Now am I fled;

My soul is in the sky:

Tongue, lose thy light!

Moon, take thy flight!

Now die, die, die, die, die. [Dies.—Exit MOONSHINE.]

Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.

Lys. Less than an ace, man; for he is dead; he is nothing.

The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover and prove an ass.

Hip. How chance Moonshine is gone, before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

The. She will find him by starlight.—Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Enter THISBE.

Hip. Methinks, she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better.

Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, videlicet.

This. Asleep, my love.

What, dead, my dove?

O Pyramus, arise,

Speak, speak. Quite dumb?

Dead, dead? A tomb

Must cover thy sweet eyes.

These lily lips,
This cherry nose,
These yellow cowslip cheeks,
Are gone, are gone:
Lovers, make moan!
His eyes were green as leeks,
O sisters three,
Come, come to me,
With hands as pale as milk;
Lay them in gore,
Since you have shore
With shears his thread of silk.
Tongue, not a word:
Come, trusty sword;
Come, blade, my breast imbrue
And farewell, friends;
Thus Thisbe ends:
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

[Dies.]

The. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury the dead.
Dem. Ay, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask<sup>a</sup> dance, between two of our company?

The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly; and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone.

[Here a dance of Clowns.]

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:—
Lovers to bed: 't is almost fairy time.

I fear we shall outsleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatch'd.
This palpable-gross play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gait of night.—Sweet friends, to bed.—
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jollity.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behowls the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fordone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the scritch-owl, scritch'ing loud,
Puts the wretch, that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate's<sup>b</sup> team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,

<sup>b</sup> Marlowe, Middleton, and Goiding also use Hecate as a disyllable. In Spenser and Jonson we find Hecate.

Now are frolic; not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
I am sent, with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter OBERON and TITANIA, with their Train

Obe. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsy fire;
Every elf, and fairy sprite,
Hop as light as bird from brier;
And this dirty, after me,
Sing, and dance it, trippingly.
Tita. First, rehearse this song by rote:
To each word a warbling note,
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place.

SONG, AND DANCE.

Obe. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray,
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be:
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of Nature's hand
Shall not in their issue stand;
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity,
Shall upon their children be
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gait;
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace with sweet peace;
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away;
Make no stay;

Meet me all by break of day.

[Exeunt OBERON, TITANIA, and

Puck. If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, (and all is mended,)
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend;
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I am an honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck,
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends, ere long:
Else the Puck a liar call.
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'THE TAMING OF THE SHREW' was first printed in the folio collection of Shakspeare's Plays in 1623. In 1594 'A pleasant conceited Historie called the Taming of a Shrew' was printed. This play, it is thought, preceded Shakspeare's 'Taming of the Shrew.' This comedy of some unknown author opens with an Induction, the characters of which are a Lord, Slie, a Tapster, Page, Players, and Huntsmen. The incidents are precisely the same as those of the play which we call Shakspeare's. The scene of 'The Taming of a Shrew' is laid at Athens; that of Shakspeare's at Padua. The Athens of the one and the Padua of the other are resorts of learning. Alfonso, a merchant of Athens, (the Baptista of Shakspeare,) has three daughters, Kate, Emelia, and Phylema. Aurelius, son of the Duke of Cestus (Sestos), is enamoured of one, Polidor of another, and Ferando (the Petrucio of Shakspeare) of Kate, the Shrew. The merchant hath sworn, before he will allow his two younger daughters to be addressed by suitors, that "His eldest daughter first shall be espous'd."

The wooing of Kate by Ferando is exactly in the same spirit as the wooing by Petrucio; so is the marriage; so the lenten entertainment of the bride in Ferando's country-house; so the scene with the Tailor and Haberdasher; so the prostrate obedience of the tamed Shrew. The under-plot, however, is different. But all parties are ultimately happy and pleased; and the comedy ends with the wager, as in Shakspeare, about the obedience of the several wives. This undoubted resemblance involves some necessity for conjecture, with very little guide from evidence. The first and most obvious hypothesis is, that 'The Taming of a Shrew' was an older play than Shakspeare's; and that he borrowed from that comedy. But we propose another theory. Was there not an older play than 'The Taming of a Shrew,' which furnished the main plot, some of the characters, and a small part of the dialogue, both to the author of 'The Taming of a Shrew' and the author of 'The Taming of the Shrew?' This play we may believe, without any violation of fact or probability, to have been used as the rude material for both authors to work upon. Whether the author or improver of the play printed in 1594 be Marlowe or Greene (to each of whom the comedy has been assigned), there can be little question as to the characteristic superiority of Shakspeare's work.

But there is a third theory—that of Tieck—that 'The Taming of a Shrew' was a youthful work of Shakspeare himself. To our minds that play is totally different from the imagery and the versification of Shakspeare.

Shakspeare's 'Taming of the Shrew' was produced in a "taming" age. Men tamed each other by the axe and the fagot; parents tamed their children by the rod and the ferule, as they stood or knelt in trembling silence before those who had given them life; and although England was then called the "paradise of women," and, as opposed to the treatment of horse they were treated "obsequiously," husbands thought that "taming," after the manner of Petrucio, by pain and starvation, was a commendable fashion.

We are—the happier our fortune—living in an age when this practice of Petrucio is not universally considered orthodox; and we owe a great deal to him who has exhibited the secrets of the "taming school" with so much spirit in this comedy, for the better belief of our age, that violence is not to be subdued by violence. Pardon be for him, if, treading in the footsteps of some predecessor whose sympathies with the peaceful and the beautiful were immeasurably inferior to his own, and sacrificing something to the popular appetite, he should have made the husband of a froward woman "kill her in her own humour," and bring her upon her knees to the abject obedience of a revolted but penitent slave:—

"A foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord."

Pardon for him? If there be one reader of Shakspeare and especially if that reader be a female, who cherishes unmixed indignation when Petrucio, in his triumph exclaims—

"He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak"—

we would say,—the indignation which you feel, and which thousands sympathise, belongs to the age which you live; but the principle of justice, and justice to women above all, from which it springs, has been established, more than by any other lessons of human origin, by him who has now moved your anger. It is to him that woman owes, more than to any other human authority, the popular elevation of the feminine character, by the most matchless delineations of purity, its faith, its disinterestedness, its tenderness, heroism, its union of intellect and sensibility. It is that, as long as the power of influencing mankind by high thoughts, clothed in the most exquisite language, shall endure, will preserve the ideal elevation of woman pure and unassailable from the attacks of coarseness, libertinism,—ay, and even from the degradation of the example of the crafty and worldly-minded of their own sex:—for it is he that has delineated the ingenious and trusting Imogen, the guileless Perdita, the impassioned Juliet, the heart-stricken but loving Desdemona, the generous and courageous Portia, the unconquered Isabella, the playful Rosalind, the world-unknown Miranda. Shakspeare may have exhibited one froward woman wrongly tamed; but who can estimate the number of those from whom his all-penetrating influence has averted the curse of being froward?

INDUCTION.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

A Lord.
 CHRISTOPHER SLY, a drunken Tinker.
 Hostess, Page, Players, Huntsmen, and other Servants.

SCENE I.—Before an Alehouse on a Heath.

Enter Hostess and SLY.

Will you please * you, in faith,
 a pair of stocks, you rogue!
 I have a baggage; the Slys are no rogues: Look on these, we came in with Richard Conqueror.
passus pallabris;<sup>b</sup> let the world slide:
 they will not pay for the glasses you have set, and warm thee.
 I know my remedy, I must go fetch the third-hand, meaning to beat, to chastise, to humble.

<sup>b</sup> pallabris—passus pallabris—few words, as they have sonas, in the same way, is the cessa of the Spaniards spoken.

<sup>c</sup> Brach—a petty constable—appears, in recent times, a parallel to Warwickshire: "There are in several his realm other officers; that is, by other titles, but superior to our constables; as, in Warwickshire, a

Wind Horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his Train.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:

Brach * Merriman,—the poor cur is emboss'd;
 And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.
 Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good
 At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault?
 I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1 Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord,
 He cried upon it at the merest loss,
 And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent:
 Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool; if Echo were as fleet,
 I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
 But sup them well, and look unto them all;
 To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Hun. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2 Hun. He breathes, my lord: Were he not warm'd with ale,
 This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

* Brach. In 'Lear' Shakspeare uses this word as indicating a dog of a particular species. But he in other places employs it in the way indicated in an old book on sports,—'The Gentleman's Recreation.'—'A brach is a mannerly name for all beagles bitches.'

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.

What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1 Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.

Then take him up, and manage well the jest:
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:
Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,
And, with a low submissive reverence,
Say,—What is it your honour will command?
Let one attend him with a silver bason,
Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say,—Will 't please your lordship cool your hands?

Some one be ready with a costly suit,
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease:
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is —,* say, that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly,<sup>b</sup> gentle sirs;
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

1 Hun. My lord, I warrant you, we'll play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently and to bed with him;
And each one to his office, when he wakes.

[Some bear out SLY. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 't is that sounds:

[Exit Servant.
Belike, some noble gentleman, that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

Re-enter a Servant.

How now? who is it?

Serv. An 't please your honour, players,
That offer service to your lordship.

Lord. Bid them come near.

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

Players. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

2 Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart,—This fellow I remember,
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son;—
'T was where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well:
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

1 Play. I think, 't was Soto that your honour means.

Lord. 'T is very true;—thou didst it excellent.—

Well, you are come to me in happy time;
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play to-night:

* And, when he says he is—. The dash is here clearly intended to indicate a blank. It is as if the lord had said, "And when he says he is So and So," when he tells his name.

<sup>b</sup> Kindly—naturally.

But I am doubtful of your modesties;
Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,)
You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.

1 Play. Fear not, my lord; we can contain our selves,

Were he the veriest antic in the world.

Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing that my house affords.—

[Exit Servant and Players.

Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew, my page, [To a Servant.
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:

That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber,
And call him madam, do him obeisance.

Tell him from me, as he will win my love,

He bear himself with honourable action,

Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies

Unto their lords, by them accomplished:

Such duty to the drunkard let him do,

With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy;

And say,—What is 't your honour will command,

Wherein your lady, and your humble wife,

May show her duty, and make known her love?

And then, with kind embracements, tempting kisses,

And with declining head into his bosom,

Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd

To see her noble lord restor'd to health,

Who, for this seven years, hath esteemed him

No better than a poor and loathsome beggar:

And if the boy have not a woman's gift,

To rain a shower of commanded tears,

An onion will do well for such a shift;

Which in a napkin being close convey'd,

Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.

See this despatch'd with all the haste thou canst;

Anon I'll give thee more instructions. [Exit Servant.

I know the boy will well usurp the grace,

Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:

I long to hear him call the drunkard husband;

And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,

When they do homage to this simple peasant.

I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence

May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber in the Lord's House.

SLY is discovered in a rich night-gown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with bason, ewer, and other appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a servant.

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.

1 Serv. Will 't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

2 Serv. Will 't please your honour taste of these conserves?

3 Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christophero Sly. Call not me humour, nor lordship: I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of best: Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear; for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometime, more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour! O, that a mighty man of such descent, Of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What! would you make me mad? Am not I thy caged nightingales do sing:

 thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,
 d sweeter than the lustful bed
 me trimm'd up for Semiramis.
 wilt walk: we will bestrew the ground:
 thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,
 mess studded all with gold and pearl.
 u love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar

 Say, thou wilt course; thy greyhounds are e Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee night

 painted by a running brook;
 herea all in sedges hid,
 om to move and wanton with her breath,
 the waving sedges play with wind.
 We'll show thee Io, as she was a maid;
 she was beguiled and surpris'd,
 e painted as the deed was done.
 e Or Daphne, roaming through a thorny
 wood;
 e g her legs that one shall swear she bleeds:

 anily the blood and tears are drawn.
 Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:
 e a lady far more beautiful
 y woman in this waning age.
 e And, till the tears that she hath shed for these eous floods o'er-ran her lovely face,
 he fairest creature in the world;
 she is inferior to none.
 e am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
 e dream, or have I dream'd till now?
 e sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;

2 Serv. Will 't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

[Servants present an ewer, basin, and napkin.

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!

O, that once more you knew but what you are!

These fifteen years you have been in a dream;

Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years? by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Serv. O yes, my lord; but very idle words:—

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,

Yet would you say ye were beaten out of door;

And rail upon the hostess of the house;

And say, you would present her at the leet,

Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts;<sup>a</sup>

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such
 maid,

Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up,—

As Stephen Sly, and Old John Naps of Greece,

And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell;

And twenty more such names and men as these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!

All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord. What is thy will with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me husband?

My men should call me lord; I am your Goodman.

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;

I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well: What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Al'ce madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else; so lords call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd,
 And slept above some fifteen year or more.

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me;

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Sly. 'T is much. Servants, leave me and her alone.

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of you

To pardon me yet for a night or two;

Or, if not so, until the sun be set:

For your physicians have expressly charg'd,

In peril to incur your former malady,

That I should yet absent me from your bed:

I hope, this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long. But I would be loth to fall into my dreams again. I will therefore tarry, in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,

Are come to play a pleasant comedy,

For so your doctors hold it very meet:

<sup>a</sup> At the leet, or court-leet, of a manor, the jury presented those who used false weights and measures; and, amongst others, those who, like the "fat ale wife of Wincot," used jugs of irregular capacity instead of the sealed, or lieused quart.

Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy,
Therefore, they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms, and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will let them play: Is it not a commonty, a Christmas gambol, or a tumbling-trick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasing stuff.

Sly. What, household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see 't:

Come, madam wife, sit by my side,

And let the world slip; we shall ne'er be younger.*

[They sit down.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Padua. A public Place.

Enter LUCENTIO and TRANIO.

Luc. Tranio, since, for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and haply* institute
A course of learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii.
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:<sup>b</sup>
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind: for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. Mi perdonate, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics, nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Balk<sup>c</sup> logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk;
Music and poesy use to quicken you;
The mathematics, and the metaphysics,
Fall to them, as you find your stomach serves you:
No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en;—
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness;
And take a lodging, fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: What company is this?

Tra. Master, some show, to welcome us to town

* Haply—in the sense of probably.

<sup>b</sup> Pisa gave me my being, and also first gave my father being—that father was Vincentio, &c. It shall become Vincentio's son, that he may fulfil the hopes conceived of him, to deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds.

<sup>c</sup> Balk. Tranio draws a distinction between the dry and the agreeable of the liberal sciences. Balk logic—pass over logic—

<sup>d</sup> your acquaintance, but practise rhetoric in your common sense (in the legitimate sense of resorting to frequently) and poetry to quicken you, but fall to mathematics and physics as you find your inclination serves.

Enter BAPTISTA, KATHARINA, BIANCA, GREMIO, and HORTENSIO. LUCENTIO and TRANIO stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know:
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gre. To cart her rather: She's too rough for me:
There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. I pray you, sir, [to BAP.] is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?<sup>b</sup>

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that? no mate
for you,

Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

Kath. I' faith, sir, you shall never need to fear;
I wis, it is not half way to her heart:

But, if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord, deliver us!

Gre. And me too, good Lord!

Tra. Hush, master! here is some good pasture toward;

That wench is stark mad, or wonderful forward.

Luc. But in the other's silence do I see Maids' mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio.

Tra. Well said, master; mum! and gaze your fill.

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said, Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca;
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty peat;<sup>c</sup> 't is best

Put finger in the eye—an she knew why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent.

Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:

My books and instruments shall be my company;

On them to look, and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou mayst hear Minerva speak.
[Aside.]

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?

Sorry am I that our good will effects

Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why, will you mew her,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd:
Go in, Bianca. [Exit BIANCA.]

And, for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,

* We print these lines as in the original, where they stand in verse. Are they not a portion of an old song, and intended to be sung?

<sup>b</sup> A stale is a thing staled—exposed for common sale. Baptista has offered Katharina to Gremio and Hortensio. "Choose of you;" and she is justly indignant at being set up for the bidding of these companions.

<sup>c</sup> Peat—pet, spoiled child.

asters will I keep within my house, struct her youth. If you, Hortensio, or Gremio, you know any such,
em hither; for to cunning<sup>a</sup> men very kind, and liberal own children in good bringing-up;
knewell. Katharina, you may stay;
ve more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.

Why, and I trust I may go too. May I not?
all I be appointed hours; as though, belike, ot what to take, and what to leave? Ha! [Exit.
You may go to the devil's dam; your gifts are ere's none will hold you. Their love is not

Hortensio, but we may blow our nails toge-fast it fairly out; our cake's dough on both fazevell:—Yet, for the love I bear my sweet if I can by any means light on a fit man to that wherein she delights, I will wish him<sup>b</sup> to

So will I, signior Gremio: But a word, I pray.
the nature of our quarrel yet never brooked now now, upon advice, it toucheth us both,— may yet again have access to our fair mistress, appy rivals in Bianca's love,—to labour and e thing specially.

What 's that, I pray?
Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.
A husband! a devil.
I say, a husband.
I say, a devil: Think'st thou, Hortensio, though e be very rich, any man is so very a fool as to ed to hell?

Tush, Gremio, though it pass your patience
e to endure her loud alarums, why, man, there follows in the world, an a man could light on ould take her with all faults, and money

I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry
e condition,—to be whipped at the high-cross ening.

Faith, as you say, there 's small choice in rotten
But, come; since this bar in law makes us t shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till eg Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we sought free for a husband, and then have to 't Sweet Bianca!—Happy man be his dole! He fastest gets the ring. How say you, signior

I am agreed: and 'would I had given him the e in Padua to begin his wooing, that would ly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the her. Come on. [Exeunt Grem. and Hort.

[Advancing.] I pray, sir, tell me,—Is it ossible

e should of a sudden take such hold?
Tranio, till I found it to be true, ought it possible, or likely;
while idly I stood looking on,
be effect of love in idleness:

in plainness do confess to thee,— to me as secret, and as dear, to the queen of Carthage was,— harm, I pine, I perish, Tranio, ve not this young modest girl;
me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;

t, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Master, it is no time to chide you now;
is not rated from the heart:
ve touch'd you, naught remains but so,— e captum quam queas minimo.
mercies, lad; go forward, this contents;
fill comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Causing—knowing, learned.

Wish him—commend him.

Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you mark'd not what 's the pith of all.

Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Tra. Saw you no more? mark'd you not, how her sister

Began to scold; and raise up such a storm,
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air;
Sacred, and sweet, was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then, 't is time to stir him from his trance.

I pray, awake, sir: If you love the maid,
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:—

Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd,
That, till the father rids his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,
Because she shall not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father 's he!
But art thou not advis'd, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tra. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 't is plotted.

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tra. Master, for my hand,

Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be schoolmaster,

And undertake the teaching of the maid:

That 's your device.

Luc. It is: May it be done?

Tra. Not possible. For who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincentio's son?

Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends;

Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it full.

We have not yet been seen in any house;

Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,

For man or master: then it follows thus;—

Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,

Keep house, and port,<sup>a</sup> and servants, as I should:

I will some other be; some Florentine,

Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.

'T is hatch'd, and shall be so:—Tranio, at once

Uncase thee, take my colour'd hat and cloak:<sup>b</sup>

When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;

But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So had you need. [They exchange habits.

In brief, sir, sith it your pleasure is,

And I am tied to be obedient,

(For so your father charg'd me at our parting;

"Be serviceable to my son," quoth he,

Although, I think, 't was in another sense,)

I am content to be Lucentio,

Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves:

And let me be a slave, t' achieve that maid

Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Here comes the rogue.—Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now, where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes?

Or you stol'n his? or both? pray, what 's the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither; 't is no time to jest,

<sup>a</sup> Part—state, show.

<sup>b</sup> Colour'd hat and cloak. Servants formerly wore clothes of sober hue—black or sad colour; their masters bore about the lines of the rainbow in their doublets and mantles, and hats and coats. Such gay vestments were called emphatically colour'd.

And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my countenance on,
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I was descried.
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life;
You understand me?

Bion. I, sir? ne'er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth;
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him. 'Would I were so too!

Tra. So would I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,—

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.
But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else, your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let's go:—

One thing more rests, that thyself execute;
To make one among these wooers: If thou ask me
why,—

Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.]

(The Presenters above speak.)

1 Serv. My lord, you nod: you do not mind the play.

Sly. Yes, by saint Anna, do I. A good matter, surely.
Come there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 't is but begun.

Sly. 'T is a very excellent piece of work, madam lady.
'Would 't were done!

[They sit and mark.]

SCENE II.—The same. Before Hortensio's House.

Enter PETRUCIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave, my friends in Padua; but, of all,
beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house:

Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Gru. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I 'll knock your knave's pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

'Faith, sirrah, an you 'll not knock, I 'll wring it;
I 'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.

[He wrings GRUMIO by the ears.]

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter HORTENSIO.

Hor. How now? what 's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petrucio!—How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?
Con tutto il core bene trovato, may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa bene venuto,

Molto honorato signor mio Petrucio.

Rise, Grumio, rise; we wil compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay, 't is no matter, what he leges<sup>a</sup> in Latin.
—If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service,—Look you, sir,—he bid me knock him, and soundly, sir: Well, was it fit for a servant to master so; being, perhaps, (for aught I see), thirty,—a pip out?

<sup>a</sup> Leges—alleges.

Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first,
Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio,
I bade the rascal knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate?—O Heavens!
Spake you not these words plain,—“Sirrah, knock me
here,

Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly”?
And come you now with—knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petrucio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge:
Why, this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you;
Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant, Grumio.
And tell me now, sweet friend,—what happy gale
Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,

To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience grows. But, in a few,
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:—
Antonio, my father, is deceas'd;
And I have thrust myself into this maze,
Haply to wive, and thrive, as best I may:
Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petrucio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And wish thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife?
Thou 'dst thank me but a little for my counsel:
And yet I 'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich:—but thou 'rt too much my friend,
And I 'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we Few words suffice: and, therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petrucio's wife,
(As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance,)
Be she as foul as was Florentius' love,
As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd
As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affection's edge in me. Were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatic seas;
I come to wive it wealthy in Padua;
If wealthy, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: Why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet, or an aglet-baby;<sup>a</sup> or an old trot with but a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two-and-fifty horses: why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

Hor. Petrucio, since we are stepp'd thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest.
I can, Petrucio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young, and beauteous;
Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman:
Her only fault (and that is faults enough)
Is,—that she is intolerable curst,
And shrewd, and froward: so beyond all measure,
That, were my state far worse than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace; thou know'st not gold's effect:
Tell me her father's name, and 't is enough;
For I will board her, though she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous gentleman:
Her name is Katharina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not her;
And he knew my deceased father well:
I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,

<sup>a</sup> Aglet-baby. Aglet is aiguillette—a point. The baby was a small carving on the point which carried the lace.

you over at this first encounter,
 you will accompany me thither.
 I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour of my word, an she knew him as well as I do,
 I think scolding would do little good upon her, may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, say, that 's nothing; an he begin once, he 'll show you some rope-tricks. I 'll tell you what, sir,—an she is but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more to see withal than a cat: a you know him

Fairy, Petrucio, I must go with thee; Baptista's keep my treasure is:
 the jewel of my life in hold,
 my best daughter, beautiful Bianca;
 withheld from me, and other more than her, and rivals in my love:
 to get it a thing impossible,
 the defects I have before rehears'd,
 Katharina will be woo'd,
 by this order hath Baptista ta'en,
 she shall have access unto Bianca,
 Katharine the curst have got a husband,
 she is a maid of all titles the worst.
 Now shall my friend Petrucio do me grace;
 he, disguis'd in sober robes, shall appear as a schoolmaster
 in music, to instruct Bianca:
 I may by this device, at least,
 have some time and leisure to make love to her,
 unsuspected, court her by herself.

GREMIO; with him LUCENTIO disguised, with books under his arm.

Here 's no knavery! See; to beguile the old man, the young folks lay their heads together!
 Master, look about you: Who goes there? ha!
 Peace, Gremio; it is the rival of my love:—
 stand by a while.

A proper stripling, and an amorous!
 [They retire.]

Very well: I have perus'd the note.
 Now, sir; I 'll have them very fairly bound:
 of love, see that at any hand;
 you read no other lectures to her:
 stand me:—Over and beside Baptista's liberality,
 add it with a largess:—Take your papers too,
 we have them very well perfum'd;
 sweeter than perfume itself,
 they go. What will you read to her?
 Whate'er I read to her, I 'll plead for you,
 my patron, (stand you so assur'd,) as yourself were still in place:
 perhaps with more successful words than unless you were a scholar, sir.
 O this learning! what a thing it is!
 O this woodcock! what an ass it is!
 Peace, sirrah.

Hum! mum!—God save you, signior Gremio!
 and you 're well met, signior Hortensio. Trow
 you

I am going?—To Baptista Minola.
 I do inquire carefully
 of the schoolmaster for the fair Bianca;
 good fortune, I have lighted well on a young man; for learning, and behaviour, he turns; well read in poetry and books.—good ones, I warrant ye.
 'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman, who was not a person to be very correct in his similes.

 * Well seen in music—well versed.

Hath promis'd me to help me to another,
 A fine musician to instruct our mistress;
 So shall I no whit be behind in duty
 To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall prove.
 Gru. And that his bags shall prove. [Aside.]

Hor. Gremio, 't is now no time to vent our love;
 Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
 I 'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
 Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met,
 Upon agreement from us to his liking,
 Will undertake to woo curst Katharine;
 Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gre. So said, so done, is well:—
 Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?
 Pet. I know she is an irksome, brawling scold;
 If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.
 Gre. No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman?
 Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
 My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
 And I do hope good days, and long, to see.

Gre. O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange:

But if you have a stomach, to 't o' God's name;
 You shall have me assisting you in all.
 But, wilt you woo this wild cat?

Pet. Will I live?
 Gru. Will he woo her? ay, or I 'll hang her. [Aside.]

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
 Think you, a little din can daunt mine ears?
 Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
 Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with win
 Rage like an angry boar, chafed with sweat?
 Have I not heard great ordnance in the field?
 And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
 Have I not in a pitched battle heard
 Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?
 And do you tell me of a woman's tongue;
 That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
 As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
 Tush! tush! fear boys with bugs.*

Gru. For he fears none. [Aside.]

Gre. Hortensio, hark!
 This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
 My mind presumes, for his own good, and yours.

Hor. I promis'd, we would be contributors,
 And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er.
 Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.
 Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner. [Aside.]

Enter TRANIO, bravely appareled; and BIONDELLO.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you! if I may be bold,
 Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
 To the house of signior Baptista Minola?

Bion. He that has the two fair daughters:—is 't he you mean?

Tra. Even he, Biondello.
 Gre. Hark you, sir; You mean not her to—

Tra. Perhaps, him and her, sir. What have you to do?
 Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders, sir.—Biondello, let 's away.
 Luc. Well begun, Tranio. [Aside.]

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:—
 Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea or no?

Tra. An if I be, sir, is it any offence?
 Gre. No; if, without more words, you will get you hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
 For me, as for you?

Gre. But so is not she.
 Tra. For what reason, I beseech you?

Gre. For this reason, if you 'll know,
 That she 's the choice love of signior Gremio.

* Fear boys with bugs—frighten boys with hobgoblins.

Hor. That she 's the chosen of signior Hortensio.
Tra. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen,
 Do me this right,—hear me with patience.
 Baptista is a noble gentleman,
 To whom my father is not all unknown;
 And, were his daughter fairer than she 's,
 She may more suitors have, and me for one.
 Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
 Then well one more may fair Bianca have:
 And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one,
 Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.
Gre. What! this gentleman will out-talk us all.
Luc. Sir, give him head; I know, he 'll prove a jade.
Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?
Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,
 Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?
Tra. No, sir; but hear I do, that he hath two;
 The one as famous for a scolding tongue,
 As is the other for beauteous modesty.
Pet. Sir, sir, the first 's for me; let her go by.
Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules;
 And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.
Pet. Sir, understand you this of me, in sooth;—

The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
 Her father keeps from all access of suitors,
 And will not promise her to any man,
 Until the elder sister first be wed:
 The younger then is free, and not before.
Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man
 Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest;
 An if you break the ice, and do this feat,—
 Achieve the elder, set the younger free
 For our access,—whose hap shall be to have her,
 Will not so graceless be to be ingrate.
Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
 And since you do profess to be a suitor,
 You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
 To whom we all rest generally beholden.
Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof,
 Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,<sup>a</sup>
 And quaff carouses to our mistress' health;
 And do as adversaries do in law,—
 Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Gre. Bion. O excellent motion! Fellows, let 's be gone.
Hor. The motion 's good indeed, and be it so;—
 Petrucio, I shall be your ben venuto. [Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in Baptista's House.Enter KATHARINA and BIANCA.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself,
 To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
 That I disdain: But for these other gawds,
 Unbind my hands, I 'll pull them off myself,
 Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat;
 Or, what you will command me, will I do,
 So well I know my duty to my elders.
Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive,
 I never yet beheld that special face
 Which I could fancy more than any other.
Kath. Minion, thou liest: Is 't not Hortensio?
Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear,
 I 'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.
Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more;
 You will have Gremio to keep you fair.
Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so?
 Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive,
 You have but jested with me all this while:
 I prithee, sister Kate, untie my hands.

Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.[Strikes her.]Enter BAPTISTA.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?
 Bianca, stand aside;—poor girl! she weeps:—
 Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her,
 For shame, thou hilding,<sup>a</sup> of a devilish spirit,
 Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?
 When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I 'll be reveng'd.
 [Flies after BIANCA.]
Bap. What, in my sight?—Bianca, get thee in.
 [Exit BIANCA.]
Kath. What, will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see
 She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
 I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day,

<sup>a</sup> Hilding—a mean-spirited person.

And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.<sup>b</sup>
 Talk not to me. I will go sit and weep,
 Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit KATHARINA]
Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
 But who comes here?

Enter GREMIO, with LUCENTIO in the habit of a mean man; PETRUCIO, with HORTENSIO as a musician and TRANIO, with BIONDELLO bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio: God save you, gentlemen!
Pet. And you, good sir! Pray, have you not a daughter Call'd Katharina, fair and virtuous?
Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.
Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.
Pet. You wrong me, signior Gremio; give me leave:
 I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
 That, hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
 Her affability, and bashful modesty,
 Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
 Am bold to show myself a forward guest
 Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
 Of that report which I so oft have heard.
 And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
 I do present you with a man of mine, [Presenting HORTENSIO]
 Cunning in music, and the mathematics,
 To instruct her fully in those sciences,
 Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant:
 Accept of him, or else you do me wrong;
 His name is Licio, born in Mantua.
Bap. You 're welcome, sir; and be for your good sake
 But for my daughter Katharine, this I know,
 She is not for your turn, the more my grief.
Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her;
 Or else you like not of my company.
Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but as I find.
 Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?

<sup>a</sup> Contrive this afternoon—wear away the afternoon.<sup>b</sup> A proverbial expression, applied to the ill-used class of malis.

Petrucio is my name; Antonio's son,
well known throughout all Italy.
I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
Saying your tale, Petrucio, I pray, that are poor petitioners, speak too:
'Tis you are marvellous forward.
O, pardon me, signior Gremio; I would fain be doing.
I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.

But, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it.
As the like kindness myself, that have been only beholding to you than any, I freely give to this young scholar, [presenting LUCENTIO] who has been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Latin, and other languages, as the other in all mathematics: his name is Cambio; pray accept his service.

A thousand thanks, signior Gremio: welcome,
Antonio.—But, gentle sir, [to TRANIO] methinks you look like a stranger. May I be so bold to know of your coming?

Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own;
I am a stranger in this city here,
and myself a suitor to your daughter,
and mean, fair, and virtuous.

My firm resolve unknown to me,
I have the consent of the eldest sister:
My only request is all that I request,—
I have a knowledge of my parentage, and we welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,
access and favour as the rest.

And the education of your daughters,
I have a dowry a simple instrument,
a small packet of Greek and Latin books:
I have kept them, then their worth is great.
Lucentio is your name? of whence, I pray?

Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.
A mighty man of Pisa: by report
I know him well: you are very welcome, sir.
[to HOR.] the lute, and you [to LUC.] the set of books,
I will go see your pupils presently.
[Exit]

Enter a Servant.

And bid the gentlemen to my daughters; and tell them both,
that their fathers bid them use them well.

[Exit Servant, with HOR., LUC., and BION.
I will go walk a little in the orchard,
and to dinner: You are passing welcome,
and pray you all to think yourselves.

Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
for to-day I cannot come to woo.
I love my father well; and in him, me,
I have my heir to all his lands and goods,
I would have better'd rather than decreas'd:
If I get your daughter's love,
I shall have with her to wife?
I will give her my death, the one half of my lands:
I will give you a possession, twenty thousand crowns.

And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of a good hood,*—be it that she survive me,—
I will give you lands and leases whatsoever:
I will have it thus be therefore drawn between us,
I will have my warts may be kept on either hand.

*—a word once in common use, meaning go back.
The origin of an old ballad, called 'The Ingenious
' was

"And I cannot come every day to woo."
The word hood. Hood must here mean, not the of a widow, but the property to which the widow entitled. Petrucio would assure Katharina of a I provision in all his "lands and leases." He her dowry,"—by fine and recovery.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is,—her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me;
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed!

But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Re-enter HORTENSIO, with his head broken.

Bap. How now, my friend? why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier;

Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?

Hor. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering;
When, with a most impatient devilish spirit,
"Frets, call you these?" quoth she: "I'll fume with them!"

And, with that word, she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way;
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute;
While she did call me,—rascal fiddler,
And twangling Jack; with twenty such vile terms,
As she had studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench;
I love her ten times more than e'er I did:
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bap. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.
Signior Petrucio, will you go with us;
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here,— [Exit BAP., GRE., TRA., and HOR.]

And woo her with some spirit when she comes.

Say, that she rail; why, then I'll tell her plain

She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:

Say, that she frown; I'll say, she looks as clear

As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:

Say, she be mute, and will not speak a word;

Then I'll commend her volubility,

And say she uttereth piercing eloquence:

If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks

As though she bid me stay by her a week;

If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day

When I shall ask the banns, and when be married:—

But here she comes; and now, Petrucio, speak.

Enter KATHARINA.

Good morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing;

They call me—Katharine, that do talk of me.

Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,

And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;

But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom,

Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,

For dainties are all cates; and therefore, Kate,

Take this of me, Kate of my consolation:—

Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town,

Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sound'd,

(Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs.)

Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kath. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you hither

Remove you hence: I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what 's a moveable?

Kath. A joint-stool.

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.

Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Kath. No such jade as you, if me you mean.

Pet. Alas, good Kate! I will not burthen thee:
For, knowing thee to be but young and light,—

Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch;

And yet as heavy as my weight should be.

Pet. Should be? should? buz!<sup>a</sup>

Kath. Well 'n'en, and like a buzzard.

Pet. O, slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Kath. Ay, for a turtle; as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come, you wasp; i' faith, you are too angry.

Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.

Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.

Pet. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?

In his tail.

Kath. In his tongue.

Pet. Whose tongue?

Kath. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.

Pet. What, with my tongue in your tail? nay, come again.

Good Kate; I am a gentleman.

Kath. That I 'll try. [Striking him.]

Pet. I swear I 'll cuff you, if you strike again.

Kath. So may you lose your arms:

If you strike me you are no gentleman;

And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.

Pet. A herald, Kate? O put me in thy books.

Kath. What is your crest? a coxcomb?

Pet. A combless cock, so Kate will be my hen.

Kath. No cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.<sup>b</sup>

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.

Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.

Pet. Why, here 's no crab; and therefore look not sour.

Kath. There is, there is.

Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face?

Kath. Well aim'd of such a young one.

Pet. Now, by saint George, I am too young for you.

Kath. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'T is with cares.

Kath. I care not.

Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth you 'scape not so.

Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry; let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit. I find you passing gentle.

'T was told me, you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;

For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers:

Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;

Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;

Rut thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft and affable.

<sup>b</sup> Craven. A craven cock, and a craven knight, were each contemptible. The knight who had craven, or craved, life from an antagonist, was branded with the name which he had uttered in preferring safety to honour.

Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?

O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig,

Is straight, and slender; and as brown in hue,

As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.

O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,

As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?

O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm.

Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy bed.

And, therefore, setting all this chat aside,

Thus in plain terms:—Your father hath consented

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on;

And, will you, nill you, I will marry you.

Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;

For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,

(Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well.)

Thou must be married to no man but me;

For I am he am born to tame you, Kate;

And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate

Conformable, as other household Kates.

Here comes your father; never make denial,

I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter BAPTISTA, Gremio, and Tranio.

Bap. Now, signior Petrucio: How speed you with my daughter?

Pet. How but well, sir? how but well?

It were impossible I should speed amiss.

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine? in your dumps?

Kath. Call you me daughter? now I promise you,

You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,

To wish me wed to one half lunatic;

A madcap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,

That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 't is thus,—yourself and all the world,

That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her;

If she be curst, it is for policy:

For she 's not froward, but modest as the dove;

She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;

For patience she will prove a second Grissel;

And Roman Lucrece for her chastity:

And to conclude,—we have 'greed so well together,

That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.

Kath. I 'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petrucio! she says she 'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good night
our part!

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself

If she and I be pleas'd, what 's that to you?

'T is bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,

That she shall still be curst in company.

I tell you, 't is incredible to believe

How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!

She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss

She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,

That in a twink she won me to her love.

O, you are novices! 't is a world to see,

How tame, when men and women are alone,

A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew

Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,

To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day:

Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;

I will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hand.
God send you joy, Petrucio! 't is a match.

Tra. Amen, say we; we will be witnesses.
 Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu;
 Venice; Sunday comes apace;
 have rings, and things, and fine array;
 me, Kate; we will be married o' Sunday.
 [Exit PER. and KATH. severally.]
 Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?
 Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,
 ture madly on a desperate mart.
 'T was a commodity lay fretting by you;
 ring you gain, or perish on the seas.
 The gain I seek is—quiet in the match.
 No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
 , Baptista, to your younger daughter;
 e day we long have looked for;
 e neighbour, and was suitor first.
 And I am one that love Bianca more ds can witness, or your thoughts can guess.
 foangling! thou canst not love so dear as I.
 reybeard! thy love doth freeze.

But thine doth fry.
 stand back; 't is age that nourisheth.
 but youth, in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.
 content you, gentlemen; I will compound this strife:
 he must win the prize; and he, of both,
 assure my daughter greatest dower,
 e my Bianca's love.
 or Gremio, what can you assure her?
 list, as you know, my house within the city
 furnished with plate and gold;
 ad ewers, to lave her dainty hands;
 ings all of Tyrian tapestry:
 odgers I have stuff'd my crowns;
 e chests my arras, counterpoints,<sup>a</sup> parcel, tents, and canopies,
 a, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,
 of Venice gold in needlework,
 ad brass, and all things that belong or housekeeping: then, at my farm, undred milch-kine to the pail,
 at oxen standing in my stalls,
 kings answerable to this portion.
 e struck in years, I must confess;
 die to-morrow, this is hers,
 I live, she will be only mine.
 hat, only, came well in. Sir, list to me:
 father's heir, and only son;

If I may have your daughter to my wife,
 I 'll leave her houses three or four as good,
 Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
 Old signior Gremio has in Padua;
 Besides two thousand ducats by the year,
 Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.
 What! have I pinch'd you, signior Gremio?
Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year of land!
 My land amounts not to so much in all:
 That she shall have; besides an argosy
 That now is lying in Marseilles' road.
 What! have I chok'd you with an argosy?
Tra. Gremio, 't is known my father hath no less Than three great argosies; besides two galliasses,<sup>a</sup>
 And twelve tight galleys: these I will assure her,
 And twice as much, whate'er thou offer'st next.
Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all; I have no more;
 And she can have no more than all I have.
 If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,
 By your firm promise. Gremio is outvied.
Bap. I must confess your offer is the best;
 And, let your father make her the assurance,
 She is your own; else, you must pardon me:
 If you should die before him, where 's her dower?
Tra. That 's but a cavil; he is old, I young.
Gre. And may not young men die, as well as old?
Bap. Well, gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd:—
 On Sunday next you know
 My daughter Katharine is to be married:
 Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
 Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
 If not, to signior Gremio:
 And so I take my leave, and thank you both. [Exit.]
Gre. Adieu, good neighbour.—Now I fear thee not;
 Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
 To give thee all, and, in his waning age,
 Set foot under thy table: Tut! a toy!
 An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. [Exit.]
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide!
 Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten.<sup>b</sup>
 'T is in my head to do my master good:—
 I see no reason, but suppos'd Lucentio
 Must get a father call'd—suppos'd Vincentio;
 And that 's a wonder: fathers, commonly,
 Do get their children; but, in this case of wooing,
 A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. [Ex

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in Baptista's House.

LUCENTIO, HORTENSIO, and BIANCA.

Hort. Souldier, forbear; you grow too forward, sir:
 so soon forgot the entertainment
 Katharine welcom'd you withal?
 ut, wrangling pedant, this is ess of heavenly harmony:
 me leave to have prerogative;
 in music we have spent an hour,
 we shall have leisure for as much.
 eposterous ass! that never read so far he cause why music was ordain'd!
 t, to refresh the mind of man,
 studies, or his usual pain?

<sup>a</sup> Gallias, galley, galleon, galleot, were vessels of burthen navigated both with sails and oars.
<sup>b</sup> Card of ten—a proverbial expression.

Then give me leave to read philosophy,
 And, while I pause, serve in your harmony.
Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.
Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
 To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
 I am no breeching scholar in the schools;
 I 'll not be tied to hours, nor 'pointed times,
 But learn my lessons as I please myself.
 And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:
 Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
 His lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.
Hor. You 'll leave his lecture when I am in tune?
 [To BIANCA.—HORTENSIO retires.]
Luc. That will be never;—tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?

<sup>a</sup> Gallias, galley, galleon, galleot, were vessels of burthen
 navigated both with sails and oars.
<sup>b</sup> Card of ten—a proverbial expression.

Luc. Here, madam :—
*Hæc ibat Simois ; hic est Sigeia tellus ;
Hic steterat Priami regis celsa senis.*

Bian. Construe them

Luc. Hæc ibat, as I told you before,—Simois, I am Lucentio,—hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa,—Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love ;—Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,—Priami, is my man Tranio,—regis, bearing my port,—celsa senis, that we might beguile the old pantaloon.

Hor. Madam, my instrument's in tune. [Returning.
Bian. Let's hear ;— [Hortensio plays.
O fie ! the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it : Hæc ibat Simois, I know you not ;—hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not ;—Hic steterat Priami, take heed he hear us not ;—regis, presume not ;—celsa senis, despair not.

Hor. Madam, 't is now in tune.

Luc. All but the base.

Hor. The base is right ; 't is the base knave that jars. How fiery and forward our pedant is ! Now, for my life the knave doth court my love : Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet.

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Luc. Mistrust it not ; for, sure, Æacides Was Ajax,—call'd so from his grandfather.

Bian. I must believe my master ; else, I promise you,

I should be arguing still upon that doubt :

But let it rest.—Now, Licio, to you :—

Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,

That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hor. You may go walk, [to Lucentio] and give me leave awhile ;

My lessons make no music in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formal, sir ? well, I must wait,

And watch withal ; for, but I be deceiv'd,<sup>a</sup>

Our fine musician groweth amorous. [Aside.

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,

To learn the order of my fingering,

I must begin with rudiments of art ;

To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,

More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,

'Than hath been taught by any of my trade ;

And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. [Reads.] Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,

A re, to plead Hortensio's passion ;

B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord,

C fa ut, that loves with all affection :

D sol re, one cliff, two notes have I ;

E la mi, show pity, or I die.

Call you this gamut ? tut ! I like it not :

Old fashions please me best ; I am not so nice,

To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,

And help to dress your sister's chamber up ;

You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters, both ; I must be gone.

[Exeunt BIANCA and Serv.

Luc. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay.

[Exit.

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant ;

Method, he looks as though he were in love :

Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,

To cast thy wand'ring eyes on every stale,

Seize thee that list : If once I find thee ranging,

Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. [Exit.

<sup>a</sup> But I be deceiv'd—unless I be deceived.

SCENE II.—The same. Before Baptista's house.

Enter BAPTISTA, TRANIO, KATHARINA, BIANCA, HORTENSIO, and Attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, [to TRANIO] this is the appointed day

That Katharine and Petrucio should be married,

And yet we hear not of our son-in-law :

What will be said ? what mockery will it be,

To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends

To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage !

What says Lucentio to this shame of ours ?

Kath. No shame but mine : I must, forsooth, forcé

To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart,

Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen ;

Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

I told you, I, he was a frantic fool,

Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour :

And, to be noted for a merry man,

He'll woo a thousand, point the day of marriage,

Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the banns ;

Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.

Now must the world point at poor Katharine,

And say,—“ Lo, there is mad Petrucio's wife,

If it would please him come and marry her.”

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista to

Upon my life, Petrucio means but well,

Whatever fortune stays him from his word :

Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise ;

Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

Kath. 'Would Katharine had never seen him, that [Exit, weeping, followed by BIANCA, and others.

Bap. Go, girl ; I cannot blame thee now to weep

For such an injury would vex a saint,

Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. Master, master ! news, old news, and such as you never heard of !

Bap. Is it new and old too ? how may that be ?

Bion. Why, is it not news to hear of Petrucio coming ?

Bap. Is he come ?

Bion. Why, no, sir.

Bap. What then ?

Bion. He is coming

Bap. When will he be here ?

Bion. When he stands where I am, and sees there.

Tra. But, say, what :—To thine old news.

Bion. Why, Petrucio is coming, in a new hat, an old jerkin ; a pair of old breeches, thrice turn'd pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buck another laced ; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless ; with broken points :<sup>a</sup> His horse lipped with an old saddle, and stirrups of no kindred : besides, possess'd with the glanders, and like to mose in the city, troubled with the lampass, infected with the fadde, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, raised with the lous, past cure of the flies, stark spoiled with the starve, begnawn with the bots ; swayed in the back, and under-shotten ; ne'er legged before ; and with a half-elbow bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather, which, being strained to keep him from stumbling, hath been burst, and now repaired with knots ; one girth six-pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure,<sup>c</sup> which <sup>a</sup> Two broken points. The points were amongst the most and elegant parts of the dress of Elizabeth's time ; and a two broken was certainly indicative of more than an slovenliness.

ters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and and there pieced with packthread.

Who comes with him?
O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparisoned horse; with a lincn stock* on one leg, and a boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and an old hat, and "The humour of forty fancies" in 't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in
; and not like a christian footboy, or a gentle-lackey.

'T is some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;
sometimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes.

Why, sir, he comes not.

Didst thou not say, he comes?

Who? that Petrucio came?

Ay, that Petrucio came.

No, sir; I say, his horse comes with him on it.

Why, that 's all one.

Nay, by saint Jamy, I hold you a penny, and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter PETRUCIO and GRUMIO.

Come, where be these gallants? who 's at home?
You are welcome, sir.

And yet I come not well.

And yet you halt not.

Not so well apparel'd

as you were.

Were it better I should rush in thus.
Where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?
Does my father?—Gentles, methinks you frown:
I herefore gaze this goodly company;
I never saw some wondrous monument,
Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

Why, sir, you know, this is your wedding-
day:

As we said, fearing you would not come;

And that you come so unprovided.

And off this habit, shame to your estate,

And come to our solemn festival.

And tell us, what occasion of import

Will so long detain'd you from your wife,

That you lither so unlike yourself?

Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear:

But, I am come to keep my word,

And in some part enforced to digress;

At more leisure, I will so excuse

That shall well be satisfied withal.

Where is Kate? I stay too long from her;

And what she wears, 't is time we were at church.

See not your bride in these unreverent robes;

But by chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Good sooth, even thus; therefore ha' done with your words;

And he 's married, not unto my clothes:

And repair what she will wear in me,

And change these poor accoutrements,

And well for Kate, and better for myself.

And if a fool am I, to chat with you,

And should bid good-morrow to my bride,

And bid the title with a lovely kiss!

[Exeunt PETR., GRU., and BION.]

He hath some meaning in his mad attire:

And I will persuade him, be it possible,

And let him better ere he go to church.

I'll after him, and see the event of this. [Exit.]

But, sir, to love concerneth us to add

And to our liking: Which to bring to pass,

* Stock—stocking.

As I before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man,—whate'er he be,
It skills not much; we'll fit him to our turn,—
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa;
And make assurance, here in Padua,
Of greater sums than I have promised.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,
'T were good, methinks, to steal our marriage;
Which once perform'd, let all the world say—no,
I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business:
We'll overreach the greybeard, Gremio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola,
The quaint musician, amorous Licio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Enter GREMIO.

Signior Gremio! came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom, say you? 't is a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curster than she? why, 't is impossible.

Gre. Why, he 's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why, she 's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. Tut! she 's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.

I'll tell you, sir Lucentio; When the priest
Should ask—if Katharine should be his wife,

"Ay, by gogs-wouns," quoth he; and swore so loud

That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book:

And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,

This mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff,

That down fell priest and book, and book and priest;

"Now take them up," quoth he, "if any list."

Tra. What said the wench, when he arose again?

Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd, and swore,

As if the vicar meant to cozen him.

But after many ceremonies done,

He calls for wine:—"A health," quoth he, as if

He had been aboard, carousing to his mates

After a storm:—"Quaff'd off the muscadel,

And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;

Having no other reason,—

But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,

And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.

This done, he took the bride about the neck,

And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack,

That, at the parting, all the church did echo.

And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;

And after me, I know, the rout is coming:

Such a mad marriage never was before.

Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play. [Music.]

Enter PETRUCIO, KATHARINA, BIANCA, BAPTISTA, HORTENSIO, GRUMIO, and Train.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains:

I know, you think to dine with me to-day,

And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;

But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,

And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is 't possible you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come:

Make it no wonder; if you knew my business

You would entreat me rather go than stay.

And, honest company, I thank you all,

That have beheld me give away myself

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife:

Dine with my father, drink a health to me;
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay;
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse.<sup>a</sup>

Gr. Ay, sir, they be ready; the oats have eaten the horses.

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;
No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.

The door is open, sir, there lies your way,

You may be jogging whiles your boots are green

For me, I 'll not be gone, till I please myself:

'T is like, you 'll prove a jolly surly groom,

That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O Kate, content thee; prithee be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry. What hast thou to do?

Father, be quiet: he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, sir: now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner:

I see, a woman may be made a fool,

If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command:

Obey the bride, you that attend on her:

Go to the feast, revel and domineer,

Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,

Be mad and merry,—or go hang yourselves;

But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;

I will be master of what is mine own:

She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household-stuff, my field, my barn,

My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything;

And here she stands, touch her whoever dare

I 'll bring mine action on the proudest he

That stops my way in Padua. Grumio,

Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man:—

Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch

Kate;

I 'll buckler thee against a million.

[Exeunt PET., KATH., and

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones

Gre. Went they not quickly I should die laughing.

Tra. Of all mad matches, never was the like!

Luc. Mistress, what 's your opinion of your sister?

Bian. That, being mad herself, she 's madly

Gre. I warrant him, Petrucio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though bride and groom wants,

For to supply the places at the table,

You know there wants no junkets at the feast;

Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place

And let Bianca take her sister's room.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride

Bap. She shall, Lucentio.—Come, gentlemen, [A

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Petrucio's Country House.

Enter GRUMIO.

Gr. Fie, fie, on all tired jades! on all mad masters! and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so rayed?<sup>b</sup> was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warn them. Now, were not I a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me:—But, I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Holla, ho! Curtis!

Enter CURTIS.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gr. A piece of ice: If thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?

Gr. O, ay, Curtis, ay: and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she 's reported?

Gr. She was, good Curtis, before this frost: but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master and my new mistress, and myself,<sup>c</sup> fellow Curtis.

Curt. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

Gr. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I, at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress,

Curt. I prithee, good Grumio, tell me, How good a world?

Gr. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but mine, and, therefore, fire: Do thy duty, and have thy reward for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curt. There 's fire ready; And, therefore, good Grumio, the news?

Gr. Why, "Jack, boy! ho, boy!"<sup>d</sup> and as much news as thou wilt.

Curt. Come, you are so full of cony-catching.

Gr. Why, therefore, fire; for I have caught a cold. Where 's the cook? is supper ready, the trimmings, rushes strewed, cobwebs swept; the men in their new fustian, the white stockings, and the officer his wedding garment on? Be the jacks within, the jills fair without,<sup>e</sup> the carpets laid, everything in order?

Curt. All ready. And, therefore, I pray thee,

Gr. First, know, my horse is tired; my mistress fallen out.

Curt. How?

Gr. Out of their saddles into the dirt. And hangs a tale.

There were none fine but Adam, Ralph, and Gre-

Where 's my spaniel Troilus?—Sirrah, get you hence,
And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither: [Ex. Ser.
One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with.

Where are my slippers?—Shall I have some water?
[A bason is presented to him.

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily:—
[Servant lets the ewer fall

You whoreson villain! will you let it fall?
[Strikes him.

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 't was a fault unwilling
Pet. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave!

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.
Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I?
What is this? mutton?

1 Serv. Ay. Who brought it?
Pet. I. Who brought it?
1 Serv. I.

Pet. 'T is burnt; and so is all the meat:
What dogs are these!—Where is the rascal cook?
How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it not?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:

[Throws the meat, &c., about the stage
You heedless jolt-heads, and unmanner'd slaves!
What, do you grumble? I 'll be with you straight.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet;
The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 't was burnt and dried away
And I expressly am forbid to touch it,
For it engenders cholera, planteth anger;
And better 't were that both of us did fast,
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,
Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.
Be patient; to-morrow it shall be mended,
And, for this night, we 'll fast for company:
Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

[Exeunt PET., KATH., and CURT.
Nath. [Advancing.] Peter, didst ever see the like?
Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter CURTIS.

Gru. Where is he?
Curt. In her chamber,
Making a sermon of continency to her:
And rails, and swears, and rates; that she, poor soul,
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak;

<sup>a</sup> In 'A Handful of Pleasant Delites,' 1584, this is the title of a "new Sonet."

<sup>b</sup> These words are thought to express the noise made by a person heated and fatigued.

And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither.

[Exeunt.]Re-enter PETRUCCIO.

Pet. Thus have I politically begun my reign,
And 't is my hope to end successfully:
My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty;
And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my haggard,<sup>a</sup>
To make her come, and know her keeper's call,
That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites,
That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;
Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not;
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I 'll find about the making of the bed;
And here I 'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets:—
Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend,
That all is done in reverend care of her,
And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night:
And, if she chance to nod, I 'll rail and brawl,
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness;
And thus I 'll curb her mad and headstrong humour:
He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak; 't is charity to show.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Padua. Before Baptista's House.

Enter TRANIO and HORTENSIO.

Tra. Is 't possible, friend Licio, that mistress Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?
I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,
Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

[They stand aside.]Enter BIANCA and LUCENTIO.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?

Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.

Luc. I read that I profess, the art to love.

Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of your art!

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart!

[They retire.]

Hor. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me, I pray,
You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tra. O spiteful love! unconstant womankind!
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;
But one that scorn to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion:
Know, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca;
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you,—if you be so contented,—
Forswear Bianca, and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court! Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more; but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeigned oath,
Never to marry with her though she would entreat:
Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court him.

Hor. 'Would all the world, but he, had quite for-sworn!

<sup>a</sup>To man my haggard—to tame my wild hawk.

For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow
Ere three days pass; which hath as long lov'd me,
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard:
And so farewell, signior Lucentio.
Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love: and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before.

[Exit HOR.—Luc. and BIAN. adentro.]

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace
As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest. But have you both forsworn
me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tra. I' faith, he 'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he 'll tame her.

Bian. He says so, Tranio.

Tra. 'Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petrucio is the master;
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter BIONDELLO, running.

Bion. O master, master, I have watch'd so long
That I am dog-weary; but at last I spied
An ancient angle<sup>a</sup> coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?

Bion. Master, a mercatante, or a pedant,
I know not what; but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I 'll make him glad to seem Vincentio;
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.

Take in your love, and then let me alone.

[Exeunt Luc. and Bion.]Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, sir!

Tra. And you, sir! you are welcome
Travel you far on, or are you at the farthest?

Ped. Sir, at the farthest for a week or two;
But then up farther; and as far as Rome;
And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life.

Tra. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua, sir?—marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?

Ped. My life, sir! how, I pray? for that goes hand

Tra. 'T is death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?
Your ships are stay'd at Venice; and the duke
(For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him)
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'T is marvel; but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas, sir, it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this I will advise you:
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

<sup>a</sup> Angle. An angle is a bait, allurement; and, in the of the passage before us, is also one who may be allured, ceived. An angle, in the old writers, is a gull.

ry, sir, in Pisa have I often been ;
 wned for grave citizens.
 mong them, know you one Vincentio ?
 know him not, but I have heard of him ;
 it of incomparable wealth.
 e is my father, sir ; and, sooth to say,
 tance somewhat doth resemble you.
 s much as an apple doth an oyster, and all

[Aside.

o save your life in this extremity,
 r will I do you for his sake ;
 it not the worst of all your fortunes,
 are like to sir Vincentio.
 and credit shall you undertake,
 y house you shall be friendly lodg'd.
 y you take upon you as you should ;
 stand me, sir ;—so shall you stay are done your business in the city :
 courtesy, sir, accept of it.
 r, sir, I do ; and will repute you ever
 of my life and liberty.
 en go with me, to make the matter good.
 e way, I let you understand ;
 is here look'd for every day,
 urance of a dower in marriage and one Baptista's daughter here :
 e circumstances I 'll instruct you :
 e, sir, to clothe you as becomes you. [Exeunt.

RE III.—A Room in Petrucio's House.

Enter KATHARINA and GRUMIO.

o, no ; forsooth, I dare not, for my life.
 he more my wrong, the more his spite appears :
 he marry me to famish me ?
 at come unto my father's door,
 aty, have a present alms ;
 where they meet with charity :
 never knew how to entreat,
 needed that I should entreat,
 I for meat, giddy for lack of sleep ;
 kept waking, and with brawling fed .
 which spites me more than all these wants,
 under name of perfect love ;
 wld say, if I should sleep, or eat,
 adly sickness, or else present death.
 a, and get me some repast ;
 what, so it be wholesome food.
 hat say you to a neat's foot ?
 'tis passing good ; I prithee let me have it.
 fear it is too choleric a meat :
 us to a fat tripe, finely broil'd ?
 like it well ; good Grumio, fetch it me.
 cannot tell ; I fear 't is choleric.
 you to a piece of beef, and mustard ?
 dish that I do love to feed upon.
 r, but the mustard is too hot a little.
 Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.
 ay, then I will not ; you shall have the mustard,
 get no beef of Grumio.
 hen both, or one, or anything thou wilt by, then the mustard without the beef.
 o, get these gone, thou false deluding slave, [Beats him.
 t me with the very name of meat ;
 these, and all the pack of you,
 ph thus upon my misery !
 e gone, I say.

Petrucio, with a dish of meat ; and Hortensio.

ow fares my Kate ? What, sweeting, all mort ?
 stress, what cheer ?

* All amors—dispirited.

Kath.

'Faith, as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.
 Here, love ; thou see'st how diligent I am,
 To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee :

[Sets the dish on a table.

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
 What, not a word ? Nay, then thou lov'st it not ;
 And all my pains is sorted to no proof :
 Here, take away this dish.

Kath.

I pray you, let it stand.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks ;
 And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, sir.

Hor. Signior Petrucio, fie ! you are to blame :
 Come, mistress Kate, I 'll bear you company.

Pet. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.

[Aside.

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart !
 Kate, eat apace ;—And now, my honey love,
 Will we return unto thy father's house ;
 And revel it as bravely as the best,
 With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
 With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things ;
 With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,
 With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.
 What, hast thou din'd ? The tailor stays thy leisure,
 To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments ;

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown.—What news with you, sir ?

Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a porringer ;
 A velvet dish ;—fie, fie ! 't is lewd and filthy ;
 Why, 't is a cockle, or a walnutshell,
 A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap ;
 Away with it, come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I 'll have no bigger ; this doth fit the time,
 And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,
 And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste. [Aside.

Kath. Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak ;
 And speak I will. I am no child, no babe :
 Your betters have endur'd me say my mind ;
 And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
 My tongue will tell the anger of my heart ;
 Or else my heart, concealing it, will break ;
 And rather than it shall, I will be free
 Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true ; it is a paltry cap,
 A custard-coffin,<sup>a</sup> a bauble, a silken pie :
 I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap ;
 And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown ? why, ay.—Come, tailor, let us see 't O mercy, God ! what masking stuff is here !

What 's this ? a sleeve ? 't is like a demi-cannon ;
 What ! up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart ?
 Here 's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish, and slash,
 Like to a censer in a barber's shop :

Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this ?

Hor. I see, she 's like to have neither cap nor gown.

[Aside.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
 According to the fashion and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did ; but if you be remember'd,
 I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every kennel home,
 For you shall hop without my custom, sir :
 I 'll none of it ; hence, make your best of it.

<sup>a</sup> Custard-coffin. The crust of a pie was called the coffin

Kath. I never saw a better fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread,
Thou thimble,
Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail,
Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou:
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread!
Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant;
Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!
I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?

Gru. Thou hast faced* many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast brav'd<sup>b</sup> many men; brave not me. I will neither be faced nor brav'd. I say unto thee—I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lies in 's throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. Imprimis, "a loose-bodied gown:"

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said, a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. "With a small compassed cape;"

Gru. I confess the cape.

Tai. "With a trunk sleeve;"

Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. "The sleeves curiously cut."

Pet. Ay, there 's the villainy.

Gru. Error i' the bill, sir; error i' the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again: and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true, that I say; and I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i' the right, sir; 't is for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!

Pet. Why, sir, what 's your conceit in that?

Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for:
Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use!
O, fie, fie, fie!

Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid:—

[Aside.]

Go, take it hence; begone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow.
Take no unkindness of his hasty words:

Away, I say; commend me to thy master. [Exit Tailor.]

Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's,

Even in these honest mean habiliments;

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:

For 't is the mind that makes the body rich;

As the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

—made facings.

<sup>b</sup> Braved—made fine.

So honour peereth in the meanest habit.

What, is the jay more precious than the lark,

Because his feathers are more beautiful?

Or is the adder better than the eel,

Because his painted skin contents the eye?

O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse

For this poor furniture and mean array.

If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me:

And therefore frolic; we will hence forthwith,

To feast and sport us at thy father's house.

Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,

There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.

Let 's see; I think 't is now some seven o'clock,

And well we may come there by dinner-time.

Kath. I dare assure you, sir, 't is almost two;

And 't will be supper-time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven, ere I go to horse:

Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,

You are still crossing it.—Sirs, let 't alone:

I will not go to-day; and ere I do,

It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hor. Why, so! this gallant will command the sun

[Exit]

SCENE IV.—Padua. Before Baptista's House.

Enter TRANIO, and the Pedant dressed like VINCENTIO.

Tra. Sir, this is the house. Please it you that call?

Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceiv'd,

Signior Baptista may remember me,

Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,

Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus.

Tra. 'T is well; and hold your own, in any case,
With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Ped. I warrant you: But, sir, here comes your son: 'T were good he were school'd.

Tra. Fear you not him. Sirrah Biondello,

Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you;

Imagine 't were the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut! fear not me.

Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?

Bion. I told him, that your father was at Venice;

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou 'rt a tall fellow; hold thee that to do:
Here comes Baptista:—set your countenance, sir.

Enter BAPTISTA and LUCENTIO.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met:—

Sir, [to the Pedant] this is the gentleman I told you

I pray you, stand good father to me now,

Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, son!

Sir, by your leave, having come to Padua

To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio

Made me acquainted with a weighty cause

Of love between your daughter and himself:

And,—for the good report I hear of you;

And for the love he beareth to your daughter,

And she to him,—to stay him not too long,

I am content, in a good father's care,

To have him match'd; and,—if you pleas'd to like

No worse than I,—upon some agreement,

Me shall you find ready and willing

With one consent to have her so bestow'd;

For curious<sup>a</sup> I cannot be with you,

Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say:—

Your plainness and your shortness please me well.

Right true it is, your son Lucentio here

<sup>a</sup> Curious—scrupulous.

my daughter, and she loveth him,
 assemble deeply their affections :
 before, if you say no more than this,
 a father you will deal with him,
 my daughter a sufficient dower,
 is made, and all is done :
 shall have my daughter with consent.
 I thank you, sir. Where then do you know
 it,
 bed ; and such assurance ta'en,
 with either part's agreement stand ?
 Not in my house, Lucentio ; for, you know,
 have ears, and I have many servants :
 old Gremio is hear'ning still ;
 quily, we might be interrupted.
 Then at my lodging, an it like you :
 th my father lie ; and there, this night,
 as the business privately and well :
 your daughter by your servant here,
 shall fetch the scrivener presently.
 it is this, that, at so slender warning,
 like to have a thin and slender pittance.
 It likes me well : Cambio, hie you home,
 Bianca make her ready straight ;
 you will, tell what hath happened :
 his father is arriv'd in Padua,
 she's like to be Lucentio's wife !
 I pray the gods she may, with all my art !
 Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
 Baptista, shall I lead the way ?
 He ! one mess is like to be your cheer ;
 we will better it in Pisa.

I follow you.

[Exeunt TRA., PED., and BAP.]

Cambio.

What say'st thou, Biondello ?

You saw my master wink and laugh upon
 you ?

Biondello, what of that ?

Faith, nothing ; but he has left me here bespound the meaning or moral of his signs
 as.

I pray thee, moralize them.

Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the father of a deceitful son.

And what of him ?

His daughter is to be brought by you to the

And then ?

The old priest at saint Luke's church is at hand at all hours.

And what of all this ?

I cannot tell : expect<sup>n</sup> they are busied about feil assurance : Take you assurance of her legio ad imprimendum solim : to the church ;
 a priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest wite not that you look for, I have no more to say.

Bianca farewell for ever and a day. [Going.
 Fear'st thou, Biondello ?

I cannot tarry : I knew a wench married in an as she went to the garden for parsley to dist ; and so may you, sir ; and so adieu, sir.
 He hath appointed me to go to saint Luke's, to wait be ready to come against you come with
 me.

I may, and will, if she be so contented :
 be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt ?

It hap may, I 'll roundly go about her ;
 so hand, if Cambio go without her. [Exit.

Expect—behere—think—thy are misled, &c.

SCENE V.—A public Road.

Enter PETRUCIO, KATHARINA, and HORTENSIO.

Pet. Come on, o' God's name ; once more toward our father's.

Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon !

Kath. The moon ! the sun ; it is not moonlight now.

Pet. I say it is the moon that shines so bright.

Kath. I know it is the sun that shines so bright.

Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and that 's myself,

It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,

Or ere I journey to your father's house :

Go on, and fetch our horses back again.

Evermore cross'd and cross'd : nothing but cross'd

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,

And be it moon, or sun, or what you please :

And if you please to call it a rush candle,

Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say it is the moon.

Kath. I know it is the moon.

Pet. Nay, then you lie ; it is the blessed sun.

Kath. Then, God be bless'd, it is the blessed sun ;

But sun it is not, when you say it is not ;

And the moon changes, even as your mind.

What you will have it nam'd, even that it is ;

And so it shall be so for Katharine.

Hor. Petrucio, go thy ways ; the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward : thus the bowl should run,

And not unluckily against the bias.

But soft ! Company is coming here !

Enter VINCENTIO, in a travelling dress.

Good morrow, gentle mistress : Where away ? [To VIN.]

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,

Hast thou beheld a fresher gentler woman ?

Such war of white and red within her cheeks ?

What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,

As those two eyes become that heavenly face ?

Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee :

Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet,

Whither away ; or where is thy abode ?

Happy the parents of so fair a child ;

Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bedfellow !

Pet. Why, how now, Kate ? I hope thou art not mad :

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd ;

And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes,

That have been so bedazzled with the sun,

That everything I look on seemeth green :

Now I perceive thou art a reverend father ;

Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire ; and, withal, make known

Which way thou travellest : if along with us,

We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress,

That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me,

My name is call'd Vincentio : my dwelling Pisa ;

And bound I am to Padua ; there to visit

A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name ?

Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir.

Pet. Happily met ; the happier for thy son.

And now by law, as well as reverend age,

I may entitle thee my loving father ;

The sister to my wife, this gentler woman,

Thy sou by this hath married: wonder not,
Nor be not griev'd; she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth
Beside, so qualified as may beseem
The spouse of any noble gentleman.
Let me embrace with old Vincentio:
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.
Vin. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,

Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?
Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.
Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof:
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.
[Exeunt PET., KATH., and
Hor. Well, Petrucio, this hath put me in head
Have to my widow; and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Padua. Before Lucentio's House.

Enter on one side BIONDELLO, LUCENTIO, and BIANCA; GREMIO walking on the other side.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.
Luc. I fly, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.

Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back; and then come back to my master as soon as I can.

[Exeunt LUC., BIAN., and BION.
Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter PETRUCIO, KATHARINA, VINCENTIO, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here 's the door, this is Lucentio's house, My father's bears more toward the market-place; Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go; I think I shall command your welcome here, And by all likelihood, some cheer is toward. [Knocks.

Gre. They're busy within, you were best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above at a window.

Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is signior Lucentio within, sir?

Ped. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself; he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances,—I pray you, tell signior Lucentio that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest; his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pet. Why, how now, gentleman! [To VINCENTIO.] why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain. I believe a' means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together; God send 'em good shipping!—But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio? Now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither, crack-hemp. [Seeing BION.

Bion. I hope I may choose, sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you? no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life,

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master?

marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window

Vin. Is 't so, indeed? [Beats

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman murder me.

Ped. Help, son! help, signior Baptista!

[Exit from the window

Pet. Prithee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They

Re-enter Pedant below; BAPTISTA, TRANIO, Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my son?

Vin. What am I, sir? nay, what are you, sir, immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet, velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat! I am undone, I am undone! While I play the husband at home, my son and my servant spend the university.

Tra. How now? what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatic?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman, your habit, but your words show you a madman. sir, what cerns<sup>b</sup> it you if I wear pearl and gold? thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father? O villain! he is a sullen Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir: what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name? as if I knew not his name: brought him up ever since he was three years of his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! His name is Lucentio, and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! O, he hath murdered his father, lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name, my son, my son!—tell me, thou villain, where son, Lucentio.

Tra. Call forth an officer: [Enter one of the Officer.] Carry this mad knave to the gaol:—

Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, signior Gremio. I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be caught in this business. I dare swear this is the son of Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou dares.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard: to the gaol with him!

Vin. Thus strangers may be hal'd and abus'd!

O monstrous villain!

<sup>b</sup> Cerns means conceals.

BIONDELLO, with LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

O, we are spoiled, and—Yonder he is; deny weir him, or else we are all undone.

Pardon, sweet father. [Kneeling.]

Lives my sweet son?

[BION., TRA., and Ped. run out.]

Pardon, dear father. [Kneeling.]

How hast thou offended?

Lucentio?

Here 's Lucentio,

and unto the right Vincentio;
and for marriage made thy daughter mine,
interfeit supposes blear'd thine eyne.
Here 's packing with a witness, to deceive us
all!

Where is that damned villain, Tranio,
and brav'd me in this matter so?
Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?
Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love exchange my state with Tranio, and did bear my countenance in the town;
pily I have arriv'd at last wished haven of my bliss:

Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to;
adon him, sweet father, for my sake.

I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me glad.

But do you hear, sir? [To LUCENTIO.] Have sed my daughter without asking my good-will?
fear not, Baptista; we will content you: go to:
ill in, to be reveng'd for this villainy. [Exit.]

And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. [Exit.]
Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exit LUC. and BIAN.]

My cake is dough.<sup>a</sup> But I'll in among the rest;
spe of all,—but my share of the feast. [Exit.]

PETRUCCIO and KATHARINA advance.
Husband, let 's follow, to see the end of this ado.
First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

What, in the midst of the street?
That art thou ashamed of me?

No, sir; God forbid:—but ashamed to kiss.
Why, then, let 's home again:—Come, sirrah,
let 's away.

Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee,
love, stay.

's not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate;
see than never, for never too late. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Lucentio's House.

Enter BAPTISTA, VINCENTIO, and the Pedant, LUCENTIO, BIANCA, PETRU-CCIO, KATHARINA, HORTENSIO, and Widow. TRA-BIONDELLO, Gremio, and others, attending.

At last, though long, our jarring notes agree;
and 't is, when raging war is done,
at 'scapes and perils overblown.

Bianca, bid my father welcome,
with self-same kindness welcome thine:
Petruccio,—sister Katharina,—

Hortensio, with thy loving widow,— and the best, and welcome to my house.

Let us to close our stomachs up,
and great good cheer: Pray you, sit down;

we sit to chat, as well as eat. [They sit at table.]

Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat.

Padua affords this kindness, son Petruccio.

He is dough. This proverbial expression is used in Lestrange, to express the disappointment of the heirs of France when Louis XIV. was born: "So that our cake is dough."

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Hor. For both our sakes, I would that word were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.

Wid. Then never trust me if I be afraid.<sup>a</sup>

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense;

I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Pet. Roundly replied.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me!—How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended: Kiss him for that, good widow.

Kath. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:—

I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,

Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:

And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.

Hor. That 's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer:—Ha' to thee, lad.

[Drinks to HORTENSIO.]

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bian. Head, and butt? an hasty-witted body

Would say your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd you?

Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep
again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have begun,
Have at you for a bitter jest or two.

Bian. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush,

And then pursue me as you draw your bow:—

You are welcome all. [Ex. BIAN., KATH., and Widow.]

Pet. She hath prevented me.—Here, signior Tranio,

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not;

Therefore, a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O, sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,

Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something currish.

Tra. 'T is well, sir, that you hunted for yourself;

'T is thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruccio, Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. A' has a little gall'd me, I confess;

And, as the jest did glance away from me,

'T is ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruccio,

I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say—no: and, therefore, for assurance,

Let 's each one send unto his wife;

And he, whose wife is most obedient

To come at first, when he doth send for her,

Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content: What 's the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much on my hawk, or hound,

But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match; 't is done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

<sup>a</sup> The use of fear in the active and passive sense is here explified.

Luc. That will I.
Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.
Bion. I go. [Exit.]
Bap. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.
Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

How now! what news?
Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word
That she is busy, and she cannot come.
Pet. How! she's busy, and she cannot come!
Is that an answer?
Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:
Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.
Pet. I hope, better.
Hor. Sirrah Biondello, go, and entreat my wife
To come to me forthwith. [Exit BIONDELLO.]
Pet. O, ho! entreat her!
Nay, then she must needs come.
Hor. I am afraid, sir,
Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Now, where's my wife?
Bion. She says, you have some goodly jest in hand;
She will not come; she bids you come to her.
Pet. Worse and worse; she will not come! O vile, Intolerable, not to be endur'd!
Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress;
Say I command her come to me. [Exit GRUMIO.]
Hor. I know her answer.
Pet. What?
Hor. She will not.
Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter KATHARINA.

Bap. Now, by my holiday, here comes Katharina!
Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?
Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?
Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.
Pet. Go, fetch them hither; if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:
Away, I say, and bring them hither straight. [Exit KATH.]
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is; I wonder what it bodes.
Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,
An awful rule, and right supremacy;
And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.
Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petrucio!
The wager thou hast won; and I will add
Unto thy losses twenty thousand crowns!
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.
Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet;
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter KATHARINA, with BIANCA and Widow.

See, where she comes; and brings your froward wives
As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.
Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not;
Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.
[KATH. pulls off her cap, and throws it down.]
Wid. Lord, let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!
Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper-time.
Bian. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.

Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women

What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.
Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will hat no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her
Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say, she shall;—and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that threat'ning unkind brow
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,

To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:
It blots thy beauty, as frosts do bite the meads;
Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet or amiable.

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;

And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance: commits his body

To painful labour, both by sea and land;
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,

While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,

But love, fair looks, and true obedience,—
Too little payment for so great a debt.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:

And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,

What is she, but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?

I am asham'd, that women are so simple
To offer war, where they should kneel for peace;

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.

Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil, and trouble in the world,

But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our external parts?

Come, come, you froward and unable worms!
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,

My heart as great; my reason, haply, more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;

But now, I see our lances are but straws;
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,—

That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot;

And place your hands below your husbands' feet
In token of which duty, if he please,

My hand is ready, may it do him ease!

Pet. Why, there's a wench!—Come on, and kiss me
Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt ha'

Vin. 'T is a good bearing, when children are toward

Luc. But a harsh bearing, when women are froward

Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed:
We three are married, but you two are sped.

'T was I won the wager, though you hit the white;<sup>a</sup>
And, being a winner, God give you good night!

Hor. Now go thy ways, thou hast tam'd a cur shrew.<sup>b</sup>

Luc. 'T is a wonder, by your leave, she will tam'd so.

<sup>a</sup> Hit the white—a term in archery.

<sup>b</sup> Shrew. It would appear from this couplet, and another this scene, where shrew rhymes to woe, that shrew was the pronunciation.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE,' like 'A Midsummer-Night's Dream,' was first printed in 1600; and it had a further similarity to that play from the circumstance of two editions appearing in the same year—the one bearing the name of a publisher, Thomas Heyes, the other that of a printer, J. Roberts. The play was not reprinted till it appeared in the folio of 1623. In that edition there are a few variations from the quartos. All these editions present the internal evidence of having been printed from correct copies. 'The Merchant of Venice' is one of the plays of Shakspeare mentioned by Francis Meres in 1598, and it is the last mentioned in his list.

Stephen Gosson, who, in 1579, was moved to publish a tract called 'The School of Abuse, containing a pleasant invective against poets, pipers, players, jesters, and such like caterpillars of the commonwealth,' thus describes a play of his time:—"The Jew, shown at the Bull, representing the greedyness of worldly choosers, and the bloody minds of usurers." Whatever might have been the plot of 'The Jew' mentioned by Gosson, the story of the bond was ready to Shakspeare's hand, in a ballad to which Warton first drew attention. He considers that the ballad was written before 'The Merchant of Venice.' But this ballad of 'Gernutus' wants that remarkable feature of the play, the intervention of Portia to save the life of the Merchant; and this, to our minds, is the strongest confirmation that the ballad preceded the comedy. Shakspeare found that incident in the source from which the ballad-writer professed to derive his history:—

" In Venice towne not long agoe,
A cruel Jew did dwell,
Which lived all on usurie.
As Italian writers tell."

It was from an Italian writer, Ser Giovanni, the author of a collection of tales called 'Il Pecorone,' written in the fourteenth century, and first published at Milan in 1558, that Shakspeare unquestionably derived some of the incidents of his story, although he might be familiar with another version of the same tale.

"It is well known," says Mrs. Jameson, "that 'The Merchant of Venice' is founded on two different tales; and in weaving together his double plot in so masterly a manner, Shakspeare has rejected altogether the character of the astutious lady of Belmont, with her magic potions, who figures in the Italian novel. With yet more refinement, he has thrown out all the licentious part of the story, which some of his contemporary dramatists would have seized on with avidity, and made the best or the worst of it possible; and he has substituted the trial of the caskets from another source.* That source is the 'Gesta Romanorum.'

In dealing with the truly dramatic subject of the forfeiture of the bond, Shakspeare had to choose between one of two courses that lay open before him. The 'Gesta Romanorum' did not surround the debtor and the creditor with any prejudices. We hear nothing of one being a Jew, the other a Christian. There is a remarkable story told by Gregorio Leti, in his 'Life of Pope Sixtus the Fifth,' in which the debtor and creditor 'The Merchant of Venice' change places. The debtor is the Jew,—the revengeful creditor the Christian; and this incident is said to have happened in Rome in the time of Sir Francis Drake. This, doubt, was a pure fiction of Leti, whose narratives by no means to be received as authorities; but it is probable that he felt the intolerance of the old story, and endeavoured to correct it, though in a very inartificial manner. Shakspeare took the story as he found it in the narratives which represented the popular prejudice. He had not before him the ballad of 'Gernutus,' (on which point it is difficult to decide,) he had certainly access to the tale of the 'Pecorone.' If he had not the contest connected with the story of the bond between two of the same faith, he would have lost the powerful hold which the subject possessed upon the feelings of an audience two centuries and a half. If he had gone directly counter to those feelings, (supposing that the story which Leti tells had been known to him, as some have supposed,) his comedy would have been hooted from the stage.

'The Prioress's Tale' of Chaucer belonged to a period when the Jews were robbed, maimed, banished, and most foully vilified, with the universal consent of the powerful and the lowly, the learned and the ignorant:—

" There was in Asie, in a grete citee, Amonges Cristen folk a Jewerie.
Sustened by a lord of that contree,
For foul usure, and lucre of vilanie,
Hateful to Crist, and to his compaignie."

It was scarcely to be avoided in those times that Chaucer, the most genuine and natural of poets, should lend his great powers to the support of the popular belief that Jews ought to be proscribed as—

"Hateful to Crist, and to his compaignie."

But we ought to expect better things when we were in the times in which the principles of religious liberty were at least germinated. And yet what a play Marlowe's 'Jew of Malta,'—undoubtedly one of the most popular plays even of Shakspeare's day, judging we may from the number of performances recorded in Henslowe's papers! That drama, as compared with 'The Merchant of Venice,' has been described by Charles Lamb, with his usual felicity:—"Marlowe's Jew does not approach so near to Shakspeare's as Edward II. Shylock, in the midst of his savage purpose, is a man. His motives, feelings, resentments, something human in them. 'If you wrong us, we not revenge?' Barabas is a mere monster, brutal with a large painted nose, to please the rabble. He kills in sport—poisons whole nunneries—invents infernal machines. He is just such an exhibition as a century or two earlier, might have been played by the Londoners, by the Royal command, when a general pillage and massacre of the Hebrews had been previously resolved on in the cabinet." 'The Jew of Malta' was written essentially upon an intolerant principle. 'The Merchant of Venice,' whilst it seized upon the prejudices of the multitude, and dealt with them as a foregone conclusion by which the whole dramatic action was to be governed, had the intention of meeting those prejudices as hateful as the reaction of cruelty and revenge of which they are the cause.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

ANTONIO, SALARINO, and SOLANIO.
 O brother, I know not why I am so sad;
 you say it worries you;
 might it, found it, or came by it,
 it is made of, whereof it is born,
 that want-wit sadness makes of me,
 much ado to know myself.
 our mind is tossing on the ocean;
 your argosies with portly sail,
 and rich burghers on the flood,
 the pageants of the sea,
 the petty traffickers,
 to them, do them reverence,
 by them with their woven wings.
 believe me, sir, had I such venture forth, part of my affections would hopes abroad. I should be still a grass, to know where sits the wind;
 naps, for ports, and piers, and roads;
 object that might make me fear
 o my ventures, out of doubt,
 me sad.

My wind, cooling my broth,
 me to an ague when I thought

What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
 I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
 But I should think of shallows and of flats;
 And see my wealthy Andrew<sup>a</sup> dock'd in sand,
 Vailing her high-top<sup>b</sup> lower than her ribs,
 To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
 And see the holy edifice of stone,
 And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
 Which, touching but my gentle vessel's side,
 Would scatter all her spices on the stream;
 Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks;
 And, in a word, but even now worth this,
 And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought
 To think on this; and shall I lack the thought
 That such a thing, bechanc'd, would make me sad?
 But tell not me; I know Antonio
 Is sad to think upon his merchandize.
Ant. Believe me, no; I thank my fortune for it,
 My ventures<sup>c</sup> are not in one bottom trusted,

<sup>a</sup> Wealthy Andrew. Johnson explains this (which is scarcely necessary) as "the name of the ship;" but he does not point out the propriety of the name for a ship, in association with the great naval commander, Andrea Doria, famous through all Italy.

<sup>b</sup> Vailing her high-top. To vail is to let down: the high-top was shattered—fallen—when the Andrew was on the shallows.

<sup>c</sup> My ventures, &c. This was no doubt proverbial—something more elegant than "all the eggs in one basket."

Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad.

Salar. Why, then you are in love.

Ant.

Fie, fie!

Salar. Not in love neither? Then let us say, you are sad

Because you are not merry: and 't were as easy
For you to laugh, and leap, and say you are merry,
Because you are not sail. Now, by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper:
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter BASSANIO, LORENZO, and GRATIANO.

Solan. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kins-
man,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo: Fare you well;
We leave you now with better company.

Salar. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry,

If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.

I take it, your own business calls on you,

And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salar. Good morrow, my good lords.

Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh?

Say, when?

You grow exceeding strange: Must it be so?

Salar. We'll make our leisuress to attend on yours.

[Exit SALARINO and SOLANIO.]

Lor. My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,
We two will leave you; but at dinner-time
I pray you have in mind where we must meet.

Bass. I will not fail you.

Gra. You look not well, signior Antonio;

You have too much respect upon the world:

They lose it that do buy it with much care.

Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;

A stage, where every man must play a part,

And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the Fool
With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come;
And let my liver rather heat with wine,
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.

Why should a man whose blood is warm within

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?

Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the jaundice

By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio,—

I love thee, and it is my love that speaks:—

These are a sort of men, whose visages

Do cream and mantle like a standing pond;

And do a wilful stillness entertain,

With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion

Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;

As who should say, "I am sir Oracle,

And when I open my lips let no dog bark!"

I, my Antonio, I do know of these,

That therefore only are reputed wise

For saying nothing; who, I am very sure,

If they should speak, would almost damn those ears

Which, hearing them, would call their brothers fools.

I'll tell thee more of this another time:

With this melancholy bait,

They'll catch this opinion.

Ant.—Fare ye well, a while;

I'll attend you at dinner-time after dinner.

Bass. We will leave you then till dinner-time:

I'll tell thee more of these same dumb wise men,

As I'll let me speak,

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years more,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Ant. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this year.*

Gra. Thanks, i' faith; for silence is only commendable

In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible.

[Exit GRATIANO and LORENZO.]

Ant. Is that anything now?<sup>b</sup>

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing more than any man in all Venice: His reasons are ten grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff; you shall seek all day ere you find them; and when you have found them they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'T is not unknown to you, Antonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port<sup>c</sup>
Than my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate; but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gag'd: To you, Antonio,
I owe the most in money and in love;
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
And, if it stand, as you yourself still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd
My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advised watch
To find the other forth; and by adventuring both
I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I owe you much; and, like a wilful youth,
That which I owe is lost: but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim, or to find both
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Ant. You know me well; and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance;
And, out of doubt, you do me now more wrong
In making question of my uttermost,
Than if you had made waste of all I have.
Then do but say to me what I should do,
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest<sup>d</sup> unto it: therefore speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
And she is fair, and fairer than that word,
Of wond'rous virtues. Sometimes<sup>e</sup> from her eye
I did receive fair speechless messages:
Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued
To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia.
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth;
For the four winds blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors: and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece;
Which makes her seat of Belmont, Colchos' strand,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O, my Antonio! had I but the means

* For this gear—a colloquial expression, meaning for the matter.

<sup>b</sup> Gratiano has made a commonplace attempt at wit; and Antonio gravely, but sarcastically, asks, "Is that anything?"
Bassanio replies, "Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing."

rival place with one of them,
 ainal presages me such thrift,
 sold questionless be fortunate.
 thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea;
 ave I money, nor commodity present sum: therefore go forth,
 my credit can in Venice do;
 I be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
 h thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
 stly inquire, and so will I, oney is; and I no question make,
 t of my trust, or for my sake.

[Exeunt.]

II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is a-weary of this world.

Thou wouldst be, sweet madam, if your miseries were same abundance as your good fortunes are:
 for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with food, as they that starve with nothing: It is happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean;
 and comes sooner by white hairs, but competency brings on more.

Good sentences, and well pronounced.

They would be better, if well followed.

If to do were as easy as to know what were good, chapels had been churches, and poor men's houses palaces. It is a good divine that followeth his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty times that which I do than I can prove to be good to be done, than be one of the twenty mine own teaching. The brain may devise things which the heart and sense never can reach to; and that is madness. The youth, to skip o'er the words of good counsel the cripple. But this reasoning is the fashion to choose me a husband:—
 I will choose! I may neither choose whom I please, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a father curbed by the will of a dead father:—
 I have hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor can I avoid one?

Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men have good inspirations; therefore, the lot hath devised in these three chests, of gold, silver, and lead, (whereof who chooses his meaning will, no doubt, never be chosen by any but one who you shall rightly love. But what if, in your affection towards any of these suitors that are already come?

I pray thee, overname them; and as thou hast named them, I will describe them; and according to their description level at my affection.

First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

By his own description, that 's a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can shoe himself: I am much afraid my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Then, is there the county Palatine.

He doth nothing but frown; as who should say,
 "I will not have me, choose;" he hears merry words and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanness in his youth. I had rather to be married to a fish-woman than to such a head with a bone in his mouth, than to these. God defend me from these two!

How say you by the French lord, monsieur le Count? He made him, and therefore let him pass for a Frenchman. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker.

 But, if he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan, or a better habit of frowning than the count, he is every man in no man: if a throstle sing he falls straight a capering; he will fence with his own shadow: if I should marry him I should marry twenty husbands: If he would despise me I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor pennyworth in the English.
 He is a proper man's picture. But, alas! who can converse with a dumb show? How oddly he is suited!
 I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him;
 for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober;
 and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk:
 when he is best he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst he is little better than a beast: an the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket:
 for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without,
 I know he will choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords; they have acquainted me with their determinations: which is, indeed, to return to their home and to trouble you with no more suit; unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will: I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I wish them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar, and a soldier, that came hither in company of the marquis of Montferat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio; as I think so was he called.

Ner. True, madam; he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. The four strangers seek you, madam, to take their leave: and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the prince of Morocco; who brings word the prince, his master, will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the complexion of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me.

Come, Nerissa. Sirrah, go before.

Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Venice. A public Place.Enter BASSANIO and SHYLOCK.Shy. Three thousand ducats,—well.Bass. Ay, sir, for three months.Shy. For three months,—well.Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.Shy. Antonio shall become bound,—well.Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?Shy. Three thousand ducats, for three months, and Antonio bound.Bass. Your answer to that.Shy. Antonio is a good man.Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?Shy. Oh no, no, no, no;—my meaning in saying he is a good man is, to have you understand me that he is sufficient: yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand moreover upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England; and other ventures he hath, squandered abroad.<sup>a</sup> But ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, water-thieves and land-thieves; I mean, pirates; and then, there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks: The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient;—three thousand ducats;—I think I may take his bond.Bass. Be assured you may.Shy. I will be assured I may; and that I may be assured I will bethink me: May I speak with Antonio?Bass. If it please you to dine with us.Shy. Yes, to smell pork! to eat of the habitation which your prophet, the Nazarite, conjured the devil into! I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you.—What news on the Rialto?—Who is he comes here?Enter ANTONIO.Bass. This is signior Antonio.Shy. [Aside.] How like a fawning publican he looks! I hate him for he is a Christian: But more, for that, in low simplicity, He lends out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation; and he rails, Even there where merchants most do congregate, On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, Which he calls interest: Cursed be my tribe If I forgive him!Bass. Shylock, do you hear?Shy. I am debating of my present store: And, by the near guess of my memory, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats: What of that? Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe, Will furnish me: But soft: How many months Do you desire? Rest you fair, good signior: [To ANT.] Your worship was the last man in our mouths.Ant. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow, By taking, nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I'll break a custom:—Is he yet possess'd<sup>b</sup> How much you would?Shy. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats.Ant. And for three months.Shy. I had forgot,—three months, you told me so. Well then, your bond; and, let me see. But hear you:Squandered abroad. The meaning is simply scattered.<sup>b</sup> Possess'd—informed.

Methought you said, you neither lend nor borrow, Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never use it.Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep, This Jacob from our holy Abraham was (As his wise mother wrought in his behalf) The third possessor; ay, he was the third.Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?Shy. No, not take interest; not, as you would say: Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.When Laban and himself were compromis'd That all the earnings<sup>a</sup> which were streak'd and piec'd Should fall, as Jacob's hire; the ewes, being rank, In end of autumn turned to the rams:

And when the work of generation was Between these woolly breeders in the act,

The skilful shepherd pill'd<sup>b</sup> me certain wands,

And, in the doing of the deed of kind,

He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes;

Who, then conceiving, did in eaning-time

Fall<sup>c</sup> particolour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.

This was a way to thrive, and he was bless'd;

And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd<sup>d</sup> for;

A thing not in his power to bring to pass,

But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of Heaven.

Was this inserted to make interest good?

Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams?

Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:

But note me, signior.

Ant. Mark you this, Bassanio,

The devil can cite scripture for his purpose.

An evil soul producing holy witness

Is like a villain with a smiling cheek;

A goodly apple rotten at the heart;

O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—'t is a good round sum.

Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

Ant. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft

In the Rialto you have rated me

About my moneys, and my usances:

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug;

For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe:

You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,

And spet<sup>d</sup> upon my Jewish gaberdine,

And all for use of that which is mine own.

Well, then, it now appears you need my help:

Go to then; you come to me, and you say,

"Shylock, we would have moneys;" You say so;

You, that did void your rheum upon my beard,

And foot me, as you spurn a stranger cur

Over your threshold; moneys is your suit.

What should I say to you? Should I not say,

"Hath a dog money? is it possible

A cur can lend three thousand ducats?" or Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,

With 'bated breath, and whispering humbleness,

Say this,—

"Fair sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;

You spurn'd me such a day; another time

You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies

I'll lend you thus much moneys?"

Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,

To spet on thee again, to spurn thee too.

If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not

rt of your body pleaseth me.

ere is much kindness in the Jew.
ou shall not seal to such a bond for me;
dwell* in my necessity.
by, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it;

Within these two months, that 's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

Shy. O father Abraham, what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me this;
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of man's flesh taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour I extend this friendship;
If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;

And, for my love, I pray you wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the ducats straight;
See to my house, left in the fearful guard<sup>a</sup>
Of an unthrifty knave; and presently
I will be with you. [Exit

Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.

This Hebrew will turn Christian; he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms and a villain's mind.

Ant. Come on; in this there can be no dismay,
My ships come home a month before the day. [Exeunt

So is Alcides beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.

Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then! [Cornets

SCENE II.—Venice. A Street.

Enter LAUNCELOT GOBBO.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master: The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me; saying to me,—Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away:—
My conscience says,—no; take heed, honest Launcelot;
take heed, honest Gobbo; or (as aforesaid) honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run: scorn running with thy heels:<sup>b</sup> Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack.
Via! says the fiend; away! says the fiend, for the heavens;<sup>c</sup> rouse up a brave mind, says the fiend, and run. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,—my honest friend, Launcelot, being an honest man's son, or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste;
—well, my conscience says, Launcelot, budge not:
budge, says the fiend; budge not, says my conscience:

<sup>a</sup> Fearful guard—a guard that is the cause of fear.

<sup>b</sup> When Pistol says "He hears with ears," Sir Hugh Evans calls the phrase "affectation." Perhaps Launcelot uses "scorn running with thy heels" in the same affected fashion.

<sup>c</sup> For the heavens. This expression is simply, as Gifford states, "a petty oath." It occurs in Ben Jonson and Dekker.

Conscience, say I, you counsel well; fiend, say I, you counsel well: to be ruled by my conscience I should stay with the Jew my master, who (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil; and to run away from the Jew I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself: Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnation: and, in my conscience, my conscience is a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew: The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment, I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master, young man, you, I pray you; which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O Heavens, this is my true-begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind,* high-gravel blind, knows me not: I will try conclusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. Turn upon your right hand at the next turning, but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sotties, 't will be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot that dwells with him dwell with him, or no?

Laun. Talk you of young master Launcelot?—Mark me now—[aside—now will I raise the waters:—Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what a will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot.

Laun. But I pray you ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Of Launcelot, an 't please your mastership.

Laun. Ergo, master Launcelot; talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning) is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgel, or a bovel-post, a staff, or a prop?—Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman: but, I pray you tell me, is my boy (God rest his soul!) alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes you might hail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son: Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long; a man's son may; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up; I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing; I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man; and I am sure Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn,

* Sand-blind—having an imperfect sight, as if there was sand in the eye. Shovel-blind, a disease of Launcelot's, is the exact reverse of sand-blind.

if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own blood. Lord worshipp'd might he be! what hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy Dobbinn my phill-horse<sup>a</sup> has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem then that Dobbinn's tail backward; I am sure he had more hair of his I have of my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord, how art thou changed! How and thy master agree? I have brought him a How 'gree you now?

Laun. Well, well; but for mine own part, I set up my rest to run away, so I will not re have run some ground. My master's a v Give him a present! give him a halter: I am in his service; you may tell every finger I h my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come: your present to one master Bassanio, who, ind rare new liveries; if I serve not him, I will r as God has any ground.—O rare fortune! he the man;—to him, father; for I am a Jew if the Jew any longer.

Enter BASSANIO, with LEONARDO, and other F

Bass. You may do so:—but let it be so ha supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clo these letters delivered; put the liveries to and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodg

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy! Wouldst thou aught with

Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy,—

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew that would, sir, as my father shall specify,—

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I s Jew, and have a desire, as my father shall spec

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent<sup>b</sup> to as your worship shall know by this honest ol and, though I say it, though old man, yet, po my father.

Bass. One speak for both:—What would yo

Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, s

Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd t Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day,

And hath prefer'd thee, if it be preferment, To leave a rich Jew's service, to become

The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted my master Shylock and you, sir; you have the God, sir, and be hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well. Go, father, w son:—

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire My lodging out:—give him a livery [To his Fo More guarded<sup>c</sup> than his fellows': See it done.

Laun. Father, in:—I cannot get a service, have ne'er a tongue in my head!—Well; [too his palm] if any man in Italy have a fairer table cloth offer to swear upon a book I shall have g tune! Go to, here's a simple line of life! h being bought, and orderly bestow'd,

 y best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter GRATIANO.

ere 's your master ?
 Yonder, sir, he walks. [Exit LEON.
 nior Bassanio,— atiano !
 ave a suit to you.

You have obtain'd it.
 a must not deny me : I must go with you Belmont.
 by, then you must.—But hear thee, Gratiano ;
 s wild, too rude, and bold of voice ;
 become thee happily enough,
 a eyes as ours appear not faults

 so liberal :—pray thee take pain
 th some cold drops of modesty strued in the place I go to, y hopes.

Signior Bassanio, hear me :
 put on a sober habit,
 respect, and swear but now and then,
 s-books in my pocket, look demurely ;
 while grace is saying, hood mine eyes ny hat, and sigh, and say amen ;
 observance of civility,
 all studied in a sad ostent *
 is grandam.—never trust me more.
 ll, we shall see your bearing.
 y, but I bar to-night ; you shall not gage me
 e do to-night.

No, that were pity ;
 treat you rather to put on t suit of mirth, for we have friends
 e merriment : But fare you well, e business.
 d I must to Lorenzo and the rest ;
 visit you at supper-time. [Exeunt.

II.—Venice. A Room in Shylock's House.

Enter JESSICA and LAUNCELOT.
 a sorry thou wilt leave my father so ;
 s hell, and thou, a merry devil,
 of some taste of tediousness :
 e well : there is a ducat for thee :
 celot, soon at supper shalt thou see so is thy new master's guest :
 his letter ; do it secretly,
 well ; I would not have my father
 alk with thee.
 Adieu !—tears exhibit my tongue. Most again,—most sweet Jew ! If a Christian did e knave and get thee, I am much deceived :
 these foolish drops do somewhat drown my t : adieu ! [Exit.

ewell, good Launcelot.
 a heinous sin is it in me,

* Costly—display.

To be asham'd to be my father's child :
 But though I am a daughter to his blood,
 I am not to his manners : O Lorenzo,
 If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife ;
 Become a Christian, and thy loving wife. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Venice. A Street.

Enter GRATIANO, LORENZO, SALARINO, and SOLANIO.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time ;
 Disguise us at my lodging, and return
 All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.
Salar. We have not spoke us yet of torchbearers.
Solan. 'T is vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd ;
 And better, in my mind, not undertook.

Lor. 'T is now but four o'clock ; we have two hours
 To furnish us.—

Enter LAUNCELOT, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what 's the news ?
Laun. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand : in faith, 't is a fair hand ;
 And whiter than the paper it writ on
 Is the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love-news, in faith.

Laun. By your leave, sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou ?

Laun. Marry, sir, to bid my old master the Jew to sup to-night with my new master the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this :—tell gentle Jessica,
 I will not fail her ;—speak it privately : go.
 Gentlemen, [Exit LAUN.

Will you prepare you for this masque to-night ?
 I am provided of a torchbearer.

Salar. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.

Solan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me and Gratiano
 At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salar. 'T is good we do so. [Ex. SALAR. and SOLAN.

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica ?

Lor. I must needs tell thee all : She hath directed
 How I shall take her from her father's house ;
 What gold and jewels she is furnish'd with ;
 What page's suit she hath in readiness.
 If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
 It will be for his gentle daughter's sake :
 And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
 Unless she do it under this excuse,—
 That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
 Come, go with me ; peruse this as thou goest :
 Fair Jessica shall be my torchbearer. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Venice. Before Shylock's House.

Enter SHYLOCK and LAUNCELOT.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be my judge,

The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio :

What, Jessica !—thou shalt not gormandize,

As thou hast done with me ;—What, Jessica !—

And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out ;—

Why, Jessica, I say !

Laun. Why, Jessica !

Shy. Who bids thee call ? I do not bid thee call.

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter JESSICA.

Jes. Call you ? What is your will ?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica ;

There are my keys :—But wherefore should I go ?

I am not bid for love ; they flatter me :

But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian.—Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house:—I am right loth to go;
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go; my young master doth expect your reproof.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together,—I will not say, you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock in the morning, falling out that year on Ash-Wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica:

Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd lute,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street,
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces:
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements;
Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house.—By Jacob's staff I swear,
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night:
But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrah;
Say, I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir.—
Mistress, look out at window for all this;

There will come a Christian by,

Will be worth a Jewess' eye.

Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?

Jes. His words were, Farewell, mistress; nothing else.

Shy. The patch* is kind enough; but a huge feeder,
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat; drones hive not with me,
Therefore I part with him; and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in;
Perhaps, I will return immediately;
Do as I bid you,

Shut doors after you: Fast bind, fast find;
A proverb never stale in thrifty mind.

Jes. Farewell; and if my fortune be not cross'd,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost.

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter GRATIANO and SALARINO, masqued.

Gra. This is the pent-house, under which Lorenzo Desir'd us to make a stand.

Salar. His hour is almost past.
Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salar. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new made, than they are wont
To keep obliged faith forfeited!

Gra. That ever holds: who riseth from a feast,
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.
How like a younger, or a prodigal,
The scarfed bark<sup>b</sup> puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
How like a prodigal doth she return;
With over-weather'd ribs, and ragged sails,
Starv'd, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!

*The domestic fool was sometimes called a patch; hence that this class was thus named from their vocation. Patch thus came to be an exempt.
b—the vessel gay with streamers.

Enter LORENZO.

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo;—more of his here after.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode:

Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll watch as long for you then.—Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew:—Ho! who's within?

Enter JESSICA, above, in boy's clothes.

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty, Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed;
For who love I so much? and now who knows
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heaven, and thy thoughts, are witness that thou art.

Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pain
I am glad 't is night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit;
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torchbearer.

Jes. What, must I hold a candle to my shame?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.
Why, 't is an office of discovery, love;
And I should be obscur'd.

Lor. So you are, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once;

For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.

Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.

[Exit, from above.]

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentle and no Jew.

Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily:
For she is wise, if I can judge of her;
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true;
And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself;
And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter JESSICA, below.

What, art thou come?—O, gentlemen, away;
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit, with JES. and SALAR.]

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Antonio?

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest?
'T is nine o'clock: our friends all stay for you:
No masque to-night; the wind is come about;
Bassanio presently will go aboard:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on 't; I desire no more delight
Than to be under sail and gone to-night.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter PORTIA, with the PRINCE OF MOROCCO, and both their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
The several caskets to this noble prince:—
Now make your choice.

e first, of gold, who this inscription bears :
 oseth me shall gain what many men desire."
 , silver, which this promise carries :
 ooth me shall get as much as he deserves."
 full lead, with warning all as blunt :
 oeth me must give and hazard all he hath."
 I know if I do choose the right ?
 e one of them contains my picture, prince ;
 se that, then I am yours withal.
 me god direct my judgment ! Let me see.
 y the inscriptions back again :
 this leaden casket ?
 ooth me must give and hazard all he hath."
 —For what ? for lead ? hazard for lead ?
 threatens : Men that hazard all pe of fair advantages :
 ind stoops not to shows of dross ;
 or give, nor hazard, ought for lead.
 the silver, with her virgin hue ?
 ooth me shall get as much as he deserves."
 s he deserves ?—Pause there, Morocco, thy value with an even hand :
 t rated by thy estimation,
 deserve enough ; and yet enough tend so far as to the lady :
 be afraid of my deserving weak disabbling of myself.
 I deserve !—Why, that 's the lady :
 h deserve her, and in fortunes,
 and in qualities of breeding ;
 han these, in love I do deserve.
 stray'd no further, but chose here ?—
 nce more this saying grav'd in gold :
 ooth me shall gain what many men desire."
 's the lady : all the world desires her :
 ur corners of the earth they come,
 s shrine, this mortal breathing saint.
 nian deserts, and the vasty wilds abia, are as through-fares now, to come view fair Portia :
 Kingdom, whose ambitious head face of heaven, is no bar foreign spirits ; but they come,
 ook, to see fair Portia.
 e three contains her heavenly picture.
 at lead contains her ? 'T were damnation
 s base a thought : it were too gross cerecloth in the obscure grave.
 think in silver she 's immur'd,
 times undervalued to tried gold ?
 ought ! Never so rich a gem worse than gold. They have in England
 t bears the figure of an angel s gold ; but that 's insculp'd upon ;
 n angel in a golden bed
 thin.—Deliver me the key ;
 choose, and thrive I as I may !
 ere, take it, prince, and if my form lie
 e,
 yours. [He unlocks the golden casket.
 hell ! what have we here ?
 death, within whose empty eye written scroll ? I 'll read the writing
 All that glisters is not gold,
 Often have you heard that told ;
 Many a man his life hath sold
 But my outside to behold :
 Gilded tombs do worms infold.
 Had you been as wise as bold,
 Young in limbs, in judgment old,
 Your answer had not been miscoll'd ;
 Fare you well ; your suit is cold.
 feed ; and labour lost :
 rewell heat ; and welcome frost.—

Portia, adieu ! I have too griev'd a heart
 To take a tedious leave : thus losers part. [Exit.
 Por. A gentle riddance :—Draw the curtains, go ;—
 Let all of his complexion choose me so. [Exit.

SCENE VIII.—Venice. A Street.Enter SALARINO and SOLANIO.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail ;
 With him is Gratiano gone along ;
 And in their ship, I am sure, Lorenzo is not.
Solan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the duke ;
 Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail ;
 But there the duke was given to understand,
 That in a gondola were seen together
 Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica ;
 Besides, Antonio certified the duke,
 They were not with Bassanio in his ship.
Solan. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
 So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
 As the dog Jew did utter in the streets :
 " My daughter !—O my ducats !—O my daughter !
 Fled with a Christian ?—O my christian ducats !—
 Justice ! the law ! my ducats, and my daughter !
 A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
 Of double ducats, stol'n from me by my daughter !
 And jewels ; two stones, two rich and precious stones,
 Stol'n by my daughter !—Justice ! find the girl !
 She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats !"
Salar. Why, all the boys in Venice follow him,
 Crying,—his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Solan. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
 Or he shall pay for this.
Salar. Marry, well remember'd :
 I reason'd<sup>a</sup> with a Frenchman yesterday,
 Who told me,—in the narrow seas that part
 The French and English, there miscarried
 A vessel of our country, richly fraught :
 I thought upon Antonio when he told me,
 And wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Solan. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear ;
 Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.
Salar. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.
 I saw Bassanio and Antonio part :
 Bassanio told him, he would make some speed
 Of his return ; he answer'd—" Do not so,
 Slubber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
 But stay the very riping of the time ;
 And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,
 Let it not enter in your mind of love :
 Be merry ; and employ your chiefest thoughts
 To courtship, and such fair ostents of love
 As shall conveniently become you there :"
 And even there, his eye being big with tears,
 Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
 And with affection wondrous sensible
 He wrung Bassanio's hand, and so they parted.
Solan. I think he only loves the world for him.
 I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
 And quicken his embraced heaviness
 With some delight or other.

Salar. Do we so. [Exit.SCENE IX.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's HouseEnter NERISSA with a Servant.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee, draw the curtain straight ;
 The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
 And comes to his election presently.

<sup>a</sup> Reason'd is here used for discern'd.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the PRINCE OF ARRAGON, PORTIA, and their Trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince; if you choose that wherein I am contain'd, straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd; but if you fail, without more speech, my lord, you must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoind by oath to observe three things: first, never to unfold to any one which casket 't was I chose; next, if I fail of the right casket, never in my life to woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly, if I do fail in fortune of my choice, immediately to leave you and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear that comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me: Fortune now to my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and base lead.

"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath:" you shall look fairer, ere I give, or hazard.

What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:

"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire."

What many men desire.—That many may be meant by the fool multitude, that choose by show, not learning more than the fond eye doth teach, which prizes not to th' interior, but, like the martlet, builds in the weather on the outward wall, even in the force and road of casualty.

I will not choose what many men desire, because I will not jump with common spirits, and rank me with the barbarous multitudes. Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house; tell me once more what title thou dost bear:

"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves:"

And well said too. For who shall go about to cozen fortune, and be honourable without the stamp of merit! Let none presume to wear an undeserved dignity.

O, that estates, degrees, and offices, were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear honour were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!

How many then should cover that stand bare!

How many be commanded that command!

How much low peasantry would then be glean'd from the true seed of honour! and how much honour

pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times, to be new varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:

"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves:"

I will assume desert:—Give me a key for this, and instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What 's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot, presenting me a schedule? I will read it.

How much unlike art thou to Portia!

How much unlike my hopes and my deservings!

"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?

Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices, and of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

"The fire seven times tried this;
Seven times tried that judgment is
That did never choose amiss:
Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So begone; you are sped."

Still more fool I shall appear

By the time I linger here:

With one fool's head I came to woo,

But I go away with two.

Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath,

Patiently to bear my wroth.

[Exeunt ARRAGON and Trains.]

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth. O these deliberate fools! when they do choose, they have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy;—Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Where is my lady?

Por. Here; what would my lord?

Serv. Madam, there is alighted at your gate

A young Venetian, one that comes before

To signify the approaching of his lord:

From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;<sup>a</sup>

To wit, besides commends and courteous breath,

Gifts of rich value; yet I have not seen

So likely an ambassador of love:

A day in April never came so sweet,

To show how costly summer was at hand,

As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

Por. No more, I pray thee; I am half afraid,

Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,

Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him.

Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see

Quick Cupid's post that comes so mannerly.

Ner. Bassanio, lord Love, if thy will it be! [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter SOLANIO and SALARINO.

Solan. Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salar. Why, yet it lives there unchecked, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wracked on the narrow seas,—the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

Solan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband: But it is true,—without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the highway of talk,—that the good Antonio, the st Antonio,—O that I had a title good enough to his name company!—

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Solan. Ha,—what say'st thou?—Why, the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his losses!

Solan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.

Enter SHYLOCK.

How now, Shylock? what news among the merchants? Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That 's certain. I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Solan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledged; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal;—Good news, good news: ha! ha!—Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats!

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me:—I shall never see my gold again: Fourscore ducats at a sitting!
 fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I'll torture him; I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring, that he had
 of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou torturest me, Tubal: it was my turquoise; I had it of Leah, when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that 's true, that 's very true: Go, Tubal, fee me an officer, bespeak him a fortnight before: I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will: Go,
 Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good
 Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter BASSANIO, PORTIA, GRATIANO, NERISSA, and Attendants. The caskets are set out.

Por. I pray you, tarry; pause a day or two,
 Before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong
 I lose your company; therefore, forbear a while:
 There 's something tells me, (but it is not love,)
 I would not lose you; and you know yourself,
 Hate counsels not in such a quality:
 But lest you should not understand me well,
 (And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,)
 I would detain you here some month or two,
 Before you venture for me. I could teach you
 How to choose right, but then I am forsworn;
 So will I never be: so may you miss me;
 But if you do, you 'll make me wish a sin,
 That I had been forsworn. Beshrew your eyes.
 They have o'erlook'd<sup>a</sup> me, and divided me;
 One half of me is yours, the other half yours,—
 Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then yours,
 And so all yours: O! these naughty times
 Put bars between the owners and their rights;
 And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so,
 Let fortune go to hell for it,—not I.
 I speak too long; but 't is to peize<sup>b</sup> the time;
 To eke it, and to draw it out in length,
 To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose;
 For, as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio? then confess
 What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None, but that ugly treason of mistrust,
 Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love:
 There may as well be amity and life
 'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
 Where men enforced do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I 'll confess the truth.

<sup>a</sup> O'erlook'd. In 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' we have—
 "Vild worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth."

The word is here used in the same sense; which is derived from the popular opinions of the influence of fairies and witches.
 The eyes of Bassanio have o'erlooked Portia, and she yields to the enchantment.

<sup>b</sup> Peize. Peize and peize are the same words. To weigh the time, is, to keep it in suspense—upon the balance

Por. Well, then, confess, and live.

Bass. Confess, and love,

Had been the very sum of my confession :
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance !
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away then : I am lock'd in one of them ;
If you do love me, you will find me out.
Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof.
Let music sound, while he doth make his choice ;
Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music : that the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream,
And watery death-bed for him : He may win ;
And what is music then ? then music is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow
To a new-crowned monarch : such it is,
As are those dulcet sounds in break of day,
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes,
With no less presence, but with much more love,
Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster : I stand for sacrifice,
The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,
With bleared visages, come forth to view
The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules !
Live thou, I live :—With much much more dismay
I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray.

Music, whilst BASSANTIO comments on the caskets to himself.

SONG.

1. Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head ?
How begot, how nourished ?
Reply, reply.
2. It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed ; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies :
Let us all ring fancy's knell ;
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.
Ding, dong, bell.

All.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves ;

The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil ? In religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament ?
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stayers of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk ;
And these assume but valour's excrement,
To render them redoubt'd ! Look on beauty,
And you shall see 't is purchas'd by the weight ;
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it :
So are those crisped snaky golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,
The scull that bred them in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guil'd<sup>a</sup> shore
To a most dangerous sea ; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty ; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on <sup>a</sup> Guil'd—deceiving. The active and passive participles are substituted each for the other by Shakspeare and the other shakspearean poets.

To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee :
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man. But thou, thou meagre lead,
Which rather threat'nest than dost promise aught,
Thy paleness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I. Joy be the consequence !

Por. How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embac'd despair,
And shudd'ring fear, and green-ey'd jealousy !
O love, be moderate, allay thy ecstasy,
In measure rain thy joy, scant this excess ;
I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
For fear I surfeit !

Bass. What find I here ?

[Opening the leaden casket.]

Fair Portia's counterfeit ? What demi-god
Hath come so near creation ? Move these eyes ?
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
Seem they in motion ? Here are sever'd lips,
Parted with sugar breath ; so sweet a bar
Should sunder such sweet friends : Here in her hair
The painter plays the spider ; and hath woven
A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men,
Faster than gnats in cobwebs : But her eyes,—
How could he see to do them ? having made one,
Methinks it should have power to steal both his,
And leave itself unfurnish'd :<sup>a</sup> Yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In underprising it, so far this shadow
Doth limp behind the substance.—Here 's the scroll,
The continent and summary of my fortune.

" You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair, and choose as true !
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.
If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss."

A gentle scroll.—Fair lady, by your leave :

[Kissing her]

I come by note, to give and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no ;
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so ;
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see, my lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am : though, for myself alone,
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better ; yet, for you,
I would be trebled twenty times myself ;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
More rich ;
That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account : but the full sum of me
Is sum of nothing ; which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd :
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn ; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn ;
Happiest of all, is, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now converted : but now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself ; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,

<sup>a</sup> Unfurnish'd—unsurrounded by the other features.

my lord,—I give them with this ring;
 when you part from, lose, or give away,
 it shall be the ruin of your love,
 the advantage to exclaim on you.
 O lady, you have bereft me of all words,
 my blood speaks to you in my veins;
 there is such confusion in my powers, that my own reason fairly spoke of a prince, there doth appear a buzzing pleased multitude;
 whereof something, being blent together,
 is wild of nothing, save of joy,
 and not express'd: But when this ring comes to this finger, then parts life from hence;
 and bold to say, Bassanio's dead.
 O my lord and lady, it is now our time,
 stand by and see our wishes prosper,
 and joy; Good joy, my lord and lady!
 O my lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
 I shall have all the joy that you can wish;
 and you can wish none from me:
 your honours mean to solemnize
 the time of your faith, I do beseech you,
 at that time I may be married too.
 With all my heart, so thou canst get a
 wife.
 Thank your lordship; you have got me one.
 O my lord, can look as swift as yours:
 when my mistress, I beheld the maid;
 I lov'd; for intermission
 she retains to me, my lord, than you.
 She stood upon the caskets there;
 I chose mine too, as the matter falls:
 here, until I sweat again,
 my roof was dry, till my very roof was dry of love, at last,—if promise last,— the promise of this fair one here, my love, provided that your fortune be not my mistress.

Is this true, Nerissa?
 O lady, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.
 Will you do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?
 O my faith, my lord.
 Your feast shall be much honour'd in your carriage.
 We'll play with them, the first boy for a thousand shall win, and stake down?
 O my lord, we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake
 our own.
 O my lord, here? Lorenzo, and his infidel?
 O my lord, my old Venetian friend, Solanio?

Enter LORENZO, JESSICA, and SOLANIO.
 O my lord, Bassanio, and Solanio, welcome hither;
 the youth of my new interest here has hid you welcome:—By your leave, my friends and countrymen,
 I am, welcome.

So do I, my lord;
 I am entirely welcome.
 Thank your honour:—For my part, my lord,
 I was not to have seen you here;
 I was going with Solanio by the way,
 and he has met me, past all saying nay,
 and has brought me along.

I did, my lord,
 for the reason for it. Signior Antonio has hid you from me. [Gives BASSANIO a letter.
 Here I ope his letter,
 and tell me how my good friend doth.
 O my lord, I am not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
 unless in mind: his letter there tells me of his estate.

Gra. Nerissa, cheer yon stranger; bid her welcome.
 Your hand, Solanio. What's the news from Venice?

How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
 I know he will be glad of our success;
 We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.

Solan. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost!

Por. There are some shrewd contents in yon same paper,
 That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek;
 Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world
 Could turn so much the constitution
 Of any constant man. What, worse and worse?—
 With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
 And I must freely have the half of anything
 That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,
 Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
 That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady,
 When I did first impart my love to you,
 I freely told you, all the wealth I had
 Ran in my veins,—I was a gentleman;
 And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,
 Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
 How much I was a braggart: When I told you
 My state was nothing, I should then have told you
 That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
 I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
 Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
 To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
 The paper as the body of my friend,
 And every word in it a gaping wound,
 Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Solanio?
 Have all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?
 From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
 From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
 And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
 Of merchant-marring rocks?

Solan. Not one, my lord.
 Besides, it should appear, that if he had
 The present money to discharge the Jew,
 He would not take it: Never did I know
 A creature that did bear the shape of man,
 So keen and greedy to confound a man:
 He plies the duke at morning, and at night;
 And doth impeach the freedom of the state
 If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
 The duke himself, and the magnificoes
 Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him;
 But none can drive him from the envious plea
 Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Jes. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
 To Tubal, and to Chus, his countrymen,
 That he would rather have Antonio's flesh
 Than twenty times the value of the sum
 That he did owe him; and I know, my lord,
 If law, authority, and power deny not,
 It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?

Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
 The best condition'd and unwearied spirit
 In doing courtesies; and one in whom
 The ancient Roman honour more appears,
 Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
 Double six thousand, and then treble that,
 Before a friend of this description
 Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.
 First, go with me to church, and call me wife;
 And then away to Venice to your friend;

For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over;
When it is paid, bring your true friend along:
My maid Nerissa, and myself, meantime,
Will live as maids and widows. Come, away;
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day:
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer:
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Bass. [Reads.]

"Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since, in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death: notwithstanding, use your pleasure: if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter."

Por. O love, despatch all business, and be gone.

Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,

I will make haste: but, till I come again,

No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,

Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us twain. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Venice. A Street.

Enter SHYLOCK, SALARINO, ANTONIO, and Gaoler.

Shy. Gaoler, look to him. Tell not me of mercy;—

This is the fool that lends out money gratis;—

Gaoler, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.

Shy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond;

I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond:

Thou call'st me dog, before thou hadst a cause:

But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs:

The duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder,

Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond<sup>a</sup>

To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak.

Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:

I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.

I'll not be made a soft and dull-ey'd fool,

To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield

To Christian intercessors. Follow not;

I'll have no speaking; I will have my bond. [Ex. SHY.

Salar. It is the most impenetrable cur

That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone;

I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.

He seeks my life; his reason well I know;

I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures

Many that have at times made moan to me;

Therefore he hates me.

Salar. I am sure the duke

Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.

Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law,

For the commodity that strangers have

With us in Venice; if it be denied,

'T will much impeach the justice of the state;

Since that the trade and profit of the city

Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:

These griefs and losses have so 'bated me,

That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh

To-morrow to my bloody creditor.

Well, gaoler, on:—Pray God, Bassanio come

To see me pay his debt, and then I care not! [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter PORTIA, NERISSA, LORENZO, JESSICA, and BALTHAZAR.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit

<sup>a</sup> Fond. This is generally explained as foolish—one of the senses in which Shakspeare very often uses the word. We are inclined to think that it here means indulgent, tender, weakly compassionate.

Of godlike amity; which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But, if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work,
Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me think, that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord: if it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestow'd,
In purchasing the semblance of my soul
From out the state of hellish cruelty!
This comes too near the praising of myself;
Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands

The husbandry and manage of my house,
Until my lord's return: for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition;
The which my love, and some necessity,
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well, till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.

[Exit JES. and LOR.]

Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest, true,
So let me find thee still: Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man
In speed to Padua; see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario;
And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the tranect,<sup>a</sup> to the common ferry
Which trades to Venice:—waste no time in words,
But get thee gone; I shall be there before thee.

Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand,
That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands
Before they think of us.

Ner. Shall they see us?

Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both account'd like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace;
And speak, between the change of man and boy
With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,

<sup>a</sup> Tranect. No other example is found of the use of this word in English, and yet there is little doubt that the word is correct. Tranare, and trainare, are interpreted by Florio as only as to draw, which is the common acceptation, but as it pass or swim over. Thus the tranect was most probably the boat of the ferry.

the bragging youth: and tell quaint lies,
 Upon proud ladies sought my love,
 Denying they fell sick and died;
 And do withal: then I'll repent,
 And for all that, that I had not kill'd them:
 And of these puny lies I'll tell,
 I shall swear I have discontinued school
 Twelve month:—I have within my mind
 A hundred raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
 Which I will practise.

Why, shall we turn to men?
 O! what a question's that,
 To turn near a lewd interpreter!
 I'll tell thee all my whole device
 As in my coach, which stays for us
 At the gate; and therefore haste away,
 And measure twenty miles to-day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. A Garden.

Enter LAUNCELOT and JESSICA.

Yes, truly;—for, look you, the sins of the world to be laid upon the children; therefore, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and I speak my agitation of the matter: Therefore,
 cheer; for, truly, I think, you are damned.
 I set no hope in it that can do you any good;
 'tis but a kind of bastard hope neither.
 And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Marry, you may partly hope that your father is dead, that you are not the Jew's daughter, but were a kind of bastard hope, indeed; so that my mother should be visited upon me.

Truly then I fear you are damned both by your mother; thus when I shun Scylla, your father fall into Charybdis, your mother; well, you are damned both ways.
 I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made a Christian of me.

Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians before; 'e'en as many as could well live, and other: This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs; if we grow all to be pork-eaters we shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Enter LORENZO.

'Til tell my husband, Launcelot, what you have done.

I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot,
 as you get my wife into corners.

Alas, you need not fear us, Lorenzo. Launcelot is dead: he tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he is no good member of the commonwealth;
 for turning Jews to Christians, you raise the price

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly; the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is, indeed, more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think, the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence; and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots.—Go in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done, too, sir: only, cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant?
 I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning; go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. [Exit LAUN.]

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suited!

The fool hath planted in his memory
 An army of good words; and I do know
 A many fools, that stand in better place,
 Than I wish'd like him, that for a tricky word
 Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica?

And now, good sweet, say thy opinion;—
 How dost thou like the lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing: It is very meet

The lord Bassanio live an upright life;
 For, having such a blessing in his lady,
 He finds the joys of heaven here on earth;
 And, if on earth he do not mean it, it
 Is reason he should never come to heaven.

Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match,
 And on the wager lay two earthly women,
 And Portia one, there must be something else
 Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude world
 Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband

Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.

Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk;

Then, howsoever thou speak'st, 'mong other things
 I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Court of Justice.

DUKE, the Magnificoes; ANTONIO, BASSANTIO, TRIANO, SALARINO, SOLANIO, and others.

What is Antonio here?

Truly, to please your grace.

I am sorry for thee; thou art come to answer thy adversary, an inhuman wretch
 Void of pity, void and empty
 Of all dram of mercy.

I have heard
 How he hath ta'en great pains to qualify
 His own abuse; but since he stands obdurate,

And that no lawful means can carry me

Out of his envy's reach,* I do oppose

My patience to his fury; and am arm'd

To suffer, with a quietness of spirit,

The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.

Solan. He's ready at the door: he comes, my lord.

Enter SHYLOCK.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.
 Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,

* Envy's reach. Envy is here used in the sense of malice, hatred; as in the translation of the Bible (Mark xv. 10).

That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then, 't is thought
Thou 'lt show thy mercy and remorse, more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty:
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,
(Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,)
Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture,
But, touch'd with human gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back,
Enough to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms, and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never train'd
To offices of tender courtesy.

We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd your grace of what I purpose;
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn,
To have the due and forfeit of my bond:
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter, and your city's freedom.
You 'll ask me, why I rather choose to have
A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive Three thousand ducats: I 'll not answer that:
But, say, it is my humour: Is it answer'd?
What if my house be troubled with a rat,
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats
To have it ban'd? What, are you answer'd yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping pig;
Some, that are mad if they behold a cat;
And others, when the bagpipe sings i' the nose,
Cannot contain their urine: for affection,
Master of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes, or loathes: Now, for your answer.
As there is no firm reason to be render'd,
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;
Why he, a harmless necessary cat;
Why he, a woollen bagpipe,—but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame,
As to offend, himself being offended;
So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodg'd hate, and a certain loathing,
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him. Are you answer'd?

Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?

Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.

Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray you, think you question with the Jew,<sup>b</sup>
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf,
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise,
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do anything most hard,
As seek to soften that (than which what 's harder?)
His Jewish heart:—Therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no further means,
But, with all brief and plain conveniency,
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

<sup>a</sup> Affection, either for love or dislike—sympathy or antipathy—being the master of passion—sways it (passion) to the mood of what it (affection) likes or loathes.

<sup>b</sup> The construction of this line appears to us elliptical: we believe that it should be understood thus:—

"I pray you, think, [if] you question with the Jew."

Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them,—I would have my bond.

Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendering thus?

Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong!

You have among you many a purchas'd slave,
Which, like your asses, and your dogs, and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them:—Shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burthens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates
Be season'd with such viands? You will answer,
The slaves are ours:—So do I answer you,
The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought; 't is mine, and I will have it;
If you deny me, fie upon your law!

There is no force in the decrees of Venice:

I stand for judgment: answer, shall I have it?

Duke. Upon my power, I may dismiss this court,
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Solan. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters; Call the messenger.

Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man! come yet!

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death; the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me:
You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter NERISSA, dressed like a lawyer's clerk.

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?

Ner. From both, my lord: Bellario greets your grace [Presents a letter]

Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.

Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,
Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O, be thou damn'd, execrable * dog!
And for thy life let justice be accus'd.

Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith,

To hold opinion with Pythagoras,

That souls of animals infuse themselves

Into the trunks of men: thy currish spirit

Govern'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,

Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,

And, whilst thou lay'st in thy unhallow'd dam,

Infus'd itself in thee; for thy desires

Are wolfish, bloody, sterv'd,<sup>b</sup> and ravenous.

Shy. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my hand,

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud:

Repair thy wit, good youth; or it will fall

To cureless ruin.—I stand here for law.

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend

A young and learned doctor to our court:—

Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by,

To know your answer, whether you 'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart:—some three or four of
you

<sup>a</sup> Inexorable. In is used as an augmentative particle, the sense being most execrable.

<sup>b</sup> Sterv'd—synonymous with starved, and used by Spenser and the elder poets.

courteous conduct to this place.—
The court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Clerk reads.]

we shall understand that, at the receipt of your try sick; but in the instant that your messenger of visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome;
Althassar; I acquainted him with the cause in concern the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turned like together: he is furnished with my opinion; with his own learning (the greatness whereof I commend). comes with him, at my importunity, grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let me be no impediment to let him lack a reverend man I never knew so young a body with so old a heart: him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall bid his commendation."

As he hear the learned Bellario, what he writes:
take it, is the doctor come.—

PORTIA, dressed like a doctor of laws.

My hand: Came you from old Bellario?
Yes, my lord.

You are welcome: take your place.
I'm acquainted with the difference of his present question in the court?
I'm informed throughly of the cause.
The merchant here, and which the Jew?
Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.
What is your name Shylock?

Shylock is my name.
What strange nature is the suit you follow;
What rule that the Venetian law prescribes you, as you do proceed.—
What is his danger, do you not? [To ANT.]
As he says.

Do you confess the bond?

Then must the Jew be merciful.
That compulsion must I? tell me that.
The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
As the gentle rain from heaven falls upon the parch'd bosom;
Which is twice bless'd;
In that it gives, and him that takes:
It is the mightiest; it becomes
The monarch better than his crown;
It is the force of temporal power,
To awe and majesty,
Which doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
Which doth above this sceptred sway,
Which doth sit in the hearts of kings,
Which doth give us the law,
Which doth sit to God himself;
Which doth power doth then show likest God's Whom we do reverence. Therefore, Jew,
If it be thy plea, consider this—
The course of justice, none of us
Can give: we do pray for mercy;—
Which doth teach us all to render Mercy. I have spoke thus much,
Which doth be justice of thy plea;
Which doth follow, this strict court of Venice
Which doth give sentence 'gainst the merchant there,
Which doth lie upon my head! I crave the law,
Which doth forfeit of my bond.
Which doth not able to discharge the money?
Which doth here I tender it for him in the court;
Which doth sum: if that will not suffice,
Which doth bid to pay it ten times o'er,
Which doth bid my hands, my head, my heart:
Which doth suffice, it must appear
Which doth bid ears down truth.<sup>b</sup> And I beseech you,
Which doth bid the law to your authority:
Which doth bid right do a little wrong;
Which doth bid the cruel devil of his will.

<sup>a</sup> says,—“Is his danger, under his danger, is captive. The old French danger frequently
the power, dominion.”
<sup>b</sup> used in the sense of honesty.

Por. It must not be; there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:

'T will be recorded for a precedent;
And many an error, by the same example,
Will rush into the state: it cannot be.

Shy. A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!
O wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shy. Here 't is, most reverend doctor, here it is.

Por. Shylock, there 's thrice thy money offer'd thee.

Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.

Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim

A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart:—Be merciful;
Take thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.

Shy. When it is paid according to the tenor.

It doth appear you are a worthy judge;

You know the law, your exposition

Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,

Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,

Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear,

There is no power in the tongue of man

To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court

To give the judgment.

Por. Why, then, thus it is:

You must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!

Por. For the intent and purpose of the law

Hath full relation to the penalty,

Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Shy. 'T is very true: O wise and upright judge!

How much more elder art thou than thy looks!

Por. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Shy. Ay, his breast:

So says the bond;—Doth it not, noble judge?—

Nearest his heart, those are the very words.

Por. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh the flesh?

Shy. I have them ready.

Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he should bleed to death.

Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?

Por. It is not so express'd; But what of that?

'T were good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it; 't is not in the bond.

Por. Come, merchant, have you anything to say?

Ant. But little; I am arm'd, and well prepar'd.—

Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well!

Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind

Than is her custom: it is still her use,

To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,

To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow,

An age of poverty; from which lingering penance

Of such misery doth she cut me off.

Commend me to your honourable wife.

Tell her the process of Antonio's end,

Say, how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;

And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge

Whether Bassanio had not once a love.

Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,

And he repents not that he pays your debt;

For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough,

I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife,

Which is as dear to me as life itself;

But life itself, my wife, and all the world,

Are not with me esteem'd above thy life;

I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all

Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that, if she were by, to hear you make the offer.

Gra. I have a wife, whom I protest I love; I would she were in heaven, so she could entreat some power to change this curriish Jew.

Ner. 'T is well you offer it behind her back; the wish would make else an unquiet house.

Shy. These be the Christian husbands: I have a daughter;

Would any of the stock of Barrabas Had been her husband, rather than a Christian! [Aside. We trifle time; I pray thee pursue sentence.

Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine; the court awards it, and the law doth give it.

Shy. Most rightful judge!

Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast; the law allows it, and the court awards it.

Shy. Most learned judge!—A sentence; come, prepare.

Por. Tarry a little;—there is something else.—This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood; the words expressly are a pound of flesh: Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh; But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate Unto the state of Venice.

Gra. O upright judge!—Mark, Jew!—O learned judge!

Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thyself shall see the act: For, as thou ugest justice, be assur'd

Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desirest.

Gra. O learned judge!—Mark, Jew;—a learned judge!

Shy. I take this offer then,—pay the bond thrice, And let the Christian go.

Bass. Here is the money.
Por. Soft.

The Jew shall have all justice;—soft;—no haste;—He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the flesh. Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more, But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more, Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance, Or the division of the twentieth part Of one poor scruple,—nay, if the scale do turn But in the estimation of a hair,— Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew! Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.

Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.
Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court; He shall have merely justice, and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel!—I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?
Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture, To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

Shy. Why, then the devil give him good of it! I'll stay no longer question.

Por. Tarry, Jew; The law hath yet another hold on you.

It is enacted in the laws of Venice,— If it be prov'd against an alien, That by direct or indirect attempts He seek the life of any citizen, The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive Shall seize one half his goods; the other half To the privy coffer of the state;

And the offender's life lies in the mercy Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice. In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st: For it appears by manifest proceeding, That, indirectly, and directly too, Thou hast contriv'd against the very life Of the defendant; and thou hast incurr'd The danger formerly by me rehears'd. Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.

Gra. Beg that thou mayst have leave to beg thyself:

And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state, Thou hast not left the value of a cord; Therefore, thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.

Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of an spirit,

I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it: For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's; The other half comes to the general state, Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.

Por. Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.

Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that: You take my house, when you do take the prop That doth sustain my house; you take my life, When you do take the means whereby I live.

Por. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?

Gra. A halter gratis; nothing else, for God's sake.

Ant. So please my lord the duke, and all the court, To quit the fine for one half of his goods;

I am content, so he will let me have The other half in use,<sup>a</sup> to render it,

Upon his death, unto the gentleman That lately stole his daughter;

Two things provided more,—That for this favour, He presently become a Christian;

The other, that he do record a gift, Here in the court, of all he dies possess'd, Unto his son Lorenzo and his daughter.

Duke. He shall do this; or else I do recant The pardon that I late pronounced here.

Por. Art thou contented, Jew; what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content.

Por. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence: I am not well; send the deed after me, And I will sign it.

Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.
Gra. In christening, thou shalt have two godfathers:

Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,<sup>b</sup> To bring thee to the gallows, not to the font. [Exit. Shy.

Duke. Sir, I entreat you with me home to dinner.

Por. I humbly do desire your grace of pardon. I must away this night toward Padua;

And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duke. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not. Antonio, gratify this gentleman;

For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.

[Exeunt DUKE, Magnificoes, and Train.
Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friends

Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof,

Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew, We freely cope your courteous pains withal.

Ant. And stand indebted, over and above, In love and service to you evermore.

Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied: And I, delivering you, am satisfied,

And therein do account myself well paid; My mind was never yet more mercenary.

I pray you know me, when we meet again; I wish you well, and so I take my leave.

<sup>b</sup> Ten more. Jurymen were jestingly called godfathers—“godfathers in law,” as lieu Jonson has it.

Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further;
 remembrance of us, as a tribute,
 be: grant me two things, I pray you,
 by me, and to pardon me.
 You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
 Your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake;
 Your love, I'll take this ring from you:—
 As back your hand; I'll take no more;
 My love shall not deny me this.
 This ring, good sir,—alas, it is a trifle;
 I shame myself to give you this.
 I will have nothing else but only this;
 Methinks, I have a mind to it.
 There's more depends on this than on the value.
 This ring in Venice will I give you,
 I'll not out by proclamation;
 I'll bid his I pray you pardon me.
 See, sir, you are liberal in offers:
 I'll give you first to beg; and now, methinks,
 I'll show you how a beggar should be answer'd.
 Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;
 As she put it on, she made me vow
 I would neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.
 That excuse serves many men to save their gifts.
 Your wife be not a mad woman,
 How well I have deserv'd this ring,
 Not hold out enemy for ever,
 I'll give it to me. Well, peace be with you!
 [Exit POR. and NERISSA.]
 My lord Bassanio, let him have the ring;
 My services, and my love withal,
 Against your wife's commandment.
 Now, Gratiano, run and overtake him;

Give him the ring; and bring him, if thou canst,
 Unto Antonio's house:—away, make haste. [Exit GRA.]
 Come, you and I will thither presently;
 And in the morning early will we both
 Fly toward Belmont: Come, Antonio. [Exit

SCENE II.—Venice. A Street.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed
 And let him sign it; we'll away to-night,
 And be a day before our husbands home:
 This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter GRATIANO.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'erta'en:
 My lord Bassanio, upon more advice,
 Hath sent you here this ring; and doth entreat
 Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be:
 His ring I do accept most thankfully,
 And so, I pray you, tell him: Furthermore,
 I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.

Gra. That will I do.
 Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:—
 I'll see if I can get my husband's ring, [To PORTIA.]
 Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou mayst, I warrant. We shall have old swearing,

That they did give the rings away to men;
 But we'll outface them, and outswear them too.
 Away, make haste; thou know'st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house?
 [Exit

ACT V.

Belmont. Avenue to Portia's House.

Enter LORENZO and JESSICA.

The moon shines bright:—In such a night as his,
 Sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
 And did make no noise,—in such a night,
 Methinks, mounted the Trojan walls,
 His soul toward the Grecian tents,
 Said lay that night.

In such a night,
 I fearfully o'ertrip the dew;
 The lion's shadow creeps ere himself,
 And smay'd away.

In such a night,
 With a willow in her hand
 And wild sea-banks, and waft her love
 Gain to Carthage.

In such a night,
 Heard the enchanted herbs
 And new old Aëon.

In such a night,
 He steal from the wealthy Jew;
 And in unthrif love did run from Venice,
 To Belmont.

In such a night,
 Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well;
 And his soul with many vows of faith,
 And true one.

In such a night,
 Jessica, like a little shrew,
 Love, and he forgave it her
 And did out-night you, did no body come:
 I hear the footing of a man.

Enter STEPHANO.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

Steph. A friend.

Lor. A friend? what friend? your name, I pray you,
 friend.

Steph. Stephano is my name; and I bring word,
 My mistress will before the break of day
 Be here at Belmont; she doth stray about
 By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
 For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?

Steph. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.
 I pray you, is my master yet return'd?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.—
 But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
 And ceremoniously let us prepare
 Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter LAUNCELOT.

Laun. Sola, sola, wo ha, ho, sola, sola!

Lor. Who calls?

Laun. Sola! Did you see master Lorenzo, and mistress Lorenzo? sola, sola!

Lor. Leave hollaing, man; here.

Laun. Sola! Where? where?

Lor. Here.

Laun. Tell him there 's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news; my master will be here ere morning. [Exit.

Lor. Sweet soul, let 's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter;—Why should we go in?
 My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
 Within the house, your mistress is at hand:

And bring your music forth into the air. [Exit STEPH.]
How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night,
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines<sup>a</sup> of bright gold.
There 's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins:<sup>b</sup>
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.—

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn;
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music.

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lor. The reason is your spirits are attentive:
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of music: Therefore, the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods;
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature;
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA at a distance.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shone we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! hark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect;
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
When neither is attended; and, I think,
The nightingale, if she should sing by day
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!—
Peace! How the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd!

Lor. That is the voice,

Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind man knows the cuckoo,

By the bad voice.

Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.

<sup>a</sup> Patines. A patine is the small flat dish or plate used in the service of the altar.

<sup>b</sup> Cherubins. We follow the orthography of the old editions, though cherubim may be more correct. Spenser uses cherubins as the plural of cherubin.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare.
Which speed, we hope, the better for our words.
Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Por. Go in, Nerissa;
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence;
Nor you, Lorenzo—Jessica, nor you. [A tucket sounds.]

Lor. Your husband is at hand; I hear his trumpet:
We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.

Por. This night, methinks, is but the daylight sick.
It looks a little paler; 't is a day
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter BASSANIO, ANTONIO, GRATIANO, and their Followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me;
But God sort all!—You are welcome home, my lord.

Bass. I thank you, madam: give welcome to my friend.—

This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him,
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy.

[GRA. and NER. seem to talk apart.]

Gra. By yonder moon, I swear you do me wrong;
In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk:
Would he were gelt that had it, for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already? what 's the matter?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give me; whose posy was,
For all the world, like cutler's poetry
Upon a knife, "Love me, and leave me not."

Ner. What talk you of the posy, or the value?
You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till the hour of death;
And that it should lie with you in your grave:
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective,<sup>a</sup> and have kept it.
Gave it a judge's clerk!—but well I know,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on 's face that had it.

Gra. He will, an if he live to be a man.

Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.

Gra. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,—
A kind of boy; a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk;
A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee;
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And so riveted with faith unto your flesh.

I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands,—
I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief;
An 't were to me, I should be mad at it.

Bass. Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear, I lost the ring defending it. [Music.]

Gra. My lord Bassanio gave his ring away

<sup>a</sup> Respective—regardful.

that begg'd it, and, indeed,
and then the boy, his clerk,
se pains in writing, he begg'd mine :
man, nor master, would take aught
ings.

What ring gave you, my lord ?
pe, which you receiv'd of me.
could add a lie unto a fault,
it ; but you see, my finger ring upon it, it is gone.
so void is your false heart of truth.
will ne'er come in your bed
e ring.

Nor I in yours,
se mine.

Sweet Portia,
ow to whom I gave the ring,
ow for whom I gave the ring
nceive for what I gave the ring,
illingly I left the ring,
would be accepted but the ring,
ate the strength of your displeasure.
I had known the virtue of the ring,
orthiness that gave the ring,
honour to contain* the ring,
t then have parted with the ring-
there so much unreasonable, as'd to have defended it ns of zeal, wanted the modesty
ing held as a ceremony ?
as me what to believe ;
but some woman had the ring.
by mine honour, madam, by my soul,
d it, but a civil doctor,
use three thousand ducats of me,
e ring ; the which I did deny him,
sim to go displeas'd away ;
had held up the very life end. What should I say, sweet lady ?
(to send it after him ;
th shame and courtesy ;
ould not let ingratitude
ear it : Pardon me, good lady ;
blessed candles of the night,
(there, I think, you would have begg'd
e to give the worthy doctor.
et that doctor e'er come near my house :
got the jewel that I lov'd,
n you did swear to keep for me,
as liberal as you ;
him anything I have,
ody, nor my husband's bed :
shall, I am well sure of it :
t from home ; watch me, like Argus ;
if I be left alone,
; honour, which is yet mine own,
; doctor for my bedfellow.
I his clerk ; therefore be well advis'd, eave me to mine own protection.
do you so : let not me take him then ;
'll mar the young clerk's pen.
the unhappy subject of these quarrels.
rieve not you ; you are welcome notwith-
ding.
a, forgive me this enforced wrong ;
earing of these many friends,
e, even by thine own fair eyes,
; myself,—

Mark you but that !

to see and to see are here synonymous.

In both my eyes he doubly sees himself :
In each eye one :—swear by your double self,
And there 's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me ;
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth ;
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,
[To PORTIA]

Had quite miscarried : I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety : Give him this ;
And bid him keep it better than the other.

Ant. Here, lord Bassanio ; swear to keep this ring.

Bass. By Heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor !

Por. I had it of him : pardon me, Bassanio ;
For by this ring the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano ;
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough :

What ! are we cuckolds, ere we have deserv'd it ?

Por. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amaz'd :

Here is a letter, read it at your leisure ;

It comes from Padua, from Bellario :

There you shall find, that Portia was the doctor ;

Nerissa there, her clerk : Lorenzo here

Shall witness, I set forth as soon as you,

And but e'en now return'd ; I have not yet

Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome ;

And I have better news in store for you

Than you expect : unseal this letter soon ;

There you shall find, three of your argosies

Are richly come to harbour suddenly :

You shall not know by what strange accident

I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.

Bass. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not ?

Gra. Were you the clerk, that is to make me cuckold ?

Ner. Ay ; but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow ;

When I am absent then lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life, and living,

For here I read for certain, that my ships

Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo ?

My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. Ay, and I 'll give them him without a fee.—

There do I give to you and Jessica,

From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,

After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way

Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,

And yet, I am sure, you are not satisfied

Of these events at full : Let us go in ;

And charge us there upon inter'gatories,

And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so ; The first inter'gatory,

That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is,

Whether till the next night she had rather stay,

Or go to bed now, being two hours to day :

But were the day come, I should wish it dark,

Till I were couching with the doctor's clerk.

Well, while I live, I 'll fear no other thing

So sore,* as keeping safe Nerissa's ring.

[Exeunt]

* Sore—excessively, extremely, much.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

"Mere Antiochus Nemusus" was first printed in 1800. There was no other separate edition. The variations between the text of the quarto and that of the folio are very few. The chronology of this comedy is sufficiently fixed by the circumstance of its publication in 1800, coupled with the fact that it is not mentioned by Meres in 1598.

"The story is taken from Ariosto," says Pope. To Ariosto then we turn; and we are repaid for our labour by the pleasure of reading that long but by no means tedious story of Geneva, which occupies the whole of the fifth book, and part of the sixth, of the "Orlando Furioso." "The tale is a pretty comical matter," as Hamington quaintly pronounces it. The famous town of St. Andrew's forms its scene; and here was enacted something like that piece of villainy by which the Claudio of Shakespeare was deceived, and his Hero "done to death by slanderous tongues." But here the surveillance ceases. Ariosto found the incident of a lady betrayed to suspicion and danger, by the persuasion of her own waiting-woman, amongst the popular traditions of the south of Europe—this story has been traced to Spain—and he interwove it with the adventures of his Rinaldo as an integral part of his chivalrous romance. Spenser has told a similar story in "The Fairy Queen" (Book II., Canto IV.). The European story, which Ariosto and Spenser have thus adapted, has formed also the groundwork of one of Bandello's Italian novels. It was for Shakespeare to surround the main incident with those accessories which he could nowhere borrow, not to make of it such a comedy as no other man has made—a comedy not of manners or of sentiment, but of life viewed under its profoundest aspects, whether of the grave or the ludicrous. The title of this comedy, rightly considered, is the best exponent of the idea of this comedy. It is "a representation of the contrast and contradiction between life in its real essence and the aspect which it presents to those who are engaged in its struggle."

The "Much Ado about Nothing" was acted under the name of "Benedick and Beatrice," even during the life of its author. These two characters absorb very much of the acting interest of the play; but they cannot be separated from the play without being liable to misconception. The character of Beatrice cannot be understood, except in connection with the injuries done to Hero; and except we view it, as well as the characters of all the other agents in the scene, with reference to the one leading idea, that there is a real aspect of things which is to be seen by the audience and not seen by the agents. The character of Don John, for example, and the characters of his loose confederates, are understood by the spectators; and their villainy is purposely transparent. Without Don John the plot could not move. He is not a rival in Claudio's love, as the "wicked duke" of Ariosto: he is simply a meanly, ill-conditioned, spiteful rascal; such a one as ordinarily takes to backbiting and hinting away character. Shakespeare gets rid of him as soon as he can: he fires the train and disappears. He would be out of harmony with the happiness which he has suspended, but not destroyed; and so he passes from the stage, with

"Think not on him till to-morrow."

But his instrumentality has been of the utmost importance. It has given us that beautiful altar-scene, that would be almost too tragical if we did not know that the "Much Ado" was "about Nothing." But that maiden's wrongs, and that father's passion, are real aspects of life, however unreal be the cause of them. The instrumentality, too, of the hateful Don John has given us Dogberry and Verges. Coleridge has said, somewhat hastily we think,—"Any other less ingeniously absurd watchmen and night-constables would have answered the mere necessities of the action." Surely not. Make Dogberry in the slightest degree less self-satisfied, loquacious, full of the official stuff of which functionaries are still cut out, and the action breaks down before the rejection of Hero by her lover. For it is not the ingenious absurdity that prevents the detection of the plot against Hero; it is the absurdity which prevents the prompt disclosure of it after the detection. Truly did Don Pedro say, "This learned constable is too cunning to be understood." The wise fellow, and the rich fellow, and the fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns, and everything handsome about him, nevertheless holds his prison fast; and when he comes to the Prince, with "Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slander; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things; and, to conclude, they are lying knaves," though his method be not logical, his matter is all-sufficient. The passionate lover, the calm and sagacious prince, the doting father, were the dupes of a treachery, not well compact, and carried through by dangerous instruments. They make no effort to detect what would not have been very difficult of detection: they are satisfied to quarrel and to lament. Accident discovers what intelligence could not penetrate; and the treacherous slander is manifest in all its blackness to the wise Dogberry :—

"Flat burglary as ever was committed."

Here is the crowning irony of the philosophical poet. The players of the game of life see nothing, or see minute parts only; but the dullest by-stander has glimpses of something more.

SCENE,—MESSINA.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Street in Messina.

Enter HERO, BEATRICE, and others, with a Messenger.

HERO. I have received a letter, that don Pedro of Arragon is very near by this; he was not three miles off when I left him.

BEATRICE. Many gentlemen have you lost in this war of any sort,<sup>a</sup> and none of name.

HERO. My story is twice itself when the achiever is named: I find here, that don Pedro hath won much honour on a young Florentine, and he hath deserved on his part, and equally redress'd don Pedro: He hath borne himself like a lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered than you must expect of me to tell you how.

BEATRICE. Hath an uncle here in Messina will be glad to hear of it.

HERO. He hath already delivered him letters, and there is great joy in him; even so much that joy could be modest enough without a badge of battle.

BEATRICE. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

HERO. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

BEATRICE. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

HERO. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

BEATRICE. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

HERO. He hath break out into tears?<sup>b</sup>

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness: There are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping!

Beat. I pray you, is signior Montanto<sup>a</sup> returned from the wars, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady; there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he's returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills<sup>b</sup> here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight: and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt. I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you,<sup>c</sup> I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath help to eat it: he's a very valiant trencherman, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady:—But what is he to a lord?

<sup>b</sup> Set up his bills—stuck up a notice—a placard as we now call it.

<sup>c</sup> He'll be meet with you—he'll be even with you.

L.

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed<sup>a</sup> with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing,—Well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece: there is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her: they never meet but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas! he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits<sup>b</sup> went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference<sup>c</sup> between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith<sup>d</sup> but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.<sup>e</sup>

Beat. No: an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer<sup>f</sup> now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You'll ne'er run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter DON PEDRO, attended by BALTHAZAR and others, DON JOHN, CLAUDIO, and BENEDICK.

D. Pedro. Good signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace; for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly. I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bene. Were you in doubt that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself:—Be happy, lady! for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

<sup>b</sup> Five wits. Shakspeare here uses the term wits in the sense of intellectual powers. Johnson says, "The wits seem to have been reckoned five, by analogy to the five senses, or the five inlets of ideas."

<sup>e</sup> In your books. He who is in your books—or, as we sometimes say, in your good books—is he whom you think well of—whom you trust. It appears tolerably obvious, then, that the phrase has a commercial origin; and that, as he who has obtained credit, buys upon trust, is in his creditor's books, so he who has obtained in any way the confidence of another is said to be in his books.

<sup>f</sup> Squarer. To square is to dispute—to confront

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Benedick; nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Disdain! are y living?

Beat. Is it possible Disdain should die, which hath such meet food to feed it as signior Benedick's Courtesy itself must convert to disdain if you be in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turncoat:—But it is I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted: would I could find in my heart that I had not heart: for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I God, and my cold blood, I am of your humours; that; I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a paw'd scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, and such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a thousand of yours.

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue; and so good a continuer: But keep you o' God's name; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick; I you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Leonato, Claudio, and signior Benedick,—my dear friend hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay at the least a month; and he heartily prays so occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not swear.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord: be conciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go to [Exeunt all but Bene. and Claudio.]

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not: but I looked on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me as an honest man do, for my simple true judgment; or would you me speak after my custom, as being a professor to their sex?

Claud. No, I pray thee, speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, i' faith, methinks she's too low high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little a great praise: only this commendation I can her: that were she other than she is, she were us some; and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Claud. Thou thinkest I am in sport; I pray tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire of?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan rare carpenter?<sup>a</sup> Come, in what key shall I play you, to go in the song?<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Benedick is laughing at Claudio for his love which indeed he still scarcely credits. He asks him—you this with a sad brow?—i. e. are you serious in your or are you flouting or mocking us.—as though you were that Cupid, the blind god, has the keenest sight to spy a man that Vulcan, the smith, is a rare carpenter?

Look, returned to seek you.

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

What secret hath held you here, that you to Leonato's? could your grace would constrain me to tell. I charge thee on thy allegiance. I hear, count Claudio: I can be secret as I would have you think so; but on my mark you this, on my allegiance:—He is ith who?—now that is your grace's part.— hort his answer is:—With Hero, Leonato's er this were so, so were it uttered.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try:

"In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke."

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever this sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns and set them in my forehead: and let me be vilely painted; and in such great letters as they write, "Here is good house to hire," let them signify under my sign,—“Here you may see Benedick the married man.”

Claud. If this should ever happen thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the mean time, good signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's; commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassy; and so I commit you—

Claud. To the tuition of God: From my house, (if I had it)—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not: The body of your discourse is sometime guarded<sup>a</sup> with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither: ere you flout old ends any further,<sup>b</sup> examine your conscience; and so I leave you. [Exit BENE.]

Claud. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach; teach it but how,

And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn

Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero, she's his only heir: Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action,

I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye,

That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand

Than to drive liking to the name of love:

But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts

Have left their places vacant, in their rooms

Come thronging soft and delicate desires,

All prompting me how fair young Hero is,

Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently,

And tire the hearer with a book of words:

If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it;

And I will break with her; [and with her father

And thou shalt have her:] Was't not to this end

That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,

That know love's grief by his complexion!

But lest my liking might too sudden seem,

I would have sav'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

The fairest grant is the necessity:

Look, what will serve is fit: 't is once,<sup>c</sup> thou lovest;

And I will fit thee with the remedy.

I know we shall have revelling to-night;

I will assume thy part in some disguise,

And tell fair Hero I am Claudio;

And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,

And take her hearing prisoner with the force

And strong encounter of my amorous tale:

Then, after, to her father will I break;

Then, after, to her father will I break;

<sup>b</sup> The old ends flouted at were the long-winded conclusions of private letters.

<sup>c</sup> Once—once for all.

And, the conclusion is, she shall be thine :
In practice let us put it presently.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Leon. How now, brotner? Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you news that you yet dreamt not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them; but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus overheard by a man of mine: The prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece, your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow; I will send for him, and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself:—but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do.—O, I cry you mercy, friend: go you with me, and I will use your skill:—Good cousin, have a care this busy time.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter DON JOHN and CONRADE.

Con. What the good year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

D. John. I wonder that thou, being (as thou say'st thou art) born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Leonato's House.

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE, and others.

Leon. Was not count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him but I am heartburned an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beat. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick; the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half signior Benedick's tongue in count John's mouth, and half count John's melancholy in signior Benedick's face,—

Beat. With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man any woman in the world,—if he could g will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thou wilt nev husband if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst: I God's sending that way: for it is said, "curst cow short horns;" but to a cow too cu none.

Leon. So, by being too curst God will s horns.

many ill qualities.

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better; the hearers may cry,
Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight when the Balth. No more words; the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough; you are signior An-

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the wagging of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man: Here's his dry hand up and down:
you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful,—and that I had my good wit out of the 'Hundred merry Tales';—Well, this was signior Benedick that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders:
none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit but in his villainy; for he both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him: I am sure he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded<sup>a</sup> me.

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do: he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge' wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Music within.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. [Dance. Then exeunt all but DON JOHN, BORA., and CLAUD.

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and bath withdrawn her father to break with him about it:
The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are not you signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brotner in his love: he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you dissuade him from her, she is no equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt DON JOHN and BOR.

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick.

<sup>a</sup> Boarded—accosted.

But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio.
 'T is certain so;—the prince wove for himself.
 Friendship is constant in all other things,
 Save in the office and affairs of love:
 Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;
 Let every eye negotiate for itself,
 And trust no agent: for beauty is a witch,
 Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.
 This is an accident of hourly proof,
 Which I mistrusted not: Farewell, therefore, Hero.

Re-enter BENEDICK.

Bene. Count Claudio?
Claud. Yea, the same.
Bene. Come, will you go with me?
Claud. Whither?
Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer's chain? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.
Claud. I wish him joy of her.
Bene. Why, that 's spoken like an honest drover; so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus?
Claud. I pray you leave me.
Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind man; 't was the boy that stole your meat, and you 'll beat the post.
Claud. If 't will not be, I 'll leave you. [Exit.]
Bene. Alas! poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep into sedges. But that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool!—Ha, it may be I go under that title, because I am merry.—Yea; but so; I am apt to do myself wrong; I am not so reputed: it is the base though bitter disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I 'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where 's the count; Did you see him?
Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren; I told him, and I think told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow-tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.
D. Pedro. To be whipped! What 's his fault?
Bene. The flat transgression of a schoolboy; who, being overjoyed with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.
D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.
Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself; and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's nest.
D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.
Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.
D. Pedro. The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you; the gentleman that danced with her told her she is much wronged by you.
Bene. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block: an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor began to assume life and scold with her: She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester, and that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army she me: She speaks poniards, and every word stabs; breath were as terrible as her terminations, though no living near her; she would infect to the north. I would not marry her though she were endow'd all that Adam had left him before he transgressed; would have made Hercules have turned spit; have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, of her: you shall find her the infernal Até in apparel. I would to God some scholar would hit her; for, certainly, while she is here, a man is as quiet in bell as in a sanctuary; and people purpose because they would go thither; so, in disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

* An usurer's chain—the ornament of a wealthy citizen or goldsmith.

Re-enter CLAUDIO, BEATRICE, LEONATO, and

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes.

Bene. Will your grace command me any errand to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand to the antipodes, that you can devise to send me; I will fetch you a toothpick now from the fardel of Asia; bring you the length of Prester John's beard; fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard; do embassage to the Pigmies,—rather than hold words' conference with this harpy: You have employment for me?

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good counsel.

Bene. O God, sir, here 's a dish I love not; endure my lady Tongue.

D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have heart of signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me a while ago; I gave him use for it—a double heart for a sin; marry, once before he won it of me with faith; therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord; I should prove the mother of fools. I have count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count? wherefore sad?

Claud. Not sad, my lord.

D. Pedro. How then? Sick?

Claud. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor well; but civil, count; civil as an orange; something of that jealous complexion.

D. Pedro. I faith, lady, I think your blessing true; though I 'll be sworn, if he be so, his countenance is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name; fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, good will obtained: name the day of marriage, God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and my fortunes; his grace hath made the match, grace say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, 't is your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy; I was but little happy if I could say how much. I am yours, I am yours: I give away myself and dote upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry

Beat. Yea, my lord, I thank it; poor fool, on the windy side of care:—My cousin tells his ear that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good lord, for alliance!—Thus goes every man to the world but I, and I am sunburn'd; I stand in a corner, and cry, heigh-ho! for a husband.

* Shakspeare, in 'All 's Well that Ends Well,' has a phrase to go to the world in the sense of being married.

Ira. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one. I would rather have one of your father's gettish your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your excellent husbands, if a maid could come by

Ira. Will you have me, lady?

No, my lord, unless I might have another for days; your grace is too costly to wear every day, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born all mirth, and no matter.

Ira. Your silence most offends me, and to be silent becomes you; for, out of question, you were merry hour.

No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then a star danced, and under that was I born.—God give you joy!

Niece, will you look to those things I told

I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's
[Exit BEATRICE.]

Ira. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

There's little of the melancholy element in her; she is never sad, but when she sleeps; ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter hath often dreamt of unhappiness, and waked with laughing.

Ira. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband,

O, by no means; she mocks all her wooers with it.

Ira. She were an excellent wife for Benedick. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week they would talk themselves mad.

Ira. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to

To-morrow, my lord: Time goes on crutches, have all his rites.

Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence even-night; and a time too brief too, to have all your mind.

Ira. Come, you shake the head at so long a time; but I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall ally by us; I will, in the interim, undertake Hercules' labours; which is, to bring signior Claudio and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of the one with the other. I would fain have it so; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you will but minister such assistance as I shall give you.

My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten atchings.

And I, my lord.

Ira. And you too, gentle Hero?

I will do any modest office, my lord, to help you to a good husband.

Ira. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest that I know: thus far can I praise him; he is a brave strain,* of approved valour, and confirmed

I will teach you how to humour your cousin, shall fall in love with Benedick:—and I, with your helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in spite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, he is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, and we the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will give you my drift.
[Exeunt.]

E II.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter DON JOHN and BORACHIO.

Don John. It is so; the count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Yea, my lord, but I can cross it.

* Spain—lineare.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me: I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges even with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember.

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do you mightily hold up) to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato: Look you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despite them, I will endeavour anything.

Bora. Go then, find me a meet hour to draw don Pedro and the count Claudio, alone: tell them that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as—in a love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match; and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window; hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret term me Claudio; and bring them to see this, the very night before the intended wedding: for, in the mean time, I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be called assurance, and all the preparation overturned.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice: Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter BENEDICK and a Boy.

Bene. Boy!

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bene. I know that;—but I would have thee hence, and here again. [Exit Boy.—] I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn, by falling in love: And such a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known when he would have walked ten mile afoot, to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer;

his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair; yet I am well: another is wise; yet I am well: another virtuous; yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. [Withdraws]

Enter DON PEDRO, LEONATO, and CLAUDIO.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?
Claud. Yea, my good lord:—How still the evening is, As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!
D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?
Claud. O, very well, my lord: the music ended, We'll fit the kid fox with a pennyworth.

Enter BALTHAZAR, with music.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.
Balth. O good my lord, tax not so bad a voice To slander music any more than once.
D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency, To put a strange face on his own perfection:— I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.
Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: Since many a wooer doth commence his suit To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos; Yet will he swear, he loves.

D. Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come: Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes, There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.
D. Pedro. Why, these are very crotchets that he speaks; Note notes, forsooth, and noting! [Music.]
Bene. Now, "Divine air!" now is his soul ravished!—Is it not strange that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?—Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

BALTHAZAR sings.

I.

Balth. Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more;
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea, and one on shore;
To one thing constant never:
Then sigh not so,
But let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny;
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

II.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of damps so dull and heavy;
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy.
Then sigh not so, &c.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song
Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.
D. Pedro. Ha? no; no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him: and I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief! I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. Yea, marry; [to CLAUDIO.]—Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we would have it at the lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. [Exit BALTHAZAR.]
Come hither, Leonato: What was it you told me of to-day? that your niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Claud. O, ay:—Stalk on, stalk on: the fowl sits. [Aside to PEDRO.] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful that she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner? [Aside.]

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection,—it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May be, she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion, as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. Bait the hook well; this fish will bite. [Aside.]

Leon. What effects, my lord! She will sit you,— You heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it; knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence.

Claud. He hath ta'en the infection; hold it up. [Aside.]

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's her torment.

Claud. 'T is true, indeed; so your daughter says: "Shall I," says she, "that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?"

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him: for she'll be up twenty times a night: and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper:—my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O!—When she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet!

Claud. That.

Leon. O! she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence;<sup>a</sup> railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: "I measure him," says she, "by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should."

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;—"O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!"

Leon. She doth, indeed; my daughter says so: and the ecstasy hath so much overcome her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

<sup>a</sup> A farthing, and perhaps a halfpenny, was used to signify any small particle or division. So, in the character of the Prioress in Chaucer's Prologue to the 'Canterbury Tales':—

"That in hirre cuppe was no ferthing sawe
Of these whan she drunken hadde hire draught."

To what end? He would but make a sport to torment the poor lady worse.

Ursula. An he should, it were an alms to hang on 's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all that, she is virtuous.

Hero. And she is exceeding wise.

Ursula. In everything, but in loving Benedick.

O my lord, wisdom and blood combating in a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood is the victor. I am sorry for her, as I have just sent her uncle and her guardian.

Ursula. I would she had bestowed this dotage on some other body, I would have daff'd all other respects, and made myself: I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and let him say what he will say.

Were it good, think you?

Ursula. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die if he love her not; and she will die ere she be love known; and she will die if he woo her, and she will 'bate one breath of her accustomed fear.

Ursula. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love 't is very possible he'll scorn it: for the more you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Hero. He is a very proper man.

Ursula. He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Hero. Fore God, and in my mind, very wise.

Ursula. He doth, indeed, show some sparks that will.

And I take him to be valiant.

Ursula. As Hector, I assure you: and in the manner of quarrels you may see he is wise; for either he quarrels them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a christian-like fear.

If he do fear God he must necessarily keep his peace, if he break the peace he ought to enter into a war with fear and trembling.

Ursula. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, whoever it seems not in him, by some large jests he makes. Well, I am sorry for your niece: Shall I tell him of her love?

Hero. Never tell him, my lord; let her wear it out of her own counsel.

Nay, that 's impossible; she may wear her love out first.

Ursula. Well, we will hear further of it by your niece. Let it cool the while. I love Benedick well:
I would wish he would modestly examine himself
how much he is unworthy to have so good a lady.

My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Hero. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will not set my expectation. [Aside.]

Ursula. Let there be the same net spread for her:

and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that 's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb-show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner.

[Aside.]

[Exeunt D. PEDRO, CLAUD., and LEON.]

BENEDICK advances from the arbour.

Bene. This can be no trick: The conference was sadly borne.—They have the truth of this from Hero.
They seem to pity the lady; it seems her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be required. I hear how I am censured: they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection.—I did never think to marry—I must not seem proud:—Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair; 't is a truth, I can bear them witness:
and virtuous—'t is so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me:—By my troth, it is no addition to her wit;—nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her.—I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage: But doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age: Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No: The world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor,
I did not think I should live till I were married.—
Here comes Beatrice: By this day, she 's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter BEATRICE.

Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me; if it had been painful I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure, then, in the message?

Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal:—You have no stomach, signior; fare you well. [Exit.]

Bene. Ha! "Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner"—there 's a double meaning in that.
"I took no more pains for those thanks, than you took pains to thank me"—that 's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks:—If I do not take pity of her I am a villain; if I do not love her I am a Jew: I will go get her picture. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour;
ask thou find my cousin Beatrice with the prince and Claudio:
tell her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula are in the orchard, and our whole discourse is to hear her; say, that thou overheard'st us;
and that we steal into the pleached bower,
under the eaves, ripen'd by the sun,
to hear her;—like favourites,
that by peevishness, that advance their pride that power that bred it:—there will she hide her,

To listen our purpose: ' This is thy office,
Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must only be of Benedick:
When I do name him, let it be thy part
To praise him more than ever man did merit:
My talk to thee must be, how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice: Of this matter
Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;

* Purpose, and propose, have the same meaning—that of conversation.

Enter BEATRICE, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasantest angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait :
So angle we for Beatrice ; who even now
Is couched in the woodbine coverture :
Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing

Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.—

[They advance to the bower.]

No, truly Ursula, she is too disdainful ;
I know, her spirits are as coy and wild
As haggards of the rock.<sup>a</sup>

Urs. But are you sure
That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely ?

Hero. So says the prince, and my new-trothed lord.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, madam ?

Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it :

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick,
To wish him wrestle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so ? Doth not the gentleman Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon ?

Hero. O God of love ! I know he doth deserve
As much as may be yielded to a man :

But Nature never fram'd a woman's heart
Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice :
Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprising<sup>b</sup> what they look on ; and her wit
Values itself so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak : she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so ;
And therefore, certainly, it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why, you speak truth : I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd,
But she would spell him backward : if fair fac'd,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister ;

If low, an agate very vilely cut ;
If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds ;
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out ;
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero. No ; not to be so odd, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable :
But who dare tell her so ? If I should speak,
She would mock me into air ; O, she would laugh me
Out of myself, press me to death with wit.
Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly :
It were a better death than die with mocks ;
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Urs. Yet tell her of it ; hear what she will say.

Hero. No ; rather I will go to Benedick,
And counsel him to fight against his passion :
And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders
To stain my cousin with : One doth not know
How much an ill word may empoison liking.

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDIC LEONATO.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marria summate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a new gloss of your marriage, as to show a chi of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all

D. Pedro. Hang him, truant ; there's no

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter DOGGERY and VERGES, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desartless man to be constable?

1 Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoal; for they can write and read.

Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal: God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watch. Both which, master constable,—

Dogb. You have; I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

2 Watch. How if a<sup>a</sup> will not stand?

Dogb. Why, then take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects:—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 Watch. We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only have a care that your bills be not stolen.—Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid them that are drunk get them to bed.

<sup>a</sup> Hone if a. We have retained the quaint vulgarism of the original, a for he.

2 Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why, then let them alone till they are sober; if they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

2 Watch. Well, sir.

Dogb. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dogb. Truly, by your office, you may; but I think they that touch pitch will be defiled: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

Dogb. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will; much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 Watch. How if the nurse be asleep, and will not near us?

Dogb. Why, then depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying: for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes will never answer a calf when he bleats.

Verg. 'T is very true.

Dogb. This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person; if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verg. Nay, by 'r lady, that, I think, a cannot.

Dogb. Five shillings to one on 't, with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince be willing: for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By 'r lady, I think it be so.

Dogb. Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good night: an there be any matter of weight chances, call up me: keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night.—Come, neighbour.

2 Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dogb. One word more, honest neighbours: I pray you, watch about signior Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night: Adieu, be vigilant, I beseech you.

[Exeunt DOGB. and VERG.]

Enter BORACHIO and CONRADE.

Bora. What! Conrade,—

Watch. Peace, stir not.

[Aside.]

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close then under this pent-house, for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. [aside.] Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

Bora. Therefore know, I have earned of don John a thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible that any villainy should be so dear?

Bora. Thou shouldst rather ask, if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows thou art unconfirmer; knowest, that the fashion of a doublet, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bora. Tush! I may as well say, the fool! But seest thou not what a deformed thief this

Watch. I know that Deformed; a has been thief this seven year; a goes up and down like a tleman: I remember his name.

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No; 't was the vane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed this fashion is? how giddily he turns about his bloods, between fourteen and five-and-thirty? fashioning them like Pharaoh's soldiers in the painting; sometime, like god Bel's priests in church-window; sometime, like the shaven H the smirched<sup>b</sup> worm-eaten tapestry, where his seems as massy as his club?

Con. All this I see; and see that the fashion out more apparel than the man: But art not self giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Not so neither: but know, that I have wooed Margaret, the lady Hero's gentlewoman name of Hero; she leans me out at her mistress window, bids me a thousand times good tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee prince, Claudio, and my master, planted, and possessed by my master don John, saw at the orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought thy Margaret was Hero?

Bora. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and by his oaths, which first possessed them, part dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly villainy, which did confirm any slander that had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore meet her as he was appointed, next morning temple, and there, before the whole congregation her with what he saw o'er-night, and send her again without a husband.

1 Watch. We charge you in the prince's name.

2 Watch. Call up the right master constable: here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery ever was known in the commonwealth.

1 Watch. And one Deformed is one of them him, a wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters.

2 Watch. You 'll be made bring Deformed warrant you.

Con. Masters,—

1 Watch. Never speak; we charge you, let you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly coin being taken up of these men's bills.<sup>c</sup>

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you we 'll obey you.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well.

Marg. Troth, I think your other rabato were

Mary. By my troth, it's not so good; and I warrant your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another; I'll wear none but this.

Mary. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner;* and your gown's a most rare fashion, i' faith. I saw the duchess of Milan's gown, that they praise so.

Hero. O, that exceeds, they say.

Mary. By my troth it's but a night-gown in respect of yours: Cloth of gold, and cuts, and laced with silver; set with pearls down sleeves, side-sleeves,<sup>b</sup> and skirts, and underborne with a blueish tinsel: but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth an o' t.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is crossing heavy!

Mary. 'T will be heavier soon, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Mary. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? Is marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord measurable without marriage? I think, you would have us say, saving your reverence,—“a husband:” an bad talking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend nobody: Is there any harm in, “the heavier for a husband”?<sup>c</sup> Now, I think, an it be the right husband, and the right wife; otherwise 't is light, and not heavy: Ask my lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter BEATRICE.

Hero. Good morrow, coz.

Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how now! do you speak in the sick time?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Mary. Clap us into—“Light o' love;”<sup>c</sup> that goes without a hearten; do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

Beat. Ye light o' love, with your heels;—then if your husband have stables enough, you'll look he shall lack no harness.

Mary. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'T is almost five o'clock, cousin; 't is time you were ready. By my troth I am exceeding ill: hey ho!

Mary. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.<sup>d</sup>

Mary. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beat. What means the fool, trow?<sup>e</sup>

Mary. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!

Hero. These gloves the count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.

Mary. A maid, and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O, God help me! God help me! how long have you professed apprehension?

Mary. Ever since you left it: doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap.—By my troth, I am sick.

In thine arm, or leg, in any degree;

In thine head, or tooth, or toe, or knee;

Wherever thou find ache thou shalt not like him.”

<sup>f</sup> Trow—I trow.

Mary. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

Mary. Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor, indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: and how you may be converted, I know not; but, methinks, you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?

Mary. Not a false gallop.

Re-enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, withdraw; the prince, the count, signior Benedick, don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter LEONATO, with DOGBERRY and VERGES.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for, you see, it is a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?

Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest, as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers; but, truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me! ha!

Dogb. Yea, and 't were a thousand times more than 't is: for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir; he will be talking; as they say, When the age is in, the wit is out; God help us! it is a world to see!—Well said, i' faith, neighbour Verges:—well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind:—An honest soul, i' faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread: but God is to be worshipp'd: All men are not alike; alas, good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you.

Dogb. Gifts, that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir: our watch, sir, have, indeed, comprehended two aspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me; I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be suffigance.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you well.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I will wait upon them; I am ready.

[Exeunt LEONATO and Messeng

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis S coal; bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the ga we are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you here 's that [touching his forehead] shall drive some them to a non com: only get the learned writer to down our excommunication, and meet me at the ga

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter DON PEDRO, DON JOHN, LEONATO, FRIAR, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, HERO, and BEATRICE, &c.

Leon. Come, friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?

Claud. No.

Leon. To be married to her; friar, you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none.

Claud. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do! [not knowing what they do!]

Hero. How now! Interjections? Why, then, some be of laughing, as, ha! ha! he!

Claud. Stand thee by, friar:—Father, by your leave; Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claud. And what have I to give you back, whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.

There, Leonato, take her back again;

Give not this rotten orange to your friend;

She 's but the sign and semblance of her honour:

Behold, how like a maid she blushes here:

O, what authority and show of truth

Can cunning sin cover itself withal!

Comes not that blood, as modest evidence,

To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear,

All you that see her, that she were a maid,

By these exterior shows? But she is none:

She knows the heat of a luxurious bed:

Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married,

Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof,

Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth,

And made defeat of her virginity,—

Claud. I know what you would say; if I have known her,

You 'll say, she did embrace me as a husband,

And so extenuate the forehead sin:

No, Leonato,

I never tempted her with word too large;

But, as a brother to his sister, show'd

Bashful sincerity, and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on the seeming! I will write against

You seem to me as Dian in her orb;

As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown;

But you are more intemperate in your blood

Than Venus, or those pamp'rd animals

That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak

I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about

To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken? or do I but dream

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God

Claud. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother?

Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so: But what of this, my lord?

Claud. Let me but move one question to your daughter;

And, by that fatherly and kindly power

That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me! how am I beset!—

What kind of catechising call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name

With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero;

Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.

What man was he talk'd with you yesternight

Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?

Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden.—Leonato

I am sorry you must hear: Upon mine honour,

Myself, my brother, and this griev'd count,

Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,

Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window;

Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal<sup>a</sup> villain,

Confess'd the vile encounters they have had

A thousand times in secret.

D. John. Fie, fie! they are

Not to be nam'd, my lord, not to be spoken of;

There is not chastity enough in language,

Without offence to utter them: Thus, pretty lady,

I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,

If half thy outward graces had been plac'd

About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!

<sup>a</sup> Liberal—licentiously free.

these well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
 ere impiety, and impious purity!
 I'll lock up all the gates of love,
 my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
 all beauty into thoughts of harm,
 or shall it more be gracious.

Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?

[HERO SINGS.]
 Why, how now, cousin? wherefore sink you down. Come, let us go: these things, come thus to light,

 her spirits up.

[Exeunt D. PEDRO, D. JOHN, and CLAUD.]

How doth the lady?

Dead, I think;—help, uncle;—
 why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—
 friar!

O fate, take not away thy heavy hand!
 the fairest cover for her shame
 may be wish'd for.

How now, cousin Hero?
 Have comfort, lady.

Dost thou look up?

Yea; Wherefore should she not?

Wherefore? Why, doth not every earthly thing me upon her? Could she here deny that is printed in her blood?

Yes, Hero; do not open thine eyes:

I think thou wouldst not quickly die,

(I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,

would, on the rearward of reproaches,

thy life. Grieved I, I had but one?

Is that at frogal nature's frame?*

so much by thee! Why had I one?

Or wast thou lovely in my eyes?

And I not, with charitable hand,

as a beggar's issue at my gates;

circled thus, and mir'd with infamy,

have said, "No part of it is mine,

me derives itself from unknown loins"

and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd, and that I was proud on; mine so much,

myself was to myself not mine,

and of her; why, she—O, she is fallen

it of ink! that the wide sea is too few to wash her clean again;

and too little, which may season give her soul tainted flesh!

Sir, sir, be patient!

For part I am so attir'd in wonder,

and not what to say.

O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!

Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?

No, truly not; although until last night

his twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made,

was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!

Are the two princes lie? and Claudio lie?

And she so, that, speaking of her foulness, is with tears? Hence from her; let her die.

Hear me a little;

For I have only been silent so long.

And in my way into this course of fortune,

and of the lady; I have mark'd and blushing apparitions start in her face; a thousand innocent shames and whiteness bear away those blushes;

and her eye there hath appear'd a fire,

and the errors that these princes hold of her maiden truth:—Call me a fool;

and my reading, nor my observations,

and my experimental seal doth warrant

* Frage—ordinance, arrangement.

The tenour of my book; trust not my age,
 My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
 If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
 Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be:

Thou seest, that all the grace that she hath left is, that she will not add to her damnation

A sin of perjury; she not denies it:

Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse

That which appears in proper nakedness?

Friar. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?

Hero. They know that do accuse me; I know none:

If I know more of any man alive

Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,

Let all my sins lack mercy!—O my father,

Prove you that any man with me convers'd

At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight

Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,

Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Friar. There is some strange misprision in the princes.

Bene. Two of them have the very bent of honour;

And if their wisdoms be misled in this,

The practice of it lives in John the bastard,

Whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.

Leon. I know not: If they speak but truth of her,

These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her honour,

The proudest of them shall well hear of it.

Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,

Nor age so eat up my invention,

Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,

Nor my bad life left me so much of friends,

But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,

Both strength of limb, and policy of mind,

Ability in means, and choice of friends,

To quit me of them thoroughly.

Friar. Pause a while,

And let my counsel sway you in this case.

Your daughter here the princes left for dead;

Let her a while be secretly kept in,

And publish it that she is dead indeed:

Maintain a mourning ostentation;

And on your family's old monument

Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites

That appertain unto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?

Friar. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her behalf

Change slander to remorse; that is some good:

But not for that dream I on this strange course,

But on this travail look for greater birth.

She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,

Upon the instant that she was accus'd,

Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd,

Of every hearer: For it so falls out,

That what we have we prize not to the worth

Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost,

Why then we rack* the value, then we find

The virtue that possession would not show us

Whiles it was ours: So will it fare with Claudio:

When he shall hear she died upon his words,

The idea of her life shall sweetly creep

Into his study of imagination;

And every lovely organ of her life

Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,

More moving-delicate, and full of life,

Into the eye and prospect of his soul,

Than when she liv'd indeed:—then shall he mourn,

(If ever love had interest in his liver,)

And wish he had not so accus'd her;

No, though he thought his accusation true.

Let this be so, and doubt not but success

Will fashion the event in better shape

Than I can lay it down in likelihood.

But if all aim but this be levell'd false,

* Rack—strain, stretch, exaggerate: hence rack-rent.

The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy ;
And, if it sort not well, you may conceal her
(As best befits her wounded reputation)
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you ;
And though, you know, my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly as your soul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Friar. 'T is well consented ; presently away ;
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.—

Come, lady, die to live : this wedding-day, Perhaps, is but prolong'd ; have patience, and endure. [Exeunt Friar, Hero, and Leon.]

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while ?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason, I do it freely.

Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wronged.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her !

Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship ?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.

Bene. May a man do it ?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you :
Is not that strange ?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not : It were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you : but believe me not ; and yet I lie not ; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing :—I am sorry for my cousin.

Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.

Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it that you love me ; and I will make him eat it that says I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word ?

Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it : I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why, then God forgive me !

Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice ?

Beat. You have stay'd me in a happy hour ; I was about to protest I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do anything for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha ! not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to deny : Farewell.

Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here :—There is no love in you :—Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Bene. Beatrice,—

Beat. In faith, I will go.

Bene. We 'll be friends first.

Beat. You dare easier be friends with me than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy ?

Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonour'd my kinswoman ?—
O, that I were a man !—What ! bear her in hand until they come to take hands ; and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I were a man ! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me, Beatrice :—

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window ?—a proper saying.

Bene. Nay, but, Beatrice :—

Beat. Sweet Hero !—she is wronged, she is she is undone.

Bene. Beat—

Beat. Princes, and counties ! Surely, a pro-timony, a goodly count-confect ; a sweet gall O that I were a man for his sake ! or that I friend would be a man for my sake ! But n melted into courtesies, valour into compli men are only turned into tongue, and trim he is now as valiant as Hercules that only and swears it :—I cannot be a man with wish fore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice : By this hand, I

Beat. Use it for my love some other way th ing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the coun hath wronged Hero ?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or

Bene. Enough, I am engaged, I will chall
I will kiss your hand, and so leave you : By Claudio shall render me a dear account : A of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your must say she is dead ; and so, farewell.

SCENE II.—A Prison.

and the Watch, with CONRADE and BORA.*

Dogb. Is our whole dissembly appeared ?

Verg. Nay, that 's certain ; we have the e

Dogb. Write down that they hope they ser that you are little better than false knaves ; a go near to be thought so shortly. How answe yourselves ?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure
I will go about with him.—Come you hither, word in your ear, sir ; I say to you, it is th

Bora. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside.—Fore God, they prince's name, accuse these men.

prince's brother, was a villain.

Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, fellow, peace ; I do not look, I promise thee.

* Efest—quickest.

u. What heard you him say else?
Ant. Marry, that he had received a thousand of don John, for accusing the lady Hero wrong-

Flat burglary, as ever was committed.

Yes, by the mass, that it is.

u. What else, fellow?

Ant. And that count Claudio did mean, upon a, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly,
marry her.

O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everesumption for this.

u. What else?

Ant. This is all.

u. And this is more, masters, than you can Prince John is this morning secretly stolen Hero was in this manner accused, in this very refusal, and upon the grief of this suddenly Master constable, let these men be bound, and to Leonato; I will go before, and show him
mination. [Exit.]

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in the hands—

Con. Off, coxcomb!

Dogb. God's my life! where's the sexton? let him write down, the prince's officer, coxcomb. Come, bind them:—Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

Dogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down, an ass! but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass:—No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns and everything handsome about him:
—Bring him away. O, that I had been writ down, an ass! [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before Leonato's House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

If you go on thus, you will kill yourself;
not wisdom thus to second grief yourself.

I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
alls into mine ears as profitless in a sieve: give not me counsel;
so comforter delight mine ear,
e a one whose wrongs do suit with mine.
e a father, that so lov'd his child,

lineament, branch, shape, and form:

ey themselves not feel; but tasting it usel turns to passion, which before ve preceptual medicine to rage, ung madness in a silken thread,
ch with air, and agony with words:
t is all men's office to speak patience that wring under the load of sorrow;
uch's virtue, nor sufficiency,
moral, when he shall endure himself: therefore give me no counsel;
e cry louder than advertisement.
Therein do men from children nothing differ.
I pray thee, peace; I will be flesh and blood;
e was never yet philosopher
ld endure the tooth-ach patiently;
they have writ the style of gods,
e a push<sup>b</sup> at chance and sufferance.
Let bend not all the harm upon yourself;
ee that do offend you suffer too.

Leon calls a bookworm a candle waster; and we
this is the meaning here.
<sup>a</sup> explained to be a thrust—a defiance.

Leon. There thou speak'st reason: nay, I will do so
My soul doth tell me Hero is belied;
And that shall Claudio know, so shall the prince,
And all of them, that thus dishonour her.

Enter DON PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

Ant. Here comes the prince, and Claudio, hastily.

D. Pedro. Good den, good den.

Claud. Good day to both of you.

Leon. Hear you, my lords,—

D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well,
my lord:

Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.

Ant. If he could right himself with quarrelling,
Some of us would lie low.

Claud. Who wrongs him?

Leon. Marry, thou dost wrong me; thou dissembler,
thou:—

Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword,
I fear thee not.

Claud. Marry, beshrew my hand,
If it should give your age such cause of fear:
In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.

Leon. Tush, tush, man, never flear and jest at me:

I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool;
As, under privilege of age, to brag
What I have done being young, or what would do
Were I not old: Know, Claudio, to thy head,
Thou hast so wrong'd my innocent child and me,
That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by;
And, with grey hairs, and bruise of many days,
Do challenge thee to trial of a man.

I say, thou hast belied mine innocent child;
Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancestors:
O! in a tomb where never scandal slept,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villainy.

Claud. My villainy!

Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine, I say.

D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.

Leon. My lord, my lord

I'll prove it on his body, if he dare;
Despite his nice fence and his active practice,
His May of youth, and bloom of lusthood.

Claud. Away, I will not have .o do with you.

Leon. Canst thou so daff me?<sup>a</sup> Thou hast kill'd my child;
If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed;
But that 's no matter; let him kill one first;—
Win me and wear me,—let him answer me,—
Come follow me, boy; come sir boy, come follow me:
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining<sup>b</sup> fence;
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother,—
Ant. Content yourself: God knows, I lov'd my niece;
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains;
That dare as well answer a man, indeed,
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue;
Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!—

Leon. Brother Antony,—
Ant. Hold you content: What, man! I know them, yea,

And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple:
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boys,
That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave, and slander,
Go anticly, and show outward hideousness,
And speak off half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
And this is all.

Leon. But, brother Antony,—
Ant. Come, 't is no matter;
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death;
But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing
But what was true, and very full of proof.

Leon. My lord, my lord,—
D. Pedro. I will not hear you.

Leon. No?
Come, brother, away:—I will be heard;—
Ant. And shall,
Or some of us will smart for it.

[Exeunt LEON. and ANT.]

Enter BENEDICK.

D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seek.

Claud. Now, signior! what news?

Bene. Good day, my lord.

D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: You are almost come to part almost a fray.

Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.

D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother: What think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour: I came to seek you both.

Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away: Wilt thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard: Shall I draw it?

D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit.—I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale:—
Art thou sick, or angry?

Claud. What! courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, and you charge it against me:—I pray you, choose another subject.

Claud. Nay, then give him another staff; this last
's broke cross.

<sup>a</sup> Daff me—put me aside.

<sup>b</sup> Foining—thrusting.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more
I think he be angry indeed.

Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his;

Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Claud. God bless me from a challenge!

Bene. You are a villain;—I jest not—I it good how you dare, with what you dare,
you dare:—Do me right, or I will protest; ardice. You have killed a sweet lady, and shall fall heavy on you: Let me hear from you.

Claud. Well, I will meet you, so I may cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast? a feast?

Claud. I' faith, I thank him; he hath bid calf's head and a capon, the which if I do most curiously, say my knife 's naught.—Sh

Bene. Sir, your wit ambles well; it goes e

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee how Beatrice prais the other day: I said, thou hadst a fine wit;

wit;" "Right," says she, "a great gross one!"
said I, "a good wit;" "Just," said she, "it said I, "he hath the tongues;" "That I belie double tongue; there's two tongues." Thu an hour together, trans-shape thy particular properest man in Italy.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily, and cared not.

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; but yet, for al if she did not hate him deadly, she would dearly: the old man's daughter told us all.

Claud. All, all; and moreover, "God saw he was hid in the garden."

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the save horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

Claud. Yea, and text underneath, "He Benedick the married man"?

Bene. Fare you well, boy! you know my thanked, hurt not.—My lord, for your many then peace be with him. [E

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and I'll you for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee?

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is, whe you disgraced her when you should marry lainy they have upon record; which I had with my death, than repeat over to my lady is dead upon mine and my master's tion; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the villain.

Runs not this speech like iron through our blood?

I have drunk poison while he utter'd it.

But did my brother set thee on to this?
ea, and paid me richly for the practice of it.
He is compos'd and fram'd of treachery:—
t is upon this villainy.

sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear semblance that I lov'd it first.

ome, bring away the plaintiffs; by this time
hath reformed signior Leonato of the matter:
ra, do not forget to specify, when time and serve, that I am an ass.

ere, here comes master signior Leonato, and too.

LEONATO and ANTONIO, with the Sexton.

Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes;

I note another man like him and him: Which of these is he?

If you would know your wronger, look on me.
rt thee—thou—the slave that with thy death hast kill'd sent child?

Yea, even I alone.

o, not so, villain; thou beliest thyself;

a pair of honourable men,

led, that had a hand in it:

a, princes, for my daughter's death;

with your high and worthy deeds;

rely done, if you bethink you of it.

I know not how to pray your patience,

Speak: Choose your revenge yourself;

to what penance your invention

see my sin: yet sinn'd I not, taking.

By my soul, nor I;

and satisfy this good old man,

and under any heavy weight enjoin me to.

cannot bid you bid my daughter live, impossible; but I pray you both,

Possess the people in Messina here

How innocent she died: and, if your love

Can labour aught in sad invention,

Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,

And sing it to her bones; sing it to-night:—

To-morrow morning come you to my house;

And since you could not be my son-in-law,

Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter

Almost the copy of my child that's dead,

And she alone is heir to both of us;

Give her the right you should have given her cousin,

And so dies my revenge.

Claud. O, noble sir,

Your over kindness doth wring tears from me!

I do embrace your offer; and dispose

For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To-morrow then I will expect your coming;

To-night I take my leave.—This naughty man

Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,

Who, I believe, was pack'd in all this wrong,

Hir'd to it by your brother.

Bora. No, by my soul, she was not;

Nor knew not what she did, when she spoke to me;

But always hath been just and virtuous,

In anything that I do know by her.

Dogb. Moreover, sir, (which, indeed, is not under white and black,) this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remembered in his punishment: And also, the watch heard them talk of one Deformed: they say, he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it; and borrows money in God's name; the which he hath used so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted, and will lend nothing for God's sake: Pray you, examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Dogb. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth; and I praise God for you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Dogb. God save the foundation!

Leon. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

Dogb. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which, I beseech your worship, to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship; I wish your worship well; God restore you to health: I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it.—Come, neighbour.

[Exeunt DOGB., VERG., and Watch.]

Leon. Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell.

Ant. Farewell, my lords; we look for you to-morrow.

D. Pedro. We will not fail.

Claud. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.

[Exeunt D. PEDRO and CLAUD.]

Leon. Bring you these fellows on; we'll talk with Margaret,

How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. [Ex.]

SCENE II.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter BENEDICK and MARGARET, meeting.

Bene. Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.

Marg. To have no man come over me? why, shall I always keep below stairs?

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth,
it catches.

Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret, it will not hurt

a woman; and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice: I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who, I think, hath legs. [Exit MARGARET.]

Bene. And therefore will come.

The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve.— [Singing.]

I mean in singing; but in loving,—Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of panders, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love: Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried; I can find out no rhyme to "lady" but "baby," an innocent rhyme; for "scorn" "horn," a hard rhyme; for "school," "fool," a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings: No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

Enter BEATRICE.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee?

Beat. Yea, signior, and depart when you bid me.

Bene. O, stay but till then!

Beat. Then, is spoken; fare you well now:—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unknissed.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit: But, I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes<sup>a</sup> my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together; which maintained so politic a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. "Suffer love;" a good epithet! I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas! poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession: there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours: if a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bells ring, and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question?—Why, an hour in clamour, and a quarter in rheum: Therefore it is most expedient for the wise (if don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself: So much for praising myself, (who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy,) and now tell me, How doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend: they leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle's old coil<sup>a</sup> at home: it is proved, my lady hath been falsely accused; the prince and mightily abused; and don John is the author who is fled and gone: will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, buried in thy eyes; and, moreover, I will go with thee to thy uncle's.

SCENE III.—The Inside of a Church

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and Attendant music and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Atten. It is, my lord.

Claud. [Reads from a scroll.]

"Done to death by slanderous tongues
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb."

Now, music sound, and sing your solemn hymn

SONG.

Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go,
Midnight, assist our moan;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Graves, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavenly, heavenly.<sup>b</sup>

Claud. Now unto thy bones good night!

Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters; put your
out:

The wolves have prey'd: and look, the grey
Before the wheels of Phoebus, round about Dapples the drowsy east with spots of gray.
Thanks to you all, and leave us; fare you well.

Claud. Good morrow, masters; each his sever

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put our weeds;

And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And, Hymen, now with luckier issue
Than this, for whom we render'd up this woe! [Exit]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Leonato's House

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, BENEDICK, BEATRICE, URSULA, FRIAR, and HERO.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accused Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this;
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforced
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves;
And, when I send for you, come hither mask'd:
The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour

<sup>b</sup> To utter is here to put out—to expel. Death is heavenly—by the power of Heaven.

—you know your office, brother ;
 be father to your brother's daughter,
 be to young Claudio. [Exeunt Ladies.]
 Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.
 Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.
 To do what, signior?
 To bind me, or undo me, one of them.
 I would, truth it is, good signior,
 you regards me with an eye of favour.
 That eye my daughter lent her: 'T is most
 true.
 And I do with an eye of love requite her.
 The sight whereof, I think, you had from me, when she and the prince. But what's your will?
 Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
 My will, my will is, your good will
 I wish with ours, this day to be conjoin'd in a most honourable marriage;
 if you, good friar, I shall desire your help.
 My heart is with your liking.

And my help
 shall be the prince, and Claudio.]

Enter PEDRO and CLAUDIO, with Attendants.

Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly.
 Good morrow, prince; good morrow, Claudio; attend you. Are you yet determin'd to marry with my brother's daughter?
 I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiop
 I'll hold her forth, brother, here's the friar ready.

[Exit ANTONIO.]
 Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick: Why, what's the matter,
 you have such a February face,
 frost, of storm, and cloudiness?
 I think he thinks upon the savage bull:—
 'Tis not, man, we'll tip thy horns with gold,
 if you shall rejoice at thee;
 if you did at lusty Jove,
 he would play the noble beast in love.
 Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
 such a strange bull leap'd your father's cow,
 and calf in that same noble feat,
 as to you, for you have just his bleat.

Enter ANTONIO, with the Ladies masked.

For this I owe you: here come other reckon-
 ings.

Is the lady I must seize upon?
 Is she the same, and I do give you her.
 Why, then she's mine: Sweet, let me see your face.

No, that you shall not, till you take her hand of the friar, and swear to marry her.

Give me your hand before this holy friar;
 or husband, if you like of me.

And when I liv'd, I was your other wife:
 [Unmasking.]

Was you lov'd, you were my other husband.
 Another Hero?

Nothing certainer:
 she is dead [deff'd] but I do live, as she is I live, I am a maid.

She's the former Hero! Hero that is dead!
 She's dead, my lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

All this amazement can I qualify;
 for that the holy rites are ended,
 you largely of fair Hero's death:

Meantime, let wonder seem familiar,
 And to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice?
 Beat. I answer to that name; [unmasking] what is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?
 Beat. Why no, no more than reason.

Bene. Why, then your uncle, and the prince, and Claudio,

Have been deceiv'd; they swore you did.

Beat. Do not you love me?
 Bene. Troth no, no more than reason.

Beat. Why, then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,
 Are much deceiv'd; for they did swear you did.

Bene. They swore that you were almost sick for me.
 Beat. They swore that you were well nigh dead for
 me.

Bene. 'T is no such matter:—Then you do not love
 me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.
 Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Claud. And I'll be sworn upon 't, that he loves her;
 For here 's a paper, written in his hand,
 A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
 Fashion'd to Beatrice.

Hero. And here 's another,
 Writ in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket,
 Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle; here 's our own hands against our hearts!—Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity!

Beat. I would not deny you;—but, by this good day,
 I yield upon great persuasion; and, partly, to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Bene. Peace, I will stop your mouth. [Kissing her.]
 D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour: Dost thou think I care for a satire, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, a shall wear nothing handsome about him: In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but in that* thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends:—let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.
 Bene. First, o' my word; therefore, play music.—
 Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife;
 there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,
 And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow; I'll devise thee brave punishments for him.—Strike up, pipers.

[Dance. Exeunt]

* In that—because.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE first edition of this play was published in 1602. The comedy as it now stands first appeared in the folio of 1623; and the play in that edition contains very nearly twice the number of lines that the original edition contains. The succession of scenes is the same in both copies, except in one instance; but the speeches of the several characters are greatly elaborated in the amended copy, and several of the characters not only heightened, but new distinctive features given to them.

Rightly to appreciate this comedy, it is, we conceive, absolutely necessary to dissociate it from the historical plays of 'Henry IV.' and 'Henry V.' Whether Shakspeare produced the original sketch of 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' before those plays, and remodelled it after their appearance,—or whether he produced both the original sketch and the finished performance when his audiences were perfectly familiar with the Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Nym, Bardolph, and Mistress Quickly of 'Henry IV.' and 'Henry V.'—it is perfectly certain that he did not intend 'The Merry Wives' as a continuation. It is impossible, however, not to associate the period of the comedy with the period of the histories. But at the same time we must suffer our minds to slide into the belief that the manners of the times of Henry IV. had sufficient points in common with those of the times of Elizabeth to justify the poet in taking no great pains to distinguish between them. The characters speak in the language of truth and nature, which belongs to all time; and we must forget that they sometimes use the expressions of a particular time to which they do not in strict propriety belong.

The critics have been singularly laudatory of this comedy. Warton calls it "the most complete specimen of Shakspeare's comic powers." Johnson says, "This comedy is remarkable for the variety and number of the personages, who exhibit more characters appropriated and discriminated than perhaps can be found in any other play." We agree with much of this; but we certainly cannot agree with Warton that it is "the most complete specimen of Shakspeare's comic powers." We cannot forget 'As You Like It,' and 'Twelfth Night,' and 'Much Ado about Nothing.' Of those qualities which put Shakspeare above all other men that ever existed, 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' exhibits few traces. Some of the touches, however, which no other hand could give, are to be found in Slender, and we think in Quickly.

The principal action of this comedy—the adventures of Falstaff with the Merry Wives—sweeps on with a rapidity of movement which hurries us forward to the dénouement as irresistibly as if the actors were under the influence of that destiny which belongs to the empire of tragedy. No reverses, no disgraces, can save

Falstaff from his final humiliation. The net is around him, but he does not see the meshes;—he fancies himself the deceiver, but he is the deceived. The real jealousy of Ford most skilfully helps on the merry devices of his wife; and with equal skill does the poet make him throw away his jealousy, and assist in the last plot against the "unclean knight."

The movement of the principal action is beautifully contrasted with the occasional repose of the other scenes. The Windsor of the time of Elizabeth is presented to us, as the quiet country town, sleeping under the shadow of its neighbour the castle. Amidst its gabled houses, separated by pretty gardens, from which the elm and the chestnut and the lime throw their branches across the unpaved road, we find a goodly company, with little to do but gossip and laugh, and make sport out of each other's cholers and weaknesses. We see Master Page training his "fallow greyhound;" and we go with Master Ford "a-birding." We listen to the "pribbles and prabbles" of Sir Hugh Evans and Justice Shallow with a quiet satisfaction; for they talk as unartificial men ordinarily talk, without much wisdom but with good temper and sincerity. We find ourselves in the days of ancient hospitality, when men could make their fellows welcome without ostentatious display, and half a dozen neighbours "could drink down all unkindness" over "a hot venison pasty." The more busy inhabitants of the town have time to tattle, and to laugh, and be laughed at. Mine Host of the Garter is the prince of hosts; he is the very soul of fun and good temper. His contrivances to manage the fray between the furious French doctor and the honest Welsh parson are productive of the happiest situations. Caius waiting for his adversary—"De herring is no dead so as I will kill him"—is capital. But Sir Hugh, with his—

"There will we make our peds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies,
To shallow—

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry,—is inimitable.

With regard to the under-plot of Fenton and Anne Page—the scheme of Page to marry her to Slender—the counterplot of her mother, "firm for Dr. Caius"—and the management of the lovers to obtain a triumph out of the devices against them—it may be sufficient to point out how skilfully it is interwoven with the Hero's Oak adventure of Falstaff. Over all the misadventures of that night, when "all sorts of deer were chased," Shakspeare throws his own tolerant spirit of forgiveness and content:—

"Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire;
Sir John and all."

SCENE.—WINDSOR.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Windsor. Garden Front of Page's House.

Justice SHALLOW, SLENDER, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Sir Hugh,* persuade me not; I will make a matter of it: if he were twenty sir John, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and my cousin Slender, and Cust-alarum.<sup>b</sup>

Ay, and rotolorum too; and a gentleman horn, passant; who writes himself armigero; in any grant, quittance, or obligation, armigero.<sup>c</sup>

Ay, that I do; and have done<sup>d</sup> any time these twelve years.

All his successors, gone before him, have done 't; his ancestors, that come after him, may never give the dozen white luses in their coat.

It is an old coat.

The dozen white luses do become an old coat to express well, passant: it is a familiar beast to signify love.

Had several instances in Shakspeare of a priest being called Sir Hugh in this comedy; Sir Oliver in 'As You Like It'; Sir Topas in 'Twelfth Night'; and Sir Nathaniel in 'Labour's Lost.'

alorum is meant for an abridgment of Castes Rotolorum. Not understanding the abbreviation, adds, "and rotate."

Justice signed his attestations, "jural" coram me. Shallow, armigero.<sup>c</sup> <sup>d</sup> done—see his to done.

Shal. The luse is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.<sup>a</sup>

Slen. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Eva. It is marrying, indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Eva. Yes, py'r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one: if sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you

Shal. The council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Eva. It is not meet the council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot: the council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments<sup>b</sup> in that.

Shal. Hal' o' my life, if I were young again the sword should end it.

Eva. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my prain, which, peradventure, prings goot discretions with it: There is Anne Page, which is daughter to master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Shal. The council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Eva. It is pretty clear that "the dozen white luses" apply to the arms of the Lucy family. In Ferne's 'Blazon of Gentry,' 1586, we have, "signs of the coat should something agree with the name. It is the coat of Geoffrey Lord Lucy. He did bear gules, three luses bariant argent." The luse is a pike,—"the fresh fish;" not the "familiar beast to man." So far is clear; but why "the salt fish is an old coat" is not so intelligible.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Eva. It is that fery person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of moneys, and gold, and silver, is her grandsire upon his death's-bed (Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old: it were a goot motion if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between master Abraham and mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Eva. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Eva. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest master Page: Is Falstaff there?

Eva. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false; or as I despise one that is not true. The knight, sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door [knocks] for master Page. What, ho! Got pless your house here!

Enter PAGE.

Page. Who's there?

Eva. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and justice Shallow: and here young master Slender; that, peradventures, shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Page. I am glad to see your worships well: I thank you for my venison, master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you; Much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better: it was ill killed:—How doth good mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, la; with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

Page. I am glad to see you, good master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsall.

Page. It could not be judged, sir.

Slen. You 'll not confess, you 'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not:—'t is your fault, 't is your fault:—'T is a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; Can there be more said? he is good, and fair. Is sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wronged me, master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed it is not redressed; is not that so, master Page? He hath wronged me; indeed, he hath;—at a word he hath;—believe me; Robert Shallow, esquire, saith he is wronged.

Page. Here comes sir John.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, NYM, and PISTOL.

Fal. Now, master Shallow; you 'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter.

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

Fal. I will answer it straight;—I have done all this: is now answered.

The council shall know this.

Fal. 'T were better for you if it were known in counsel; you 'll be laughed at.

Eva. Pauca verba, sir John, goot worts.

Fal. Good worts! good cabbage.<sup>a</sup>—Slender, I broke your head; What matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching<sup>b</sup> rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. [They carried me to the tavern and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.]

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephistophilus?

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca; slice! that's my humour.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man?—can you tell, cousin?

Eva. Peace: I pray you! Now let us understand: There is three umpires in this matter, as I understand, that is—master Page, fidelicet, master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three, to hear it and end it between them.

Eva. Fery goot: I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol—

Pist. He hears with ears.

Eva. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, "He hears with ear"? Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick master Slender's purse?

Slen. Ay, by these gloves, did he, (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else,) of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shew-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner!—Sir John and master mine,

I combat challenge of this latten bilbo:<sup>c</sup>

Word of denial in thy labras<sup>d</sup> here;

Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest!

Slen. By these gloves, then 't was he.

Nym. Be advised, sir, and pass good humours; I will say, "marry trap," with you, if you run the nuthook's humour<sup>e</sup> on me: that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then, he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Eva. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

Bard. And being fap,<sup>f</sup> sir, was, as they say, cashiered; and so conclusions passed the careers.<sup>g</sup>

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 't is no matter: I 'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but an honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I 'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

<sup>g</sup> Careers. In the manège to run a career was to gallop horse violently backwards and forwards.

Got 'udge me, that is a virtuous mind.
I hear all these matters denied, gentlemen;

MISTRESS ANNE PAGE, with wine; MISTRESS
SLENDER and MISTRESS PAGE following.

My daughter, carry the wine in; we'll drink
[Exit ANNE PAGE.]
Heaven! this is mistress Anne Page.

How now, mistress Ford?
Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well or leave, good mistress. [Kissing her.]

Life, bid these gentlemen welcome: Come, hot venison pasty to dinner; come, gentlemen, we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exeunt all but SHAL., SLEN., and EVANS.]
I had my rather than forty shillings, I had my and Sonnets here:—

Enter SIMPLE.

Simple! Where have you been? I must elf, must I? You have not the 'Book of out you, have you?
Book of Riddles'? why, did you not lend it to cake upon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight elmas?

Yes, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A now, coz; marry, this, coz; There is, as 't her, a kind of tender, made afar off by sir
—Do you understand me?

Yes, sir, you shall find me reasonable; if it be that that is reason.

Yes, but understand me.
I do, sir.

I am ear to his motions, master Slender: I will be matter to you, if you be capacity of it.
Yes, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I ardon me; he's a justice of peace in his ple though I stand here.

That is not the question; the question is your marriage.

There's the point, sir.
Yes, is it; the very point of it; to mistress

Yes, if it be so I will marry her, upon any conditions.

Can you affection the woman? Let us know that of your mouth or of your lips;
the lawyers hold that the lips is parcel of the sentence, precisely, can you carry your good
and?

Yes, sir, I will do as it shall become one of reason.

Yes, God's lords and his ladies, you must abide, if you can carry her your desires

at you must: Will you, upon good dowry,

Will do a greater thing than that, upon your side, in any reason.

Yes, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz;
to pleasure you, coz: Can you love the

Will marry her, sir, at your request; but if great love in the beginning, yet Heaven is it upon better acquaintance, when we are have more occasion to know one another:
familiarity will grow more contempt; *
ay, "marry her," I will marry her, that I swayed, and dissolutely.

The follo reads content—the word which Slender
But the poor soul was thinking of his copy-book such familiarity breeds contempt.*

Eva. It is a fery discretion answer; save, the fault is in the 'ort dissolutely: the 'ort is, according to our meaning, resolutely;—his meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.

Re-enter ANNE PAGE.

Shal. Here comes fair mistress Anne:—Would I were young for your sake, mistress Anne!

Anne. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worship's company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's plessed will! I will not be absence at the grace. [Exeunt SHAL. and SIR H. EVANS.]

Anne. Will 't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow: [Exit SIMPLE.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholden to his friend for a man:—I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead: But what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you; I bruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence, three veneyes for a dish of stewed prunes; and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears i' the town.

Anne. I think there are, sir; I heard them talked of.

Slen. I love the sport we'll; but I shall as soon quarrel at it, as any man in England:—You are afraid if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, sir.

Slen. That's meat and drink to me now: I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times; and have taken him by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shrieked at it, that it passed:—but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter PAGE.

Page. Come, gentle master Slender, come; we wait
for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose, sir:
come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Page. Come on, sir.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la: I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome;
you do yourself wrong, indeed, la. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Eva. Go your ways, and ask of <sup>b</sup> Doctor Caius' house,—which is the way: and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry,<sup>c</sup> his washer, and his wringer.

* It passed—it surpassed; or, it passed expression—a common mode of referring to something extraordinary.

<sup>b</sup> Of Dr. Caius' house—ask for Dr. Caius' house—ask which is the way.

Sim. Well, sir.

Eva. Nay, it is petter yet:—give her this letter; for it is a oman that altogether's acquaintance with mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page: I pray you, begone; I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF, HOST, BARDOLPH, NYM, PISTOL, and ROBIN.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter,—

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Cæsar, Keisar, and Pheezar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow: Let me see thee froth, and live; I am at a word; follow. [Exit Host.]

Fal. Bardolph, follow him: a tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered servingman a fresh tapster: Go; adieu.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will thrive. [Exit BARD.]

Pist. O base Hungarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink: Is not the humour conceited? [His mind is not heroic, and there's the humour of it.]

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box; his thefts were too open; his filching was like an unskillful singer,—he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal at a minute's rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal! foh; a fico for the phrase.

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must coney-catch; I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol: Indeed I am in the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Brievely, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife; I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be Englished rightly, is, I am sir John Falstaff's.

Pist. He hath studied her will, and translated her will, out of honesty into English.

Nym. The anchor is deep: Will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes she has all the rule of her husband's purse; he hath a legion of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain; and, "To her, boy," say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife; who even now gave me good eyes too; examined my parts with most judicious eyelids; sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass! Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too: she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequer to me; they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford: we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour letter; I will keep the 'haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold, sirrah, [to ROB.] bear you these letters tightly;<sup>b</sup>

Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores.—

Rogues, hence, avaunt! vanish like hailstones, go;

Trudge, plod away i' the hoof; seek shelter, pack!

Falstaff will learn the honour of the age,

French thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirted page

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and ROBIN.]

Pist. Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gound and fullam holds,

And high and low beguile the rich and poor;<sup>c</sup>

Tester I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,

Base Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations, which be humours of revenge

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin, and her star!

Pist. With wit, or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I:

I will discuss the humour of this love to Ford.

Pist. And I to Page shall eke unfold,

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,

And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will increase

Ford to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of mien is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I would thee; troop on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Dr. Caius's House.

Enter MRS. QUICKLY, SIMPLE, and RUGBY.

Quick. What: John Rugby!—I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, master doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i' faith, and find anybody in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch. [Exit RUGBY.]

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate:<sup>d</sup> his worst fault is that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way; but nobody but has his fault;—but let that pass. Peter Simple you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And master Slender's your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a glover's paring knife?

<sup>c</sup> Gound, fullam, high, and low, were cant terms for false dice. Pistol will have his tester in pouch by cheating at play.

<sup>d</sup> Bate is strife. It is "debate."

No, forsooth: he hath but a little wee face,
the yellow beard; a cane-coloured beard.

A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Ay, forsooth: but he is as tall a man of his age as any is between this and his head; he hath the stature of a warrener.

How say you?—O, I should remember him:
did he not hold up his head, as it were? and strut in the court?

Yes, indeed, does he.

Well, Heaven send Anne Page no worse for-tell master parson Evans I will do what I can for my master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter RUGBY.

Out, alas! here comes my master.

We shall all be shent: * Ran in here, good man; go into this closet. [Shuts SIMPLE in the

He will not stay long.—What, John Rugby!
What John, I say! Go, John, go inquire for thy master: I doubt he be not well, that he comes not —And down, down, adown-a, &c. [Sings.

Enter DOCTOR CAIUS.

Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys;
go, go and vetch me in my closet un boitier verd;
green-a box; Do intend vat I speak? a green-a Ay, forsooth, I 'll fetch it you. I am glad he is in himself: if he had found the young man,

I have been horn-mad. [Aside.

Fe, fe, fe, fe! ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je vais à la cour,—la grande affaire.

Is it this, sir?

Ouy; mette le au mon pocket; Depêche,
—Vere is dat knave Rugby?

What, John Rugby! John!

Here, sir.

You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Fenton; Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my master to the court.

'T is ready, sir, here in the porch.

By my trot, I tarry too long;—Od's me!
'T is doubtful? here is some simples in my closet dat
I brought for the varid I shall leave behind.

Ah me! he 'll find the young man there, and I shall be shent.

O diable, diable! vat is in my closet?—
I 'll larron! [Pulling SIMPLE out.] Rugby, ere.

Good master, be content.

Verefore shall I be content-a?

The young man is an honest man.

Vat shall de honest man do in my closet?
No honest man dat shall come in my closet.

I beseech you, be not so flegmatick; hear the parson: He came of an errand to me from parson

Well.

Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Peace, I pray you.

Peace-a your tongue:—Speak-a your tale.

To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to give a good word to Mrs. Anne Page for my master, to say a good word for marriage.

This is all, indeed, la; but I 'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, bailliez me your rapier: Tarry you a little-a while. [Writes.

I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly you should have heard him so loud and * Shent—roughly handled.

so melancholy.—But notwithstanding, man, I 'll do your master what good I can: and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself:—

Sim. 'T is a great charge to come under one body's hand.

Quick. Are you avised o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late;—but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear; I would have no words of it,) my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that, I know
Anne's mind,—that 's neither here nor there.

Caius. You jack'nape; give-a dis letter to sir Hugh;
by gar, it is a challenge: I vill cut his throat in de park;
and I vill teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make:—you may be gone; it is not good you tarry here:—by gar, I vill cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog. [Exit SIM.

Quick. Alas, he speaks but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter-a for dat:—do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself?—by gar,
I vill kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jarterre to measure our weapon:—by gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: we must give folks leave to prate: What, the good-ger!

Caius. Rugby, come to the court vid me:—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door:—Follow my heels, Rugby.

[Exeunt CAIUS and RUGBY.

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of your own.
No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do: nor can do more than I do with her, I thank Heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who 's within there? ho!

Quick. Who 's there, I trow? Come near the house,
I pray you.

Enter FENTON.

Fent. How now, good woman; how dost thou?

Quick. The better that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise Heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, think'st thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. Troth, sir, all is in His hands above: but notwithstanding, master Fenton, I 'll be sworn on a book, she loves you:—Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fent. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale;—good faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread;—We had an hour's talk of that wart:
—I shall never laugh but in that maid's company!
But, indeed, she is given too much to allieholly and musing: But for you—Well, go to.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day; Hold, there 's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf:
if thou seest her before me, commend me.

Quick. Will I? i' faith, that we will; and I will tell your worship more of the wart, the next time we have confidence; and of other woers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now. [Exit.

Quick. Farewell to your worship.—Truly, an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does:—Out upon 't! what have I forgot? [Exit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Page's House.

Enter MISTRESS PAGE, with a Letter.

Mrs. Page. What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holyday time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see: [Reads.]

"Ask me no reason why I love you; for though love use reason for his precisian, he admits him not for his counsellor:<sup>a</sup> You are not young, no more am I; go to then, there 's sympathy: you are merry, so am I; Hal! hal! then there 's more sympathy: you love sack, and so do I; Would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, mistress Page, (at the least, if the love of soldier can suffice,) that I love thee. I will not say, pity me, 'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me. By me,

Thine own true knight,
By day or night,
Or any kind of light,
With all his might,
For thee to fight,

John Falstaff."

What a Herod of Jewry is this!—O wicked, wicked world!—one that is well nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard<sup>b</sup> picked (with the devil's name) out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company!—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my mirth:—Heaven forgive me! Why, I 'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Enter MISTRESS FORD.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house!

Mrs. Page. And trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I 'll ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs. Ford. Well, I do, then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary: O, mistress Page, give me some counsel!

Mrs. Page. What 's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour!

Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the honour: What is it?—dispense with trifles;—what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What? thou liest!—Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack;<sup>c</sup> and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn daylight:<sup>d</sup>—here, read, read:—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: And yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty; and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness,—that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they do no more

<sup>b</sup> The English of the days of Elizabeth accused the people of the Low Countries with having taught them to drink to excess.

<sup>c</sup> Will hack. James I. would make fifty knights before breakfast; and therefore "these knights will hack"—will become common.

<sup>d</sup> 'Tis burn daylight—we waste our time like those who use by day.

adhere and keep place together than the hundredth psalm to the tune of 'Green Sleeves.'<sup>e</sup> What tempest I throw, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust has melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here 's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, (sur more,) and these are of the second edition: He will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press when he would put us two. I had rather be a giantess, and lie under mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words: What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: It makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I 'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain<sup>b</sup> in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding, call you it? I 'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I; if he come under my hatchet I 'll never to sea again. Let 's be revenged on him: let 's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too; he 's as far from jealousy as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let 's consult together against this greasy knight: Come hither. [They retire.]

Enter FORD, PISTOL, PAGE, and NIM.

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtall<sup>e</sup> dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor. Both young and old, one with another, Ford; He loves the gally-mawfry; Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife?

Pist. With liver burning hot: Prevent, or go thou. Like sir Actæon he, with Ringwood at thy heels:—O, odious is the name.

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say: Farewell.

Take heed; have open eye; for thieves do foot by night. Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds do sing.

I do find it, well!

town commended him for a true man.
'twas a good sensible fellow: Well!

How now, Meg?

[Aside to Mrs. Ford.]

Enter Mrs. QUICKLY.

rd. Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it.
ge. You are come to see my daughter Anne?
Ay, fo' sooth. And I pray, how does good
me?
ge. Go in with us and see; we have an

[Exit Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. FORD, and Mrs. QUICK.]

How now, master Ford?

most a liar, it is said, because the old travellers in e as Marco Polo and Mandeville told incredible a country.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavalero-justice: tell him, bully-rook.
Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between sir
Hugh the Welsh priest and Cains the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host o' the Garter, a word with you.
Host. What say'st thou, my bully-rook?

[They go aside.]
Shal. Will you [to PAGE] go with us to behold it?
My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places: for, believe me, I hear the parson is no jester.
Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brook: only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully; thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook:
It is a merry knight. Will you go on, heers?<sup>a</sup>

Shal. Have with you, mine host.
Page. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.<sup>b</sup>

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more: In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what: 't is the heart, master Page;
't is here, 't is here. I have seen the time with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?
Page. Have with you:—I had rather hear them scold than fight. [Exit Host, SHAL., and PAGE.]

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily: She was in his company at Page's house; and what they made there I know not. Well, I will look further into 't: and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff: If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 't is labour well bestowed.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and PISTOL.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.
Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow, Nym; or else you had looked through the grate, like a geminy of baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends you were good soldiers and tall fellows: and when mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took 't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst not thou share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: Think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you:—go.—A short knife and a throng;—to your manor of Picket-hatch,<sup>d</sup> go.—

<sup>a</sup> Heers. We think that the Host, who is fond of using foreign words which he has picked up from his guests, such as cavalero, Francisco, and varletto, employs the Dutch Heer, or the German Heer.—Sir, Master. Both words are pronounced nearly alike.
He says, "Will you go on, heers!" as he would say, if he had picked up a French word, "Will you go on, monsieurs!" <sup>b</sup> Shallow ridicules the formalities that belong to the use of the rapier, which those of the old school thought a cowardly weapon.

<sup>c</sup> A short knife, &c. A knife to cut purses, and a mou to find them amongst.

in company with "Marsh Lambeth and White Fryers."

You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue!—You stand upon your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of Heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases,<sup>a</sup> and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you?

Pist. I do relent. What would thou more of man?

Enter ROBIN.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter MRS. QUICKLY.

Quick. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, an't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer: What with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman: and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir;—I pray, come a little nearer this ways:—I myself dwell with master doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears;—mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford;—what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, Lord! your worship's a wauton: Well, Heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford;—come, mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it; you have brought her into such a canaries, as 't is wonderful. The best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you, coach after coach,<sup>b</sup> letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly (all musk), and so rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her.—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all: and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners;<sup>c</sup> but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thanks you a thousand times: and she gives

<sup>c</sup> Pensioners might have been put higher than earls by Mistress Quickly, on account of their splendid dress. Shakespeare alludes to this in "A Midsummer-Night's Dream":—

"The cowslips tall her pensioners be,
In their gold coats spots you see,"

you to notify, that her husband will be abs his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may see the picture, she says, that you wot of; ma her husband, will be from home. Alas! woman leads an ill life with him; he's a ve man: she leads a very frampold<sup>a</sup> life with heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven: Woman, commend I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well: But I have an senger to your worship: Mistress Page hath commendations to you too;—and let me te your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wif (I tell you) that will not miss you morning n prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoe'er be the she bade me tell your worship that her husb dom from home; but, she hopes, there wil time. I never knew a woman so dote upo surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the att my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for 't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has I and Page's wife acquainted each other how me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they li little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, ind mistress Page would desire you to send her; page, of all loves:<sup>b</sup> her husband has a mary fection to the little page; and, truly, master honest man. Never a wife in Windsor lead life than she does; do what she will, say wh take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, ris list, all is as she will; and, truly, she deseri if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so then: and, look yo come and go between you both; and, in any a nay-word, that you may know one anothe and the boy never need to understand anythin not good that children should know any w old folks, you know, have discretion, as the know the world.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir John, there's one master Br would fain speak with you, and be acquai you; and hath sent your worship a mornin of sack.<sup>d</sup>

Enter BARDOLPH, with FORD disguised.

Bless you, sir.

And you, sir: Would you speak with me?

I make bold to press with so little preparation you're welcome. What's your will? Give drawer. [Exit BARDOLPH.]

Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much;
 is Brook.

Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance

Good sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge
 I must let you understand I think myself in debt for a lender than you are: the which hath emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion:
 if money go before all ways do lie open.

Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Truth, and I have a bag of money here troubles a will help to bear it, sir John, take all, or bring me of the carriage.

But, I know not how I may deserve to be your speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to await.

Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief —and you have been a man long known to me I had never so good means, as desire, to self acquainted with you. I shall discover a you, wherein I must very much lay open mine affection: but, good sir John, as you have one my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn to the register of your own; that I may pass proof the easier, sith you yourself know how to be such an offender.

Very well, sir; proceed.

There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband is Ford.

Tell, sir.

I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, much on her; followed her with a dotting observance opportunities to meet her; fee'd at occasion that could but niggardly give me her; not only bought many presents to give her, but given largely to many, to know what she would give; briefly, I have pursued her as love and me, which hath been on the wing of all.

But whatsoever I have merited, either in or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have re-ceiv'd; unless experience be a jewel; that I have at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;

so that that flies, and flying what pursues."

Have you received no promise of satisfaction
 she?

Never.

Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Never.

What quality was your love then?

Like a fair house built on another man's so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking where I erected it.

What purpose have you unfolded this to me?

When I have told you that I have told you
 I say, that, though she appear honest to me, in places, she enlargeth her mirth so far that would construction made of her. Now, sir

John, here is the heart of my purpose: You are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtlike, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it:—There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife:
 use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy?
 Methinks, you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift! she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself; she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves: I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too too strongly embattled against me: What say you to't, sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, sir John, you shall want none.

Fal. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook, you shall want none. I shall be with her, (I may tell you,) by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth.
 Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blessed in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not:—yet I wrong him to call him poor; they say the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir; that you might avoid him if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns: master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night:—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, master Brook, shalt know him for knave and cuckold:—come to me
 soon at night.

[Exit.]

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!—
 My heart is ready to crack with impatience.—Who says, this is improvident jealousy? My wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this?—See the hell of having a false woman! My bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names!—Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends! but cuckold! witolcuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass! he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous; I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk

my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised for my jealousy!—Eleven o'clock the hour.—I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Field near Windsor.

Enter CAIUS and RUGBY.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is the clock, Jack?

Rug. 'T is past the hour, sir, that sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is no come; by gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew your worship would kill him if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead so as I will kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I will tell you how I will kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence.

Caius. Villainy, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here 's company.

Enter Host, SHALLOW, SLENDER, and PAGE.

Host. 'Bless thee, bully doctor.

Shal. Save you, master doctor Caius.

Page. Now, good master doctor.

Slen. Give you good-morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for?

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? is he dead, my Francisco? ha, bully! What says my Æsculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder? ha! is he dead, bully Stale? is he dead?

Caius. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of the world; he is not show his face.

Page. Master Shallow, you have yours great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, master Page, though I no and of the peace, if I see a sword out my fin to make one: though we are justices, and do churchmen, master Page, we have some youth in us; we are the sons of women, mast

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Field near Frogmore.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Eva. I pray you now, good master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for master Caius, that calls himself doctor of physic?

Sim. Marry, sir, the pittie-ward,<sup>b</sup> the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.<sup>a</sup> Castilian. The Host ridicules the Doctor through his ignorance of English. He is a "heart of elder," the elder being filled with soft pith; he is a Castilian, that name being an obvious designation for the Spaniards.<sup>b</sup> Pittie-ward is of the same import as petty-ward. A part of Castle is still called the lancet ward, and in the same way our part might have been known as the cock-ward.

Eva. I most feheemently desire you, you look that way.

Sim. I will, sir.

Eva. Pless my soul! how full of cholers I trempling of mind!—I shall be glad if he ceived me:—how melancholies I am! I will urinals about his knave's costard, when I opportunities for the 'ork—pless my soul!

 found in Shakespeare's Sonnets printed by Jaggard in 1619, and is also to be found in 'England's Helicon,' 1600.

Eva. As I am a christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed; I 'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Guallia and Gaul; French and Welsh; soul-curer and body-curer.

Caius. Ay, dat is very good! excellent!

Host. Peace, I say; hear mine host of the Garter.
 Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions and the motions. Shall I lose my parson? my priest? my sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs.—Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so.—Give me thy hand, celestial; so.—Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places; your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue.—Come, lay their swords to pawn:—Follow me, lad of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad host:—Follow, gentlemen,
 follow.

Slen. O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt SHAL., SLEN., PAGE, and Host.]

Caius. Ha! do I perceive dat? have you make-a

Eva. This is well; he has made us his voutingstog.—I desire you that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this same scall,<sup>a</sup> scurvy, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart; he promise to too.

Eva. Well, I will smite his noddles:—Pray you, follow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter MISTRESS PAGE and ROBIN.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader:
 Whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O you are a flattering boy; now, I see you 'll be a courtier.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Well met, mistress Page: Whither go you?

Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife; Is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company. I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weathercock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of: What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on 's name.—
 There is such a league between my good man and he!
 —Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir:—I am sick, till I see her. [Exeunt MRS. PAGE and ROBIN.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score. He pieces out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion and advantage: and now she 's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind!—and Falstaff's boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Actæon; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim. [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search; There I shall find Falstaff: I shall be rather praised for this than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, SLENDER, Host, SIR HUGH EVANS, CAIUS, and RUGBY.

Shal., Page, &c. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home; and, I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slen. And so must I, sir; we have appointed to dine with mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slen. I hope I have your good will, father Page.

Page. You have, master Slender; I stand wholly for you:—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love-a me: my nurb-a Quickly tell me so mush.

Host. What say you to young master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May: he will carry 't, he will carry 't; 't is in his buttons;<sup>a</sup> he will carry 't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having; he kept company with the mild prince and Poin; he is of too high a region, he knows too much. No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster.—Master doctor, you shall go;—so shall you, master Page;—and you, sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:—we shall have the freer wooing at master Page's. [Exeunt SHAL. and SLEN.]

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

[Exit RUGBY.]

Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. [Exit Host.]

Ford. [Aside.] I think I shall drink in pipe-wine<sup>b</sup> first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentles?

All. Have with you, to see this monster. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter MRS. FORD and MRS. PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! What, Robert!

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant:—What, Robin, I say!

Enter Servants, with a basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

<sup>a</sup> A very similar phrase is common in the midland counties: "It does not lie in your breeches"—meaning it is not within your compass:—" 't is in his buttons " therefore means,—he 's the man to do it—his buttons hold the man.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; w brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-ho when I suddenly call you, come forth, and any pause or staggering) take this basket, shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all carry it among the whitsters<sup>c</sup> in Datchet n there empty it in the muddy ditch, close Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over lack no direction: Be gone, and come when called. [Exeunt]

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

Enter ROBIN.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyas-musket news with you?

Rob. My master, sir John, is come in at y door, mistress Ford; and requests your comma

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-lent,<sup>d</sup> have true to us?

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this se thine shall be a tailor to thee, and shall ma new doublet and hose. I'll go hide me.

Mrs. Ford. Do so:—Go tell thy master I s Mistress Page, remember you your cue. [Exi]

Mrs. Ford. What John, Robert, John! [Exit ROBIN. Re-enter Servants.] Go take up these clothes here, quickly; where 's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble; carry them to the laundress in Datchet mead; quickly, come.

Enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why, then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it.—How now? whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck? Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season too, it shall appear. [Exit Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox:—Let me stop this way first:—so, now uncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, master Page.—Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.]

Eva. This is fery fantastical humours and jealousies.
Caius. By gar, 't is no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exit EVANS, PAGE, and CAIUS.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that: And we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We will do it; let him be sent for tomorrow eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. You use me well, master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen.

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any pody in the house, and in the

Caius. By gar, nor I too; dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your distemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'T is my fault, master Page: I suffer for it.

Eva. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'omans as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 't is an honest woman.

Ford. Well;—I promised you a dinner:—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come, mistress Page; I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let 's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we 'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after, we 'll a-birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush: Shall it be so?

Ford. Anything.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If there be one or two, I shall make-a de tird.

Ford. Pray you go, master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave; to have his gibes and his mockeries. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Page's House.

Enter FENTON and MISTRESS ANNE PAGE.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself. He doth object, I am too great of birth; And that, my state being gall'd with my expense, I seek to heal it only by his wealth: Besides these, other bars he lays before me,—My riots past, my wild societies; And tells me, 't is a thing impossible I should love thee, but as a property.

Anne. May be, he tells you true.

Fent. No, Heaven so speed me in my time to come! Albeit, I will confess thy father's wealth Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne: Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags; And 't is the very riches of thyself That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle master Fenton, Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir: If opportunity and humblest suit Cannot attain it, why then—Hark you hither.

[They converse apart.]

Enter SHALLOW, SLENDER, and MRS. QUICKLY.

Shal. Break their talk, mistress Quickly; my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I 'll make a shaft or a bolt on 't: slid, 't is but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismayed.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that,—but that I am afraid.

Quick. Hark ye; master Slender would speak a word with you.

Anne. I come to him.—This is my father's choice. O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a-year!

[Aside.]

Quick. And how does good master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hadst a father!

Slen. I had a father, mistress Anne;—my uncle can tell you good jests of him:—Pray you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Glostershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail,<sup>a</sup> under the degree of a 'squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne. Good master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I 'll leave you.

Anne. Now, master Slender.

Slen. Now, good mistress Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? 'od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest, indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank Heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give Heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, master Slender, what would you wish me?

Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little do nothing with you: Your father, and my uncle, have made motions: if it be my luck, so; if not, happy may be his dole! They can tell you how things go better than I can: You may ask your father; here he comes.

Page. Now, master Slender:—Love him, daughter Anne.—

Why, how now! what does master Fenton here?

You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house:

I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fent. Nay, master Page, be not impatient.

Mrs. Page. Good master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton.—Come, master Shallow; come, son Slender, in:—Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton.

[Exeunt PAGE, SHAL., and SLEN.]

Quick. Speak to mistress Page.

Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love your daughter

In such a righteous fashion as I do, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners, I must advance the colours of my love, And not retire: Let me have your good will.

Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond fool.

Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.

Quick. That's my master, master doctor.

Anne. Alas, I had rather be set quick i' the earth, And bowl'd to death with turnips.<sup>b</sup>

Mrs. Page. Come, trouble not yourself: Good master Fenton,

I will not be your friend, nor enemy:

My daughter will I question how she loves you,

And as I find her, so am I affected;

Till then, farewell, sir:—She must needs go in;

Her father will be angry. [Ex. MRS. PAGE and ANNE.]

Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress: farewell, Nan.

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake; awake, master Ford; there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. This 't is to be married! this 't is to have linen and buck-baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself: I will now take the lecher; he is at hand; he cannot scape me; 't is impossible he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a box; but, lest the devil that guides him should find him, I will search impossible places. Thou art I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not make me tame: If I have horns to make me so, let the proverb go with me; I 'll be horned.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter MRS. PAGE, MRS. QUICKLY, and WILLIAM.

Mrs. Page. Is he at master Ford's already, think'st thou?

Quick. Sure he is by this; or will be presently; but truly he is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I 'll be with her by-and-by; I 'll but bring my young man here to school. Look, where his master comes; 't is a playing day, I see.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS.

How now, sir Hugh? no school to-day?

Eva. No; master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book. I pray you, ask him some questions in his accident.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Eva. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more; because they say, od's nouns.

Eva. Peace your tattlings. What is fair, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Polecats! there are fairer things than polecats, sure.

Eva. You are a very simplicity 'oman; I pray you, peace. What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.

Eva. And what is a stone, William?

Will. A pebble.

Eva. No, it is lapis; I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Eva. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog;—pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus: Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, child; Accusativo, hing, hang, hog.

Quick. Hang hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles, 'oman. What is the locative case, William?

Will. O—vocativo, O.

Eva. Remember, William, locative is, caret.

Quick. And that 's a good root.

Eva. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace.

Eva. What is your genitive case plural, V

Will. Genitive case?

Eva. Ay.

Will. Genitive,—horum, harum, horum.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Eva. For shame, 'oman.

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such teaches him to hick and to hack, which they are enough of themselves, and to call horum:—fie

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou standings for thy cases, and the numbers of ders? Thou art as foolish christian creatures as desires.

Mrs. Page. Prithee, hold thy peace.

Eva. Show me now, William, some decl your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is qui, quæ, quod; if you forget y your quæ, and your quods, you must be pre your ways, and play, go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I was.

Eva. He is a good sprag<sup>a</sup> memory. Fare tress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh] Get you home, boy.—Come, we stay too long.

SCENE II.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter FALSTAFF and MRS. FORD.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eate sufferance: I see you are obsequious in your I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not tress Ford, in the simple office of love, but i accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of are you sure of your husband now?

Enter MRS. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart? who 's beside yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own peop

Mrs. Page. Indeed?

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly;—Speak louder.

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have not

Of none but him; and swears he was the last time he searched for him, in a street to my husband he is now here; and him and the rest of their company from make another experiment of his suspicion: glad the knight is not here: now he will search for him.

How near is he, mistress Page?
Hard by; at street end; he will be here

I am undone!—the knight is here.
Why, then you are utterly shamed, and mad man. What a woman are you!—I am, away with him; better shame than might slip away ere he came. But what

How might we disguise him?

Go, go, sweet sir John: mistress Page

Quick, quick; we'll come dress you in the gown the while. [Exit FAL.]

But is my husband coming?
Ay, in good sadness is he; and talks of howsoever he hath had intelligence.

We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men

Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's like the witch of Brentford.

I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up, I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do,

Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:

We do not act that often jest and laugh;

'T is old but true, Still swine eat all the draft. [Exit.]

Re-enter Mrs. Ford, with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders; your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, despatch. [Exit.]

1 Serv. Come, come, take it up.

2 Serv. Pray Heaven it be not full of knight again.*

1 Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter FORD, PAGE, SHALLOW, CAIUS, and SIR
HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again?—Set down the basket, villain:—Somebody call my wife:—Youth in a basket!<sup>b</sup>—O, you panderly rascals! there's a knot a ging,<sup>c</sup> a pack, a conspiracy against me: Now shall the devil be shamed. What! wife, I say!—Come, come forth. Behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a mad dog!
Shal. Indeed, master Ford, this is not well; indeed.

Enter Mrs. Ford.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—Come hither, mistress Ford; mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband!—I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me of any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen-face; hold it out.—Come forth, sirrah. [Pulls the clothes out of the basket.]

Page. This passes!

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed? let the clothes
alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Eva. 'T is unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why?

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket:
Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable: Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, master Ford;
this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor nowhere else, but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: If I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity, let me for ever be your table-sport; let them say of me,
As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman. Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

it most vividly presents the incoherent and straggling mode in which a mind overwrought by passion expresses its thoughts.

Mrs. Ford. What ha, mistress Page! come you, and the old woman, down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that?

Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing.—Come down, you witch, you hag you; come down, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband;—good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter FALSTAFF in women's clothes, led by Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. Come, mother Prat, come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll prat her;—Out of my door, you witch, [beats him] you rag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. [Exit FALSTAFF.]

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it;—'T is a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Eva. By yea and no, I think, the 'oman is a witch indeed; I like not when a 'oman has a great beard; I spy a great beard under her muffler.<sup>a</sup>

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow; see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further: Come, gentlemen. [Exit PAGE, FORD, SHAL., and EVA.]

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed, and hung o'er the altar; it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him; if the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.<sup>b</sup>

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly shamed; and, methinks, there would be no period to the jest,<sup>c</sup> should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then, shape it: I would not have things cool. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and BARDOLPH.

Host. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be comes so secretly?

I hear not of him in the court: Let me speak with the gentlemen; they speak English?

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay; I'll sauce them: they have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them: Come. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter PAGE, FORD, Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. FORD, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Eva. 'T is one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at a instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife: Henceforth do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour stand, In him that was of late an heretic, As firm as faith.

Page. 'T is well, 't is well; no more:

Be not as extreme in submission As in offence;

But let our plot go forward: let our wives

Yet once again, to make us public sport,

Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,

Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they speak of.

Page. How! to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight? Fie, fie; he'll never come.

Eva. You say, he has been thrown in the river; and has been grievously peaten, as an old 'oman; methinks, there should be terrors in him that he should not come; methinks, his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes,

And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne

the hunter,

Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,

Doth all the winter-time, at still midnight,

Walk round about an oak, with great rag'd horns;

And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle;

And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain

In a most hideous and dreadful manner:

You have heard of such a spirit; and well you know,

The superstitious idle-headed old

Receiv'd, and did deliver to our age,

This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak:

But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;

That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,

[Disguis'd like Herne, with huge horns on his head.]

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come.

And in this shape: When you have brought him thither,

What shall be done with him? what is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:

Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,

And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress

Like urchins, ouphes,<sup>d</sup> and fairies, green and white,

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,

And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden,

<sup>d</sup> Takes—seizes with disease. <sup>e</sup> Ouphes—goblins.

[she, and I, are newly met, som forth a sawpit rush at once

great amazement will fly:
sem all encircle him about,
like, to-pinch<sup>b</sup> the unclean knight;

sacred paths he dares to tread,

And till he tell the truth,
gowned fairies pinch him sound,
him with their tapers.

The truth being known,
present ourselves; dis-horn the spirit,

The children must will teach the children their behaviours; and like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight

her.

That will be excellent. I 'll go buy them

My Nan shall be the queen of all the ladies,
red in a robe of white.

That silk will I go buy!—and in that time or Slender steal my Nan away, [Aside.

I 'll to him again, in name of Brook;

Fear not you that: Go, get us properties,
ag for our fairies.

It is admirable pleasures, and knaveries. [Exit PAGE, FORD, and EVA.

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and SIMPLE.

What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-k, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.
arry, sir, I come to speak with sir John Fal-staff Slender.

Here 's his chamber, his house, his castle, his ed, and truckle-bed; 't is painted about tory of the prodigal, fresh and new: Go, call; he 'll speak like an Anthropophaginian.
Knock, I say.

Here 's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up

I: I come to speak with her, indeed.

A fat woman! the knight may be robbed:
Bully knight! Bully sir John! speak from military: Art thou there? it is thine host,
man, call.

How now, mine host?

Here 's a Bohemian-Tartar carries the coming

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me; but she 's gone.

Sim. Pray you, sir, was 't not the wise woman<sup>a</sup> of Brentford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell: What would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, my master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go thorough the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says that the very same man that beguiled master Slender of his chain cozened him of it.

Sim. I would I could have spoken with the woman herself: I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.

Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about mistress Anne Page; to know if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'T is, 't is his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her,—or no: Go; say, the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, sir Tike; who more bold?

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. [Exit SIM.

Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, sir John:
Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life; and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage! mere cozenage.

Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varletto.

Bard. Run away with the cozeners: for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire; and set spurs and away, like three German devils, three doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain:
do not say they be fled; Germans are honest men.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS.

Eva. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Eva. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three couzin Germans, that has cozened all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money.
I tell you for good-will, look you: you are wise, and full of gibes and vlouting-stogs; and 't is not convenient you should be cozened: Fare you well. [Exit.

Enter DR. CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mine host de Jarterre?

Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity, and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat: But it is tell-a me,

[I know what I have to do: Adieu.

MRS. PAGE. Fare you well, sir. [Exit CAIUS.] My ill not rejoice so much at the abuse of Fal-staff; will chafe at the doctor's marrying my but 't is no matter; better a little chiding than a deal of heartbreak.

MRS. FORD. Where is Nan now, and her troop of the Welsh devil, Hugh?

MRS. PAGE. They are all couched in a pit hard by the, with obscured lights; which, at the very Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once the night.

MRS. FORD. That cannot choose but amaze him.

MRS. PAGE. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked;
sawd, he will every way be mocked.

MRS. FORD. We 'll betray him finely.

MRS. PAGE. Against such lewdsters, and their lechery,

betray them do no treachery.

MRS. FORD. The hour draws on. To the oak, to the [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Windsor Park.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and Fairies.

SIR HUGH EVANS. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your pact, I pray you; follow me into the pit;
I give the watch-ords, do as I bid you;
as; trib, trib. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Another part of the Park.

ALSTAFF, disguised with a buck's head on.

The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; the news on: Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy love set on thy horns. O powerful love! that, specta, makes a beast a man; in some other, beast. You were also, Jupiter, a swan, for Leda.—O, omnipotent love! how near the is the complexion of a goose!—A fault done (form of a beast;—O Jove, a beastly fault!
another fault in the semblance of a fowl;
I Jove; a foul fault. When gods have hot it shall poor men do? For me, I am here a stag; and the fattest, I think, in the forest:
I could not-time, Jove, or who can blame me to follow? Who comes here? my doe?

Enter MRS. FORD and MRS. PAGE.

MRS. FORD. Sir John? art thou there, my deer? my doe?

MRS. PAGE. I do with the black scut?—Let the sky rain let it thunder to the tune of 'Green Sleeves';

hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here.

[Embracing her.
MRS. FORD. Mistress Page is come with me, sweetheart.

FALSTAFF. Divide me like a bribe-buck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman? ha! Speak I like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience;
he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome!

[Noise within.

MRS. PAGE. Alas! what noise!

MRS. FORD. Heaven forgive our sins!

FALSTAFF. What should this be?

MRS. FORD. [Away, away! [They run off.

MRS. PAGE. [Away, away!

FALSTAFF. I think the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS, like a satyr; MRS. QUICKLY and PISTOL; ANNE PAGE, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, dressed like fairies, with waxen tapers on their heads.

ANNE PAGE. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white,
You moonshine revellers, and shades of night,
You orphan-heirs of fixed destiny,
Attend your office and your quality.

CRICKET. Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy oyes.<sup>a</sup>

PISTOL. Elves, list your names; silence, you airy toys.

CRICKET. To Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap:

Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths unswept,

There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry:

Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttery.

FALSTAFF. They are fairies; he that speaks to them shall
die:

I 'll wink and cough: no man their works must eye.

[Lies down upon his face.

EVA. Where's Peda?—Go you, and where you find a maid,

That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said,

Raise up the organs of her fantasy,<sup>d</sup>

Sleep she as sound as careless infancy;

But those as sleep and think not on their sins,

Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins

ANNE PAGE. About, about;

Search Windsor-castle, elves, within and out:

Strew good luck, ouphes, on every sacred room;

That it may stand till the perpetual doom,

In state as wholesome, as in state 't is fit;

Worthy the owner, and the owner it.

The several chairs of order look you scour

With juice of balm, and every precious flower:

Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,

With loyal blazon, evermore be bless'd!

And nightly, meadow-fairies, look, you sing,

Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring:

The expressure that it bears, green let it be,

More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;

And, Hony soit qui mal y pense,<sup>e</sup> write,

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white:

Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,

Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knees:

Fairies use flowers for their charactery.

<sup>a</sup> Do I understand woodman's craft—the hunter's art.

In all modern editions they are very inappropriately given to Quickly. We have traced the origin of this mistake, which is perfectly evident. (See Pictorial and Library editions.)

<sup>c</sup> The o-yes, the eyes, of the crier of a proclamation, was clearly a monosyllable, rhyming to eyes.

<sup>e</sup> Pense is a dissyllable—a proof that Shakspeare knew the distinction between French verse and prose.

Away; disperse; But till 't is one o'clock,
Our dance of custom, round about the oak
Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set:

And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree.
But, stay: I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy!
Lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pist. Vild worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Anne. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end.
If he be chaste, the flame will back descend,
And turn him to no pain; but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire?

[They burn him with their tapers.]

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Anne. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!
About him, fairies; sing a scornful rhyme;
And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

SONG.

Fie on sinful fantasy!
Fie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart: whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
Pinch him for his villainy;

Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about.
Till candles, and starlight, and moonshine be out.

[During this song the fairies pinch FALSTAFF. DOCTOR CAIUS comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; SLENDER another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and FENTON comes, and steals away Mrs. ANNE PAGE. A noise of hunting is made within. All the fairies run away. FALSTAFF pulls off his buck's head, and rises.]

Enter PAGE, FORD, MRS. PAGE, and MRS. FORD.
They lay hold on him.

Page. Nay, do not fly; I think, we have watch'd you
now:

Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs. Page. I pray you, come; hold up the jest no higher:

Now, good sir John, how like you Windsor wives?
See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes
Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, master Brook: And, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies: and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 't is upon ill employment.

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve God, and leave your and fairies will not pinse you.

Well said, fairy Hugh.

And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'erreaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? Shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'T is time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and putter! have I lived to stand at the taunts of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

Mrs. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings, and starings, pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel: ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me; use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we 'll bring you to Windsor, to one master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife that now laughs at thee: Tell her master
Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. Doctors doubt that; if Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius' wife. [Aside.]

Enter SLENDER.

Slender. Who, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son! how now? how now, son? have you despatched?

Slender. Despatched!—I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on't; would I were hanged, la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy. If it had not been i' the church, I would have swung him, or he should have swung me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page would I might never stir, and 't is a post-master's boy.

Page. Upon my life then you took the wrong.

Slender. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slender. I went to her in white, and cried miss, and she cried budget, as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry; I know your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened; I ha' married un garçon, a boy; un poisson.

is, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gas, I am not.

17. Page. Why, did you take her in green?

18. Ay, he gas, and 't is a boy; he gas, I'll all Windsor. [Exit CALIX.

19. This is strange: Who hath got the right 't?

20. My heart misgives me: Here comes master not.

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

21. Now, master Fenton?

22. Pardon, good father! good, my mother, pardon!

23. Now, mistress? how chance you went not with master Slender?

24. Page. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

25. You do amaze her: Hear the truth of it.

26. I would have married her most shamefully,

27. so there was no proportion held in love.

28. 'tush is, she and I, long since contracted,

29. now so sure that nothing can dissolve us.

30. 't is holy that she hath committed:

And this doctor takes the name of that.

31. Of cuckoldry, or unchastity.

32. Since then, she hath committed and done.

33. A thousand wrongs, which cannot mend.

34. Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

35. Ford. Should not Anne 't: here is my remedy:

36. In love, the heavens themselves do punish the sinner:

37. Money buys honour, and wives are sold by force.

38. Fal. I am glad, though you have not a special

39. stand to strike at me, that your wives have pleased.

40. Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton. Heaven give

41. thee joy.

42. What cannot be achieved 't must be contented 't.

43. Fal. When eight-days will 't give us of our own

44. time 't.

45. Mrs. Page. Well, I will make no further: master

46. Fenton.

47. Heaven give you early, merry merry days!

48. Good husband, let us every one go home.

49. And laugh this sport over by a country fire;

50. Sir John and all.

51. Ford. Let it be so:—Sir John.

52. To master Brook you yet shall hold your word:

53. For he, to-night, shall be with mistress Ford. [Exeunt

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS comedy was first printed in the folio edition of 1623. The text is divided into acts and scenes; and the order of these has been undisturbed in the modern editions. With the exception of a few manifest typographical errors, the original copy is remarkably correct.

It was formerly supposed that this charming comedy was written by Shakspeare late in life. But there was found in the British Museum, in 1828, a little manuscript diary of a student of the Middle Temple, extending from 1601 to 1603, which leaves no doubt that the play was publicly acted at the Candlemas feast of the Middle Temple in 1602; and it belongs, therefore, to the first year of the seventeenth century, or the last of the sixteenth; for it is not found in the list of Meres, in 1598.

It is scarcely necessary to enter into any analysis of the plot of this delightful comedy, or attempt any dissection of its characters, for the purpose of opening to the reader new sources of enjoyment. It is impossible, we think, for one of ordinary sensibility to read through the first act without yielding himself up to the genial temper in which the entire play is written. "The sunshine of the breast" spreads its rich purple light over the whole champain, and penetrates into every thicket and every dingle. From the first line to the last—from the Duke's

"That strain again;—it had a dying fall,"
to the Clown's

"With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,"
there is not a thought, nor a situation, that is not calculated to call forth pleasurable feelings. The love-melancholy of the Duke is a luxurious abandonment to one pervading impression—not a fierce and hopeless contest with one overmastering passion. It delights to lie "canopied with bowers,"—to listen to "old and antique" songs, which dally with its "innocence,"—to be "full of shapes," and "high fantastical." The love of Viola is the sweetest and tenderest emotion that ever informed the heart of the purest and most graceful of beings with a spirit almost divine. Perhaps in the whole range of Shakspeare's poetry there is nothing which comes more unbidden into the mind, and always in connexion with some image of the ethereal beauty of the utterer, than Viola's "She never told her love." The love of Olivia, wilful as it is, is not in the slightest degree repulsive. With the old stories before him, nothing but the refined delicacy of Shakspeare's conception of the female character could have redeemed Olivia from approaching to the anti-feminine. But as it is, we pity her, and we rejoice with her. These are what may be called the serious characters, because they are the vehicles for what we emphatically call the poetry of the play. But the comic characters are to us equally poetical—that is, they appear to us not mere copies of the representatives of temporary or individual follies, but embodyings of the universal comic, as true and as fresh to-day as they were two centuries and a half ago. Malvolio is to our minds as poetical as Don Quixote; and we are by no means sure that Shakspeare meant the poor cross-gartered steward only to be laughed at, any more than Cervantes did the knight of the rueful countenance. He meant us to pity him, as Olivia and the Duke pitied him; for, in truth, the delusion by which Malvolio was wrecked, only passed out of the romance into the comic through the manifestation of the vanity of the character in reference to his situation. But if we laugh at Malvolio we are not to laugh ill-naturedly for the poet has conducted all the mischief against him in a spirit in which there is no real malice at the bottom of the fun. Sir Toby is a most genuine character,—one given to strong potations and boisterous merriment but with a humour about him perfectly irresistible. His abandon to the instant opportunity of laughing and with others is something so thoroughly English, that we are not surprised the poet gave him an English name. And like all genuine humorists Sir Toby must have his butt. What a trio is presented in the glorious scene of the second act, where the two Knights and the Clown "make the welkin dance;"—the humorist, the fool, and the philosopher;—for Sir Andrew is the fool, and the Clown is the philosopher! We hold the Clown's epilogue song to be the most philosophical Clown's song upon record; and a treatise might be written upon its wisdom. It is the history of a fall from the condition of "a little tiny boy," through "man's estate," to decaying age—"when I came into my bed;" and the conclusion is, that what is true of the individual is true of the species, and what was of yesterday was of generations long passed away—for "A great while ago the world began."

Stevens says this "nonsensical ditty" is utterly unconnected with the subject of the comedy. We think he is mistaken.

SCENE,—A CITY IN ILLYRIA; AND THE SEA-COAST NEAR IT.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, Lords; Musicians attending.

Music. If music be the food of love, play on,
 Give way to this excess of joy; that, surfeiting,
 Appetite may sicken, and so die.
 Swain again?—it had a dying fall:
 O'er my ear like the sweet sound,
 That breathes upon a bank of violets,
 Stealing and giving odour.—Enough; no more;
 'Tis not so sweet now as it was before.
 O fit of love, how quick and fresh art thou!
 'Tis notwithstanding thy capacity
 Of emptiness, which oft thyself can fill;
 As the fresh wind, which follows the old form,
 And still the senses, that have their abatement,
 Keenly do revivify their former state.
 O, that my tongue could tell the love I bear,
 Or that my heart were like a high-arch'd roof,
 To cover this idol's fall!—O, that my tongue
 Could tell the love I bear, or that my heart
 Were like a high-arch'd roof, to cover this idol's fall!

Enter the sweet sound. To those who are familiar with the sweet sound.

"O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
 That吻 the world's best wood, which is the reading of all
 My miseries, will at first appear strange and startling.
 Shakespeare has nowhere made the south an odour-breathing
 His other representations are directly contrary. In 'As You Like It,' Hamlet says,
 You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her
 Like foggy swain, puffing with wind and ruts?
 Answer as Juliet: 'we have the " dew-dropping south;" in William: "The south-f-y rot him."

Duke.

Cur.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:
 O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
 (Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence,
 That instant was I turn'd into a hart;
 And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
 E'er since pursue me.—How now? what news from her?

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
 But from her handmaid do return this answer:
 The element itself, till seven years heat,
 Shall not behold her face at ample view;
 But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
 And water once a day her chamber round
 With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
 A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
 And lasting, in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O, she that bath a heart of that fine frame,
 To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
 How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
 Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else
 That live in her! when liver, brain, and heart,
 Those sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd,
 (Her sweet perfections,) with one self king!—
 Away before me to sweet beds of flowers;
 Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers.

[Exeunt

* Heat—heated.

SCENE II.—The Sea-coast.Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.Vio. What country, friends, is this?Cap. This is Illyria, lady.Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Elysium.

Perchance he is not drown'd:—What think you, sailors?

Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were sav'd.Vio. O my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be.Cap. True, madam; and to comfort you with chance,

Assure yourself, after our ship did split,

When you, and those poor number sav'd with you,

Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,

Most provident in peril, bind himself

(Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)

To a strong mast, that liv'd upon the sea;

Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,

I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves,

So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there 's gold:

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,

Whereto thy speech serves for authority,

The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,
Not three hours' travel from this very place.Vio. Who governs here?Cap. A noble duke, in nature as in name.Vio. What is his name?Cap. Orsino.Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.Cap. And so is now, or was so very late:

For but a month ago I went from hence;

And then 't was fresh in murmur, (as, you know,

What great ones do, the less will prattle of,)

That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What 's she?Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the sight
And company of men.Vio. O, that I serv'd that lady:

And might not be deliver'd to the world,

Till I had made mine own occasion mellow

What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;

And though that nature with a beauteous wall

Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee

I will believe thou hast a mind that suits

With this thy fair and outward character.

I prithee, and I 'll pay thee bounteously,

Conceal me what I am; and be my aid

For such disguise as, haply, shall become

The form of my intent. I 'll serve this duke;

Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him,

It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,

And speak to him in many sorts of music,

That will allow me very worth his service.

What else may hap, to time I will commit;

Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I 'll be;

When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see!

Vio. I thank thee: Lead me on. [Exeunt.]SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and MARIA.Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take thedeath of her brother thus? I am sure care 's an enemy to life.Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must come a earlier o' nights; your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.Sir To. Confine? I 'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?Mar. Ay, he.Sir To. He 's as tall<sup>a</sup> a man as any 's in Illyria.Mar. What 's that to the purpose?Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.Mar. Ay, but he 'll have but a year in all these ducats; he 's a very fool, and a prodigal.Sir To. Fie, that you 'll say so! he plays o' the violde-gamboys,<sup>b</sup> and speaks three or four languages wad for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.Mar. He hath, indeed, almost natural: for besides that he 's a fool, he 's a great quarreller; and but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 't is thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels and sub-tractors that say so of him. Who are they?Mar. They that add, moreover, he 's drunk nightly in your company.Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece: I 'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat; and drink in Illyria. He 's a coward, and a coxswain, that will not drink to my niece till his brains turn o'
the toe like a parish-top. What, wench? Castilianvulgo; for here comes sir Andrew Ague-face.Enter SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! how now, sir Toby Belch!Sir To. Sweet sir Andrew!Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew*Mar.* And you too, sir.Sir To. Accost, sir Andrew, accost.Sir And. What 's that?Sir To. My niece's chambermaid.Sir And. Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.Mar. My name is Mary, sir.Sir And. Good mistress Mary Accost,—Sir To. You mistake, knight; accost is, front her, board her,<sup>c</sup> woo her, assail her.Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.Sir To. An thou let part so, sir Andrew, 'would tis-mightst never draw sword again.Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here my hand.Mar. Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you let your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink.<sup>a</sup> Tall—stout, bold.<sup>b</sup> Viol-de-gamboys—a kind of violoncello.<sup>c</sup> Board her—address her.

Wherefore, sweetheart? want's your meta-dry, sir.

Why, I think so; I am not such an ass but my hand dry. But what's your jest?

My jest, sir.

Are you full of them?

Sir; I have them at my fingers' ends:

let go your hand I am barren. [Ex. MAR.]

Knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary:

see thee so put down?

Never in your life, I think; unless you put me down: Methinks sometimes I have more than a christian, or an ordinary man has:

eat eater of beef, and I believe that does

it.

Is that a question.

An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll tomorrow, sir Toby.

Surquoy, my dear knight?

What is surquoy? do or not do? I would know that time in the tongues that I have in me, and bear-baiting: O, had I but follow'd

men hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

Why, would that have mended my hair?

Is that a question; for thou see'st it will not curl up.

But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff;

see a housewife take thee between her legs,

and

Faith, I'll home to-morrow, sir Toby;

she'll not be seen; or, if she be, it's four to one against me: the count himself, here hard by,

will

see 'll none o' the count; she'll not match grave, neither in estate, years, nor wit;

and I her swear it. Tut, there's life in 't,

and

I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow of no mind i' the world; I delight in masques and sometimes altogether.

Art thou good at these kickshaws, knight?

As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be,

green of my betters; and yet I will not compare myself to an old man.

What is thy excellence in a galliard,

and

Faith, I can cut a caper.

And I can cut the mutton to 't.

And, I think, I have the back-trick, simply any man in Illyria.

Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore hide a curtain before them? are they like to be a mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou hide in a galliard,<sup>a</sup> and come home in a

My very walk should be a jig; I would not worded. Pope changed this to flame coloured.

and to read dun stock-coloured; for it is evident that dun were written as pronounced rapidly,

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper: ha! higher: ha, ha!—excellent! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Duke's Palace

Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA in man's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced; he hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love:
Is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario,

Thou know'st no less but all; I have unclasp'd

To thee the book even of my secret soul:

Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her;

Be not denied access, stand at her doors,

And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow,

Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord,

If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow

As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds,

Rather than make unprofitful return.

Vio. Say, I do speak with her, my lord: What then?

Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love;

Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith:

It shall become thee well to act my woes;

She will attend it better in thy youth,

Than in a nuncio of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it;

For they shall yet belie thy happy years

That say, thou art a man: Diana's lip

Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe

Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound,

And all is semblative a woman's part.

I know thy constellation is right apt

For this affair:—Some four, or five, attend him;

All, if you will; for I myself am best

When least in company:—Prosper well in this,

And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord,

To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my best

To woo your lady: yet, [aside] a barful strife!

Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter MARIA and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter, in way of thy excuse: my lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenten answer: I can tell thee where that saying was born, of, I fear no colours.

Clo. Where, good mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hanged, for being so long absent; or, to be turned away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute, then?

Clo. Not so, neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That if one break the other will hold; or, if both break your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith; very apt! Well, go thy way; if sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that; here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

[Exit.]

Enter OLIVIA and MALVOLIO.

Clo. Wit, an 't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits that think they have thee do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: For what says Quinapalus? Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.—God bless thee, lady!

Oli. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink,—then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself,—if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the butcher mend him: Anything that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue: If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, What remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower:—the lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree!—Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much to say as, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechise you for it, madonna: Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll 'bide your proof.

Clo. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clo. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever unmake the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox; but he will not pass his word for twopence that you are no fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanies.

Oli. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, with a distempered appetite. To be generous, and of free disposition, is to take those things bolts that you deem cannon-bullets: There's no der in an allowed fool, though he do nothing nor no railing in a known discreet man, tho' nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury endue thee with less than thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young man much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam; 't is a fair young man and well attended.

Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you; he speaks but madman: Fie on him! [Exit MARIA.]

Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am not at home; what you will, to dismiss it. [Exit VOLIO.] Now you see, sir, how your fooling and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, eldest son should be a fool; whose skull is full with brains! for here he comes, one of thy kin, most weak pia mater.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk.—What's the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman? what gentleman?

Sir To. 'T is a gentleman here—A plagues-pickle-herrings!—How now, sot?

Clo. Good sir Toby,—

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery: There's the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one.

Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drowned man, a fool, and a rascal: one draught above heat makes him a fool; the next mads him; and a third drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the crowner, and let me o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drunkenness: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna; and I shall look to the madman. [Exit.]

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears to speak with you. I told him you were sick; on him to understand so much, and therefore speak with you: I told him you were asleep; to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore to speak with you. What is to be said to him, he's fortified against any denial.

Oli. Tell him he shall not speak with me.

Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll be at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the knock of a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind of man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind.

Oli. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner; he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

<sup>a</sup> Leasing—falsehood. The meaning probably is, 'I shall speak the truth of fools (which is not profitable), but I shall give thee the advantageous gift of lying.'

Ol. Of what perchnage, at 3 years, is he?
 Mad. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 't is a peascod, standing when 't is almost an apple: 't is with him standing water, between boy and man. He is very I favoured, and he speaks very shrewishly; one did think his mother's milk were scarce out of him.
 Ol. Let him approach: Call in my gentlewoman.
 Mad. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.]

Re-enter MARIA.

Ol. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face.
 'Til once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLA.

Ol. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?
 Mad. Speak to me, I shall answer for her: Your will?
 Ol. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable she, I pray you tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loth to cast my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well said, I have taken great pains to con it. Good she, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible, to the least sinister usage.

Ol. Whence came you, sir?
 Mad. I can say little more than I have studied, and question 's out of my part. Good gentle one, give modest assurance if you be the lady of the house,
 I may proceed in my speech.

Mad. Are you a comedian?
 Ol. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very gods of malice I swear I am not that I play. Are you lady of the house?

Mad. If I do not usurp myself, I am.
 Ol. Most certain, if you are she you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow is not yours to reserve.
 'Tis this from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Mad. Come to what is important in 't: I forgive you your praise.

Ol. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 't is trivial.

Mad. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray you, quit it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates; and toward your approach, rather to wonder at you than to receive you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have sense, be brief: 't is not that time of moon with me to take one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mad. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Ol. No, good swabber: I am to hull here a little longer.—Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady.

Mad. Tell me your mind.

Ol. I am a messenger.

Mad. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, for the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your business.

Ol. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no over-offer of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Mad. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Ol. The rudeness that hath appeared in me, have I learned from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, honesty; to any other's, profanation.

Mad. Give us the place alone: we will hear this diversely. [Exit MARIA.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Ol. Most sweet lady,—

Mad. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said on 't. Where lies your text?

Ol. In Orsino's bosom.

Mad. In his bosom? In what chapter of his bosom?

* Comptible—accountable, ready to submit.

Ol. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Mad. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Ol. Good madam, let me see your face.

Mad. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text:
 but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture.

[Unveiling.] Look you, sir, such a one I was this present: Is 't not well done?

Ol. Excellently done, if God did all.

Mad. 'T is in grain, sir; 't will endure wind and weather.

Ol. 'T is beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on:

Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,
 If you will lead these graces to the grave,
 And leave the world no copy.

Mad. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: It shall be inventoried; and every particle, and utensil, labelled to my will: as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Ol. I see you what you are: you are too proud;
 But, if you were the devil, you are fair.

My lord and master loves you; O, such love
 Could be but recompens'd, though you were crown'd
 The nonpareil of beauty!

Mad. How does he love me?

Ol. With adorations, fertile tears,
 With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Mad. Your lord does know my mind, I cannot love
 him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,
 Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;
 In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
 And in dimension, and the shape of nature,
 A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him;
 He might have took his answer long ago.

Ol. If I did love you in my master's flame,
 With such a suffering, such a deadly life,
 In your denial I would find no sense,
 I would not understand it.

Mad. Why, what would you?

Ol. Make me a willow cabin at your gate,
 And call upon my soul within the house;
 Write loyal cantons of contemned love,
 And sing them loud even in the dead of night;
 Holla your name to the reverberate hills,
 And make the babbling gossip of the air
 Cry out, Olivia! O, you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth,
 But you should pity me.

Mad. You might do much: What is your parentage?

Ol. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
 I am a gentleman.

Mad. Get you to your lord;
 I cannot love him: let him send no more;
 Unless, perchance, you come to me again,
 To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well:
 I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

Ol. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse;
 My master, not myself, lacks recompense.
 Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love;
 And let your fervour, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.]

Mad. What is your parentage?

Ol. "Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
 I am a gentleman."—I'll be sworn thou art;
 Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
 Do give thee five-fold blazon:—Not too fast:—soft! soft!
 Unless the master were the man.—How now?

* Cantons—cantos.

Even so quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections,
With an invisible and subtle stealth,
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.—
What, ho, Malvolio!—

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.
Ol. Run after that same peevish messenger,
The county's man: he left this ring behind him,

Would I, or not; tell him, I'll none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.
Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit
Ol. I do I know not what: and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.
Fate, show thy force: Ourselves we do not owe;<sup>a</sup>
What is decreed must be; and be this so! [Exit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore, I shall crave of you your leave that I may bear my evils alone: It were a bad recompense for your love to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir; my determinate voyage is more extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express<sup>a</sup> myself. You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Rodorigo; my father was that Sebastian of Messaline,<sup>b</sup> whom I know you have heard of: he left behind him, myself and a sister, both born in an hour. If the Heavens had been pleased, 'would we had so ended! but you, sir, altered that; for, some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas, the day!

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but, though I could not, with such estimable wonder, overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her,—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair: she is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that, upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the count Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
I have many enemies in Orsino's court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there:
But, come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, sir; on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: And one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Vio. She took the ring of me. I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.

Vio. I left no ring with her: What means this lady?

Fortune forbid, my outside have not charm'd her!

She made good view of me; indeed, so much

That, methought, her eyes had lost<sup>b</sup> her tongue,

For she did speak in starts distractedly.

She loves me, sure; the cunning of her passion

Invites me in this churlish messenger.

None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.

I am the man:—If it be so, (as 't is,)

Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see thou art a wickedness.

Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy is it for the proper-false<sup>c</sup>

In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!

Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we;

For, such as we are made, if such we be.

How will this fadge?<sup>d</sup> My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him;

And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me:

What will become of this? As I am man,

My state is desperate for my master's love!

As I am woman, now alas the day!

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!

O time, thou must untangle this, not I;

It is too hard a knot for me t' untie. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Approach, sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgas, thou know'st,—

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion; I hate it as an unfilial can: To be up after midnight, and to go to bed there, is early: so that, to go to bed after midnight is to go to bed betimes. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou 'rt a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink—Marian, I say!—a stoop of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Cl. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of us three?<sup>a</sup>

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent least.<sup>b</sup> I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg; and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Picrogramitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus; 't was very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: Hadst it?

Cl. I did impetuous thy gratillity;<sup>c</sup> for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too; if one knight give a—

Cl. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Cl. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear: your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no farther, pretty sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith.

Sir To. Good, good.

Cl. What is love? 't is not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter;
What's to come is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we raise the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three comb out of one weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do 't: I am dog at a catch.

Cl. By 'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain: let our catch be, "Thou knave."<sup>d</sup>

Cl. "Hold thy peace, thou knave," knight? I shall be constrained in 't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'T is not the first time I have constrained thee to call me knave. Begin, fool; it begins, "Hold thy peace."

Cl. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i' faith! Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter MARIA.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If

<sup>a</sup> "The picture of us three" was a picture, or sign, of Two Fools, upon which was an inscription, we be three, so that the drunken wight who was tempted to read it supplied "argument first with laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever."

my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian, we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsay, and "Three merry men be we." Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley! lady! "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!"

[Singing.]

Cl. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. "O, the twelfth day of December,"—

[Singing.]

Mar. For the love o' God, peace.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do you make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches<sup>a</sup> without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneek up!<sup>b</sup>

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. "Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone."<sup>c</sup>

Mar. Nay, good sir Toby.

Cl. "His eyes do show his days are almost done."

Mal. Is 't even so?

Sir To. "But I will never die."

Cl. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go?"

Cl. "What an if you do?"

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go, and spare not?"

Cl. "O no, no, no, no, you dare not."

Sir To. Out o' time? sir, ye lie.—Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Cl. Yes, by saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou 'rt i' the right.—Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs:<sup>d</sup>—A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at anything more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule;<sup>e</sup> she shall know of it, by this hand. [Erit.]

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'T were as good a deed as to drink when a man's hungry, to challenge him the field; and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do 't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet sir Toby, be patient for to-night; since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed: I know I can do it.

at to sea, that their business might be every-d their intent everywhere; for that 's it that takes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell.

[Exit Clown.]

Let all the rest give place.

[Exeunt CURIO and Attendants.]

Once more, Cesario, to you' same sovereign cruelty:

my love, more noble than the world,
quantity of dirty lands;
that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
I hold as giddily as fortune;
but miracle, and queen of gems,
she pranks her in, attracts my soul,
at if she cannot love you, sir?
I cannot be so answer'd.

"Sooth, but you must some lady, as, perhaps, there is,
your love as great a pang of heart
as for Olivia: you cannot love her;
or so: Must she not then be answer'd?

There is no woman's sides
but beating of so strong a passion shall give my heart: no woman's heart hold so much; they lack retention.
Love may be call'd appetite,— of the liver, but the palate,— of surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;
is all as hungry as the sea, biggest as much: make no compare
but love a woman can bear me,
I love Olivia.

Ay, but I know,—

What dost thou know?
but well what love women to men may owe:
they are as true of heart as we.
I had a daughter lov'd a man,
that he, perhaps, were I a woman,
your lordship.

And what 's her history?

A blank, my lord: She never told her love, concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
her damaask cheek: she pin'd in thought;
in a green and yellow melancholy,
like patience on a monument,
at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
I may say more, swear more: but, indeed, as are more than will; for still we prove our vows, but little in our love.

But died thy sister of her love, my boy?
I am all the daughters of my father's house,
and brothers too;—and yet I know not.—
I I to this lady?

Ay, that 's the theme.

As haste; give her this jewel; say,
I can give no place, bide no deny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter TOBY BELCH, SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

TOBY. Come thy ways, signior Fabian.
Nay, I 'll come; if I lose a scruple of this
I may be holled to death with melancholy.
FAB. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the by rascally sheep-biter come by some notable

I would exult, man: you know, he brought of favour with my lady, about a bear-baiting

TOBY. To anger him, we 'll have the bear again; will fool him black and blue:—Shall we not,
we?

FAB. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

SIR TOBY. Here comes the little villain:—How now, my metal of India?<sup>a</sup>

MAR. Get ye all three into the box-tree: Malvolio 's coming down this walk. He has been yonder i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow, this half-hour: observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [throws down a letter] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit MARIA.]

Enter MALVOLIO.

MAL. 'T is but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me: and I have heard herself come thus near, that should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her.
What should I think on 't?

SIR TOBY. Here 's an overweening rogue!

FAB. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him! how he jets under his advanced plumes!

SIR ANDREW. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue:—

SIR TOBY. Peace, I say.

MAL. To be count Malvolio:—

SIR TOBY. Ah, rogue!

SIR ANDREW. Pistol him, pistol him.

SIR TOBY. Peace, peace!

MAL. There is example for 't; the lady of the Strachy<sup>b</sup> married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

SIR ANDREW. Fie on him, Jezebel!

FAB. O, peace! now he 's deeply in; look, how imagination blows him.

MAL. Having been three months married to her sitting in my state,<sup>c</sup>—

SIR TOBY. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

MAL. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping:

SIR TOBY. Fire and brimstone!

FAB. O, peace, peace!

MAL. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,—to ask for my kinsman Toby:

SIR TOBY. Bolts and shackles!

FAB. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

MAL. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while: and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with my some rich jewel.<sup>d</sup>
Toby approaches; courtesies<sup>e</sup> there to me:

SIR TOBY. Shall this fellow live?

FAB. Though our silence be drawn from us with ears, yet peace.

MAL. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control:

SIR TOBY. And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then?

MAL. Saying, "Cousin Toby, my fortunes having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech:"—

SIR TOBY. What, what?

MAL. "You must amend your drunkenness."

<sup>a</sup> My metal of India. So the original folio—mettle. In the second folio we have nettle. My metal of India is, obviously enough, my heart of gold, my precious girl.

<sup>b</sup> The lady of the Strachy. This has been called a desperate passage; and many wild guesses have accordingly been made to explain it. The context seems to point to some corruption of the name of a place.

<sup>c</sup> My state—my canopied chair, my throne.

<sup>d</sup> My some rich jewel—some rich jewel of my own.

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. "Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight;"

Sir And. That 's me, I warrant you.

Mal. "One sir Andrew:"

Sir And. I knew 't was I; for many do call me fool.

Mal. What employment have we here?

[Taking up the letter.]

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my lady's hand: these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: Why that?

Mal. [reads.] "To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes:" her very phrases!—By your leave, wax.—Soft!—and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 't is my lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [reads.] "Jove knows, I love:

But who?

Lips do not move;

No man must know."

"No man must know."—What follows?—the number 's altered!<sup>a</sup>—"No man must know:"—If this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!<sup>b</sup>

Mal. "I may command, where I adore:
But silence, like a Lucrece knife,
With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore;
M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."

Fab. A fustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. "M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."—Nay, but first, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl<sup>c</sup> checks at it!

Mal. "I may command where I adore." Why, she may command me: I serve her, she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity.<sup>d</sup> There is no obstruction in this;—And the end,—What should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—M, O, A, I.—

Sir To. O, ay! make up that:—he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon 't, for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say that he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

Mal. M,—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel; that suffers under probation: A should follow, but O does.

Fab. And O shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I 'll cudgel him, and make him cry, O.

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might

see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes below you.

Mal. M, O, A, I;—This simulation is not as the former: and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft; here follows prose.—

"If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with<sup>a</sup> a kinsman, surly with servants: let thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity: she thus advises thee that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings; and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to; thou art made, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee.

THE FORTUNATE USHAPPY."

Daylight and champion discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device, the very man. I do not now fool myself to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and, with a kind of injunction, drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, and my stars, be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. "Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling; thy smiles become thee well: therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I prithe." Jove, I thank thee.—I will smile: I will do everything that thou wilt have me.

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device:

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter MARIA.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip,<sup>b</sup> and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either?

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true; does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the spot, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 't is a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I 'll make one too.

[Ex]

<sup>a</sup> Be opposite with—be of a different opinion—do not hold him.

<sup>b</sup> Tray-trip—supposed to be draughts.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Olivia's Garden.

VIOLA, and Clown with a tabor.

See, friend, and thy music: Dost thou or?

I live by the church.

Is a churchman?

No matter, sir; I do live by the church;
my house, and my house doth stand by

It mayst say, the king lies<sup>a</sup> by a beggar, well near him; or the church stands by the tabor stand by the church.

As he said, sir.—To see this age!—A sen-schereveril glove<sup>b</sup> to a good wit: How each side may be turned outward!
That's certain; they that dally nicely quickly make them wanton.

Therefore, my sister had had no name,

MAN?

Her name's a word; and to dally might make my sister wanton: But, we very rascals, since bonds disgraced

WOMAN, MAN?

Her, I can yield you none without words;
grown so false, I am loth to prove reason

But thou art a merry fellow, and carest

For nothing, sir, I do care for something; but in my I do not care for you; if that be to go, sir, I would it would make you interest thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no folly:
she is a fool, sir, till she be married; and fools
as much as pulchards are to herrings, the husband; I am, indeed, not her fool, but her husband.

Why dost thou come late at the count Orsino's.

Why, sir, does walk about the orb, like the everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but be as oft with your master, as with my self; I saw your wisdom there.

When thou pass upon me, I'll no more with my own expenses for thee.

Therefore, in his next commodity of hair, send me some truth, I'll tell thee; I am almost sick of it; I would not have it grow on my chin.

MAN?

Why, not a pair of these have bred, sir?
They are long kept together, and put to use.
I play lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring you to this Troilus.

Stand you, sir; 't is well begged.

Therefore, I hope, is not great, sir, begging Cressida was a beggar. My lady is will conster to them whence you come;
and what you would, are out of my heart say, element; but the word is over-[Erit.]

How is wise enough to play the fool;
well craves a kind of wit:
I see their mood on whom he jests,

<sup>a</sup> Lies—sojourns, dwells.

<sup>b</sup> Glove—a kid glove, an easy-fitting glove.

The quality of persons, and the time;
And, like the haggard, check at every feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice
As full of labour as a wise man's art:
For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit;
But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi; votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the list<sup>a</sup> of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir; <sup>b</sup> put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance: But we are prevented.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain
odours on you!

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier! "Rain odours!" well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir And. "Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed:"—
I'll get 'em all three all ready.

Oliv. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my bearing. [Exit SIR TO., SIR AND., and MAR.]

Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Oliv. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oliv. My servant, sir! 'T was never merry world,
Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment:
You're servant to the count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours;
Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Oliv. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalf:—

Oliv. O, by your leave, I pray you;

I bade you never speak again of him:

But, would you undertake another suit,

I had rather hear you to solicit that,

Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,—

Oliv. Give me leave, beseech you: I did send

After the last enchantment you did here,

A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse

Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you:

Under your hard construction must I sit,

To force that on you, in a shameful cunning,

Which you knew none of yours: What might you think?

Have you not set mine honour at the stake,

And baited it with all the unmuzzled thoughts

<sup>a</sup> List—limit, bound.

<sup>b</sup> Taste was used by the Elizabethan poets for try;—the use of the word was not limited to touch by the palate.

<sup>c</sup> Prevented—anticipated, gone before.

would not stay behind you; my desire,
than filed steel, did spur me forth;
love to see you, (though so much were drawn one to a longer voyage, & what might befall your travel,
as in these parts; which, to a stranger, and unfriended, often prove unhospitable: My willing love,
by these arguments of fear,
your pursuit.

My kind Antonio,
your answer make, but, thanks,
and ever oft good turns off with such uncurrent pay;
if worth,* as is my conscience, firm, find better dealing. What 's to do?
see the reliques of this town?
morrow, sir; best, first, go see your lodging,
's not weary, and 't is long to night;
let us satisfy our eyes
memorials, and the things of fame, own this city.

'Would you 'd parlon me;
about danger walk these streets:
sea-fight, 'gainst the count his galleys,
service; of such note, indeed,
't a'en here, it would scarce be answer'd.
he, you slew great number of his people?
offence is not of such a bloody nature;
quality of the time, and quarrel,
have given us bloody argument.
we since been answer'd in repaying
ask from them; which, for traffic's sake, city did; only myself stood out:
if I be lapsed in this place,
dear.

Do not then walk too open.
ish not fit me. Hold, sir, here 's my purse;
a suburbs, at the Elephant,
edge; I will bespeak our diet,
beguile the time, and feed your knowledge ng of the town; there shall you have me.

SCENE IV.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

we sent after him. He says he 'll come;
I feast him? what bestow of him?
is laugh't more oft, than begg'd or borrow'd.
e load.—

Malvolio?—he is sad, and civil,<sup>b</sup> well for a servant with my fortunes;—
Malvolio?

he 's coming, madam; but in very strange
He is sure possess'd, madam.
hy, what 's the matter? does he rave?
So, madam, he does nothing but smile: your eyes best have some guard about you, if he t, sure, the man is tainted in his wits.
o call him hither.—I am as mad as he,
f merry madness equal be.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Malvolio?
sweet lady, ho, ho! [Smiles fantastically
Folk-fetters, wealth. <sup>b</sup> Civil-grave.

Oli. Smilest thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering. But what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is: "Please one, and please
all."

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs: It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think, we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? ay, sweetheart; and I 'll come to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so,
and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request? Yes; nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. "Be not afraid of greatness:"—'t was well writ.

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. "Some are born great,"—

Oli. Ha?

Mal. "Some achieve greatness,"—

Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. "And some have greatness thrust upon them."

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. "Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings;"—

Oli. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. "And wished to see thee cross-gartered."

Oli. Cross-gartered?

Mal. "Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so;"—

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. "If not, let me see thee a servant still."

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orsino's is returned; I could hardly entreat him back:
he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I 'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where 's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him; I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry. [Exit OLI. and MAR.]

Mal. Oh, ho! do you come near me now? no worse man than sir Toby to look to me? This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble slough," says she;—
"be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants,—let thy tongue tang with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity;"—and, consequently, sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And, when she went away now, "Let this fellow be looked to:" Fellow!
not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow.<sup>a</sup> Why, everything adheres together; that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance,—What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter MARIA, with SIR TOBY BELCH and FABIAN

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity?

<sup>a</sup> Fellow. Malvolio accepts the word in the old sense of convivial.

If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is:—How is 't with you, sir? how is 't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you; let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace, we must deal gently with him; let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? how is 't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress?

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Prithee, hold thy peace; this is not the way: Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir?

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 't is not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan: Hang him, foul collier!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx?

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element; you shall know more hereafter. [Exit.

Sir To. Is 't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now; lest the device take air, and taint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark-room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it; I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in 't.

Fab. Is 't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is 't, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] "Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow."

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. "Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for 't."

Fab. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. "Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for."

Fab. Very brief, and exceeding good senseless.

Sir To. "I will waylay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me,"—

Fab. Good.

Sir To. "Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain."

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: Good.

Sir To. "Fare thee well; And God have merry upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself, Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK."

Sir To. If this letter move him not, his legs cannot: I'll give 't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for 't; he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailie: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away.

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed as terror in the youth, he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Enter OLIVIA and VIOLA.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece: give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exit SIR TOBY, FABIAN, and MARIA.]

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honour too uncharly on 't: There's something in me that reproves my fault; But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same 'haviour that your passion bears, Go on my master's griefs.

Oli. Here, wear this jewel for me, 't is my picture; Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you: And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me that I'll deny; That honour, sav'd, may upon asking give?

Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honour may I give him that Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow: Fare thee well; A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter SIR TOBY BELCH and FABIAN.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to 't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interceptor, full of despight, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end: dis-ack, be yare in thy preparation, for thy as-

 kind of men that put quarrels purposely

Why, man, he's a very devil; I have not use [to FAB.] to take up the quarrel; I ed him the youth's a devil.

Ed, sub-a. random, come what will.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him; and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for his oath sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow; he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man. [Aside.

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on: to 't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath. [Draws.

Enter ANTONIO.

Vio. I do assure you 't is against my will. [Draws.

Ant. Put up your sword;—If this young gentleman

Have done offence, I take the fault on me;

If you offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.

Sir To. You, sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker,* I am for you.

[Draws.

Enter two Officers.

Fab. O good sir Toby, hold; here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon. [To ANT.

Vio. Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please.

[To SIR AND.

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir;—and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word: He will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit

Of count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well,

Though now you have no sea-cap on your head.

Take him away; he knows I know him well.

Ant. I must obey.—This comes with seeking you;

But there's no remedy; I shall answer it.

What will you do? Now my necessity

Makes me to ask you for my purse: It grieves me

Much more, for what I cannot do for you,

Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd;

But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money

Vio. What money, sir?

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here,

And, part, being prompted by your present trouble,

Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something: my having is not much;

I'll make division of my present with you:

Hold, there is half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now?

Is 't possible that my deserts to you

Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,

Lest that it make me so unsound a man

As to upbraid you with those kindnesses

That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none;

Nor know I you by voice, or any feature:

I hate ingratitude more in a man

Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,

Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption

Inhabits our frail blood.

* Undertaker—one who undertakes another's quarrel.

Ant. O Heavens themselves!
2 Off. Come, sir, I pray you, go.
Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here,
 I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death;
 Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love,—
 And to his image, which methought did promise
 Most venerable worth, did I devotion.
1 Off. What's that to us? The time goes by; away.
Ant. But, O, how vild an idol proves this god!—
 Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.—
 In nature there's no blemish but the mind;
 None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind.
 Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous evil
 Are empty trunks, o'erflourish'd by the devil.
1 Off. The man grows mad; away with him. Come, come, sir.
Ant. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers with ANT.]
Vio. Methinks, his words do from such passion fly,
 That he believes himself; so do not I.
 Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,
 That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither,
 we'll whisper o'er a couple or two of most sag

 Yet living in my glass; even such, and so,
 In favour was my brother, and he went
 Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
 For him I imitate: O, if it prove,
 Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love
Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears in his friend here in necessity, and denying him his cowardship ask Fabian.
Fab. A coward, a most devout coward,
 in it.
Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again,
 him.
Sir To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never sword.
Sir And. An I do not,—
Fab. Come, let's see the event.
Sir To. I dare lay any money't will be not

ACT IV

SCENE I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter SEBASTIAN and CLOWN.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent or you?
Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow;
 Let me be clear of thee.
Clo. Well held out, i' faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither.—Nothing that is so, is so.
Seb. I prithee vent thy folly somewhere else:
 Thou know'st not me.
Clo. Vent my folly! he has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly!
 I am afraid this great lubber the world will prove a cockney.*—I prithee now, ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady; shall I vent to her that thou art coming?
Seb. I prithee, foolish Greek, depart from me;
 There's money for thee; if you tarry longer
 I shall give worse payment.
Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand:—These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.<sup>b</sup>

Enter SIR ANDREW, SIR TOBY, and FABIAN.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. [Striking SEB.]
Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there:
 Are all the people mad? [Beating SIR AND.]
Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.
Clo. This will I tell my lady straight: I would not be in some of your coats for twopence. [Exit.]
Sir To. Come on, sir; hold. [Holding SEB.]
Sir And. Nay, let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him; I'll have an action of battery against passage as in the original.

 for a good report was buying the commodity of reputation at a high rate.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and MARIA.

JOVE bless thee, master parson.

JOHN says, sir Toby: for as the old hermit of

It is Topas the curate, who comes to visit Mal-

Sir Topas, sir Topas, good sir Topas, go to my out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this best thou nothing but of ladies?

Well said, master parson.

Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged: good do not think I am mad; they have laid me

deous darkness.

See, thou dishonest Sathan! I call thee by the best terms; for I am one of those gentle ones whose the devil himself with courtesy; Say'st

As hell, sir Topas.

Why, it hath bay-windows, transparent as bar-dark?

I am not mad, sir Topas; I say to you, this is dark.

Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no dark-ignorance; in which thou art more puzzled

I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though it were as dark as hell; and I say, there was

I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve

of it.

Fare thee well: Remain thou still in darkness:

it may be the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Sir Topas, sir Topas,—

My most exquisite sir Topas!

Yay, I am for all waters.

These mightst have done this without thy beard

if he sees thee not.

to thee; findest him: I would we were well rid of merry. If he may be conveniently delivered, he were; for I am now so far in offence with thee that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport of wit. Come by and by to my chamber.

Mal. Fool,—

Clo. "Alas, why is she so?"

Mal. Fool, I say;—

Clo. "She loves another"—Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at

Clo. Master Malvolio!

Mal. Ay, good fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad, indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here propertied me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say; the minister is here
—Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the Heavens restore.
endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain babble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas,—

Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—

Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God b' wi' you, good sir Topas.

—Marry, amen.—I will, sir, I will.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say,—

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent<sup>a</sup> for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper; I tell thee, I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were, sir!

Mal. By this hand, I am: Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady; it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to 't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree: I prithee, be gone.

Clo.

I am gone, sir,
And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again,
In a trice,
Like to the old vice,
Your need to sustain;
Who with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, ah, ha! to the devil:
Like a mad lad,
Fare thy nails, dad,
Adieu, Goodman devil.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun:

This pearl she gave me, I do feel 't, and see 't:

And though 't is wonder that enwraps me thus,

Yet 't is not madness. Where 's Antonio then?

I could not find him at the Elephant:

Yet there he was; and there I found this credit,<sup>b</sup>

That he did range the town to seek me out.

His counsel now might do me golden service.

For though my soul disputes well with my sense,

That this may be some error, but no madness,

Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad,
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 't were so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take and give back affairs, and their despatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing,
As, I perceive, she does: there's something in 't
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine: If you mean well,

Now go with me, and with this holy man,
Into the chantry by: there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: He shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth.—What do you say?
Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you;
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Oli. Then lead the way, good father:—And heaven
so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine! [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter CLOWN and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his letter.
Clo. Good master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Anything.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. This is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: How dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why, then the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me; there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer; there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex,* sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Beunet, sir, may put you in mind; One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think * Triplex. Triple time in music; a measure in which each bar divides into three equal parts, and is counted one, two, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit Clown.]

Enter ANTONIO and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well; Yet when I saw it last, it was besmeared As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war: A bawbling vessel was he captain of, For shallow draught, and bulk, unprizable; With which such scathful* grapple did he make With the most noble bottom of our fleet. That very envy, and the tongue of loss, Cried fame and honour on him.—What's the matter?

Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio That took the Phoenix, and her fraught, from Candy; And this is he that did the Tiger board, When your young nephew Titus lost his leg: Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state, In private babble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side; But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me, I know not what 't was, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief! What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies, Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear, Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir, Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me:

Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate, Though, I confess, on base and ground enough, Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither: That most ingrateful boy there, by your side, From the rude sea's eurag'd and foamy mouth Did I redeem; a wrack past hope he was: His life I gave him, and did thereto add My love, without retention or restraint, All his in dedication: for his sake, Did I expose myself, pure for his love, Into the danger of this adverse town; Drew to defend him when he was beset; Where being apprehended, his false cunning, (Not meaning to partake with me in danger,) Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance, And grew a twenty-years-removed thing, While one would wink; denied me mine own purse, Which I had recommended to his use Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

* Scathful—harmful, destructive.

When came he to this town?
To-day, my lord; and for three months before,
him, not a minute's vacancy,
and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Here comes the countess; now Heaven walks on earth.—

See, fellow, fellow, thy words are madness:
With this youth hath tended upon me;
of that anon.—Take him aside.
What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Olivia may seem serviceable?—
You do not keep promise with me.
Madam?

Gracious Olivia,—
What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—
My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.
It be ought to the old time, my lord,
and fulsome to mine ear
after music.

Still so cruel?

Will so constant, lord.
What! to perverseness? you uncivil lady, ingrate and un auspicious altars
The faithfulst offerings hath breath'd out, devotion tender'd! What shall I do?
I know what it please my lord, that shall become
him.

Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
An Egyptian thief, at point of death,
I love;* a savage jealousy,
The savours nobly?—But hear me this:
To non-regardance cast my faith,
I partly know the instrument
Which drives me from my true place in your favour,
The marble-breasted tyrant, still;
Your minion, whom I know you love,
And, by Heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
I tear out of that cruel eye,
Which sits crowned in his master's spite.
Fare you, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief:

Behold the lamb that I do love,
Which even's heart within a dove. [Going.]
And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To see a thousand deaths would die. [Following.]
Where goes Cesario?

After him I love,
I love these eyes, more than my life,
All mores, than e'er I shall love wife:
I give you witnesses above,
My life, for tainting of my love!
I hate me, detested! how am I beguil'd!
Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?
Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?—
The holy father. [Exit an Attendant.]

Come, away. [To VIOLA.]
Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.
Husband?

Ay, husband, can he that deny?
Her husband, sirrah?

No, my lord, not I.
The baseness of thy fear
Has thus strangle thy propriety:
Cesario, take thy fortunes up;
And, as that thou art, and then thou art
As that thou fear'st.—O, welcome, father!

Re-enter Attendant and Priest.
Charge thee, by thy reverence,
* Thyamis, in Heliodorus.

Here to unfold (though lately we intended
To keep in darkness what occasion now Reveals before 't is ripe) what thou dost know.
Hath newly pass'd between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strengthen'd by interchangement of your rings;
And all the ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travell'd but two hours.

Duke. O, thou dissembling cub! 'what wilt thou
be,

When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest,—
Oliv. O, do not swear;
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, with his head broke.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon; send one presently to sir Toby.

Oliv. What 's the matter?
Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of God, your help: I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oliv. Who has done this, sir Andrew?
Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he 's the very devil incar-dinate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?
Sir And. Od's lifelings, here he is:—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do 't by sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me without cause;
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH, drunk, led by the Clown.

Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman? how is 't with you?
Sir To. That 's all one; he has hurt me, and there 's
the end on 't.—Sot, dost see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clow. O, he 's drunk, sir Toby, an hour ago; his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he 's a rogue and a passy-measures
pavin; I hate a drunken rogue.

Oliv. Away with him: Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir And. I 'll help you, sir Toby, because we 'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave? a thin-faced knave, a gull?

Oliv. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.
[Exit Clown, SIR TO., and SIR AND.]

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;

But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less, with wit, and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that * Cine—skiu.

I do perceive it hath offended you ;
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons ;

A natural perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio !

How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee !

Ant. Sebastian are you ?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio ?

Ant. How have you made division of yourself ?—

An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin

Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian ?

Oli. Most wonderful !

Seb. Do I stand there ? I never had a brother :

Nor can there be that deity in my nature,

Of here and everywhere. I had a sister,

Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd :—

Of charity, what kin are you to me ? [ To VIOLA. ]

What countryman ? what name ? what parentage ?

Vio. Of Messaline : Sebastian was my father ;

Such a Sebastian was my brother too ;

So went he suited to his watery tomb :

If spirits can assume both form and suit

You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am, indeed :

But am in that dimension grossly clad,

Which from the womb I did participate.

Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,

I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,

And say—Thrice welcome, drowned Viola !

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day when Viola from her birth

Had number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul !

He finished, indeed, his mortal act,

That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both,

But this my masculine usurp'd attire,

Do not embrace me, till each circumstance

Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump,

That I am Viola : which to confirm,

I'll bring you to a captain in this town,

Where lie my maiden weeds ; by whose gentle help

I was preserv'd, to serve this noble count :

All the occurrence of my fortune since

Hath been between this lady and this lord.

Seb. So comes it, lady, you have been mistook :

[ To OLIVIA. ]

But nature to her bias drew in that.

You would have been contracted to a maid ;

Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd,

You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd ; right noble is his blood.—

If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,

I shall have share in this most happy wrack :

Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times, [ To Vio. ]

Thou never shouldst love woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear ;

And all those swearings keep as true in soul,

As doth that orb'd continent the fire

That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand ;

And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Vio. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,

Hath my maid's garments : he, upon some action,

Is now in durance ; at Malvolio's suit,

A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him :—Fetch Malvolio hither :—

And yet, alas, now I remember me,

They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter Clown, with a letter.

A most extracting<sup>a</sup> frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd
How does he, sirrah ?

Clow. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub, as well as a man in his case may write a letter to you ; I should have given you this morning, but as a madman's epistles it skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open it, and read it.

Clow. Look then to be well edified, and livers the madman :—“ By the Lord, madam,

Oli. How now ! art thou mad ?

Clow. No, madam, I do but read my ladyship will have it as it ought to be,
<sup>002.</sup>

Oli. Prithee, read it thy right wits.

Clow. So I do, madonna ; but to read is to read thus : therefore perpend, madam,
I give ear.

Oli. Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. [ Reads. ]

“ By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, as I know it : though you have put me into your drunken cousin's rule over me, yet have my senses as well as your ladyship. I have that induced me to the semblance I put on ;
doubt not but to do myself much right, or think of me as you please. I leave my duty of, and speak out of my injury.”

THE MADLY-T

Oli. Did he write this ?

Clow. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distemper.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian ; bring him to me.

My lord, so please you, these things are
To think me as well a sister as a wife,
One day shall crown the alliance of
you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to offer.

Your master quits you ; [ To VIOLA ] a vice done him,

So much against the mettle<sup>c</sup> of your sex
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding
And since you call'd me master for so long
Here is my hand ; you shall from this
Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister ?—You

Re-enter FABIAN, with MALVOLIO.

Duke. Is this the madman ?

Oli. Ay, my lord.

How now, Malvolio ?

Mal. Madam, you have Notorious wrong.

Oli. Have I, Malvolio ?

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you
letter :

You must not now deny it is your hand
Write from it, if you can, in hand, or print
Or say, 't is not your seal, not your inventory
You can say none of this : Well, grant,
And tell me, in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear light
Bade me come smiling and cross-gartered

<sup>a</sup> Extracting—absorbing.

<sup>b</sup> When the Clown begins to read, he reads upon which Olivia says, “ Art thou mad ?
clear enough : you must allow me—you must voice—if I am to read madness as it ought to be.”

<sup>c</sup> Mettle—temper, disposition.

yellow stockings, and to frown
 Toby and the lighter people :
 g this in an obedient hope,
 you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
 dark-house, visited by the priest,
 the most notorious geck<sup>a</sup> and gull attention play'd on ? tell me why.
 as, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
 confess, much like the character :
 question, 't is Maria's hand.
 I do bethink me, it was she me thou wast mad ; thou cam'st in smiling, in forms which here were presuppos'd in the letter. Prithee, be content :
 ce hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee :
 we know the grounds and authors of it,
 be both the plaintiff and the judge in cause.

Good madam, hear me speak ;
 quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
 condition of this present hour, are wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
 I confess, myself, and Toby,
 vice against Malvolio here,
 stubborn and uncourteous parts receiv'd against him : Maria writ at sir Toby's great importance ;<sup>b</sup> case whereof he hath married her.
 a sportful malice it was follow'd,
 r pluck on laughter than revenge ;
 injuries be justly weigh'd
 as both sides pass'd
 as, poor fool ! how have they baffled thee !
 Why, "some are born great, some achieve and some have greatness thrown upon them."

To geck is to deride, and hence a geck is one case—impertinacy.

I was one, sir, in this interlude ; one sir Topas, sir ; but that 's all one :—"By the Lord, fool, I am not mad ;"
 —But do you remember ? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal ? an you smile not, he 's gagged :"
 And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Mal. I 'll be revenged on the whole pack of you.

[Exit.

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace :

He hath not told us of the captain yet ;

When that is known, and golden time convents,<sup>a</sup>

A solemn combination shall be made

Of our dear souls—Meantime, sweet sister,

We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come ;

For so you shall be while you are a man ;

But, when in other habits you are seen,

Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen. [Exeunt.

SONG.

Clo. When that I was and a little tiny boy,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

A foolish thing was but a toy,

For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,

For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to wife,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

By swaggering could I never thrive,

For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my bed,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

With toss-pots still had drunken head,

For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,

But that 's all one, our play is done,

And we 'll strive to please you every day.

[Exit.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

'As You Like It' was first printed in the folio collection of 1623. There appears to have been an intention to publish it separately, for we find it entered in the registers of the Stationers' Company, together with 'Henry V.' and 'Much Ado about Nothing.' There is no exact date to this entry, but it is conjectured to have been made in 1600. The text of the original folio is, upon the whole, a very correct one.

Of all Shakspeare's comedies we are inclined to think that 'As You Like It' is the most read. It possesses not the deep tragic interest of 'The Merchant of Venice,' nor the brilliant wit and diverting humour of 'Much Ado about Nothing,' nor the prodigal luxuriance of fancy which belongs to 'A Midsummer-Night's Dream,' nor the wild legendary romance which imparts its charm to 'A Winter's Tale,' nor the grandeur of the poetical creation of 'The Tempest.' The peculiar attraction of 'As You Like It' lies, perhaps, in the circumstance that "in no other play do we find the bright imagination and fascinating grace of Shakspeare's youth so mingled with the thoughtfulness of his maturer age." This is the character which Mr. Hallam gives of this comedy, and it appears to us a very just one. But in another place Mr. Hallam says, "There seems to have been a period of Shakspeare's life when his heart was ill at ease and ill content with the world or his own conscience. The memory of hours misspent, the pang of affection misplaced or unrequited, the experience of man's worse nature, which intercourse with ill-chosen associates, by chance or circumstances, peculiarly associates;—these, as they sank down into the depths of his great mind, seem not only to have inspired into it the conception of 'Lear' and 'Timon,' but that of one primary character, the censurer of mankind. This type is first seen in the philosophic melancholy of Jaques, gazing with an undiminished serenity, and with a gaiety of fancy, though not of manners, on the follies of the world. It assumes a graver cast in the exiled Duke of the same play." Mr. Hallam then notices the like type in 'Measure for Measure' and the altered 'Hamlet,' as well as in 'Lear' and 'Timon;' and adds, "In the later plays of Shakspeare, especially in 'Macbeth' and 'The Tempest,' much of moral speculation will be found, but he has never returned to this type of character in the personages." Without entering into a general examination of Mr. Hallam's theory, which evidently includes a very wide range of discussion, we must venture to think that the type of character first seen in Jaques, and presenting a graver cast in the exiled Duke, is so modified by the whole conduct of the action of this comedy, by its opposite characterisation, and by its prevailing tone of reflection, that it offers not the slightest evidence of having been produced at a period of the poet's life "when his heart was ill at ease and ill content with the world or his own conscience." The charm which this play appears to us to possess in a most remarkable degree, even when compared with other works of Shakspeare, is that, while we behold "the philosophic eye, turned inward on the mysteries of human nature"—(we use Mr. Hallam's own forcible expression)—we also see the serene brow and the playful smile, which tell us that "the philosophic eye" belongs to one who, however above us, is still akin to us—who tolerates our follies, who compassionates even our faults, who mingles in our gaiety, who rejoices in our happiness; who leads us to scenes of surpassing loveliness, where we may forget the painful lessons of the world, and introduces us to characters whose generosity, and faithfulness, and affection, and simplicity may obliterate the sorrows of our "experience of man's worse nature." It is not in Jaques alone, but in the entire dramatic group, that we must seek the tone of the poet's mind, and to that have our own minds attuned. Mr. Campbell, speaking of the characters of this comedy, says, "Our hearts are as stricken by these benevolent beings that we easily forgive the other more culpable but at last repentant characters." This is not the effect which could have been produced if the dark shades of a painful commerce with the world had crossed that "sunshine of the breast" which lights up the "inaccessible" thickets, and sparkles amidst the "melancholy boughs" of the forest of Arden. Jaques may be Shakspeare's first type "of the censurer of mankind;" but Jaques is precisely the reverse of the character which the poet would have chosen, had he intended the censure to have more than a dramatic force—to be universally true and not individually characteristic.

"Ay, now am I in Arden!" Touchstone thought that when he was at home he was in a better place. But here is the home of every true lover of poetry. What a world of exquisite images do Shakspeare's pictures of this forest call up! He gives us no positive set descriptions, of trees, and flowers, and rivulets, and fountains,—such as we may cut out and paste into an album. But a touch here and there carries us into the heart of his living scenery. And so, whenever it is our happy lot to be wandering

"Under the shade of melancholy boughs," we think of the oak beneath which Jaques lay along,—

"whose antique root peeps out Upon the brook that brawls along this wood;"
and of the dingle where Touchstone was with Audrey and her goats; and of the

"Sheepcote fence'd about with olive-trees," where dwelt Rosalind and Celia; and of the hawthorns and brambles upon which Orlando hung odes and elegies. In this delicious pastoral the real is blended with the poetical in such intimate union, that the highest poetry appears to be as essentially natural as the most familiar gossip; and the loftiest philosophy is interwoven with the occurrences of every-day life, so as to teach us that there is a philosophical aspect of the commonest things. It is this spirit which infuses Shakspeare's forest of Arden with such life, and truth, and beauty, as belongs to no other representation of pastoral scenes; which takes us into the depths of solitude, and shows us how the feelings of social life alone can give us

"tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything;"
which builds a throne for intellect "under the green wood tree," and there, by characteristic satire, gently indicates to us the vanity of the things which bind us to the world; whilst he teaches us that life has its happiness in the cultivation of the affections,—in content and independence of spirit.

SCENE.—FIRST, NEAR OLIVER'S HOUSE; AFTERWARDS, PARTLY IN THE USURPER'S COURT, AND PARTLY IN THE FOREST OF ARDEN.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Orchard, near Oliver's House.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but poor a thousand crowns; and, as thou say'st, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jacques he keeps at school, and report speaks positively of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays<sup>a</sup> me here at home unskipt. For call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stallion of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hired; but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth; for he which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me his countenance<sup>b</sup> seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines<sup>c</sup> my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begets to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to mend it.

<sup>c</sup> Mines—undermines, seeks to destroy.

Enter OLIVER.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.
 Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.
 Oli. Now, sir! what make you here?
 Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make anything.
 Oli. What mar you then, sir?
 Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.
 Oli. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught awhile.<sup>a</sup>
 Orl. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?
 Oli. Know you where you are, sir?
 Orl. O, sir, very well; here in your orchard.
 Oli. Know you before whom, sir?
 Orl. Ay, better than him I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me: The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

<sup>a</sup> Be naught or be nought was a petty malediction; and thus Oliver says no more than—be better employed, and be naught to you.

Oli. What, boy!

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orl. I am no villain: <sup>a</sup> I am the youngest son of sir Rowland de Bois; he was my father; and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains: Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so; thou hast railed on thyself.

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient; for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go, I say.

Orl. I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentlemanlike qualities: the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

[Exit ORLANDO and ADAM.]

Oli. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Holla, Dennis!

Enter DENNIS.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in. [Exit DENNIS.—T will be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter CHARLES.

Cha. Good morning to your worship.

Oli. Good monsieur Charles!—what 's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There 's no news at the court, sir, but the old news; that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Cha. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her, being ever from their cradles bred together, that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall: To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young, and tender; and, for you love, I would be loth to foil him, as I must, for my own honour, if he come in: therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal; that either you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into; in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I 'll tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbornest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me his natural brother; therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger: And thou wert best look to 't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other: for, I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak it, there is not one so young and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but, should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: If he come to-morrow I 'll give him his payment; if ever he go alone again I 'll never wrestle for prize more: And so, God keep your worship. [Exit.]

Oli. Farewell, good Charles.—Now will I stir this gamester: <sup>a</sup> I hope I shall see an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he. Yet he 's gentle; never schooled and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved; <sup>b</sup> and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: but it shall not be so long; this wrestler shall clear all: nothing remains but that I kindle <sup>c</sup> the boy thither, which now I 'll go about. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lov'st me not with the full weight that I love thee: if my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the duke, my father, so thou hadst been still with me I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father, perforce, I will render thee again in affection; by mine honour I will; and when I break that oath let me

master: therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, y.

From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports: see;—what think you of falling in love?

Marry, I prithee do, to make sport withal; but man in good earnest; nor no further in sport than with safety of a pure blush thou mayst in come off again.

What shall be our sport then?
Let us sit and mock the good housewife, Form her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be d equally.

I would we could do so; for her benefits are y misplaced: and the bountiful blind woman et mistake in her gifts to women.

'T is true: for those that she makes fair she sakes honest; and those that she makes honest s very ill favouredly.

Nay, now thou goest from fortune's office to n- fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the s of nature.

Enter TOUCHSTONE.

No? When nature hath made a fair creature, not by fortune fall into the fire? Though n- a given us wit to flout at fortune, hath not fo- t in this fool to cut off the argument?

Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature; t- time makes nature's natural the cutter off of wit.

Peradventure, this is not fortune's work neither, ure's; who, perceiving our natural wits too reason of such goddesses, hath sent this natural whetstone: for always the dulness of the fool is estone of the wits.—How now, wit? whither you?

A. Mistress, you must come away to your father. Were you made the messenger?

A. No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come

Where learned you that oath, fool?

A. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour e good pancakes, and swore by his honour the I was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pan- e naught, and the mustard was good; and not the knight forsworn.

How prove you that, in the great heap of your sge?

Ay, marry; now unmuzzle your wisdom.

A. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, or by your beards that I am a knave.

By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

A. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were: but wear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: e was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he ad any; or, if he had, he had sworn it away e he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Prithee, who is 't that thou mean'st?

A. One that old Frederick, your father, loves. My father's love is enough to honour him enough: e more of him; you'll be whipped for taxation,<sup>a</sup> these days.

A. The more pity, that fools may not speak what wise men do foolishly.

By my troth, thou say'st true; for since the is that fools have was silenced, the little foolery e men have makes a great show. Here comes e le Beau.

Enter LE BEAU.

With his mouth full of news. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their <sup>a</sup> Taxation—satire.

Ros. Then shall we be news-crammed.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more market- able. Bon jour, monsieur le Beau: What 's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport? Of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I an- swer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said; that was laid on with a trowel.*

Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,—

Ros. Thou lovest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze<sup>b</sup> me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons,—

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—

Ros. With bills on their necks,—“Be it known unto all men by these presents,”—

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third: Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib- breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here: for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter DUKE FREDERICK, LORDS, ORLANDO, CHARLES, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on; since the youth will not be en- treated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter and cousin? are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my liege; so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man.<sup>c</sup> In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated: Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good monsieur le Beau.

* Laid on with a trowel—coarsely. A gross flatterer is still said to lay it on with a trowel.

<sup>c</sup> Odds in the man. The meaning would appear to be, the challenger is unequal.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by. [Duke goes apart.
Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princess calls for you.

Orl. I attend them, with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the duke that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein<sup>a</sup> I confess me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamed that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray Heaven, I be deceived in you!

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace; you shall not entertain him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mocked me before: but come your ways.

Ros. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [CHARLES and ORLANDO wrestle.

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. [CHARLES is thrown. Shout.

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. [CHARLES is borne out.
What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this deed
Hadst thou descended from another house.
But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth;
I would thou hadst told me of another father.

[Exit DUKE FRED., TRAIN, and LE BEAU.

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be sir Rowland's son,
His youngest son;—and would not change that calling,<sup>b</sup>
To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd sir Rowland as his soul
And all the world was of my father's mind:
Had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle cousin,
Let us go thank him, and encourage him:
My father's rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well deserv'd;
If you do keep your promises in love
But justly<sup>a</sup> as you have exceeded all promise,
Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman,

[Giving him a chain from her neck.
Wear this for me,—one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more but that her hand lacks means
Shall we go, coz?

Cel. Ay:—Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say I thank you? My better parts
Are all thrown down; and that which here stands up
Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back: My pride fell with my tunes:

I'll ask him what he would:—Did you call, sir?—
Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown
More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you:—Fare you well.

[Exit ROSALIND and CELIA.

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Re-enter LE BEAU.

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrown;
Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place: Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love;
Yet such is now the duke's condition,<sup>b</sup>
That he misconstrues all that you have done.
The duke is humorous;<sup>c</sup> what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive, than I to speak of.

Orl. I thank you, sir; and, pray you, tell me this Which of the two was daughter of the duke
That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners;

But yet, indeed, the shorter is his daughter:

The other is daughter to the banish'd duke,

And here detain'd by her usurping uncle,

To keep his daughter company; whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.

But I can tell you, that of late this duke

Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece;

Grounded upon no other argument

But that the people praise her for her virtues,

And pity her for her good father's sake;

And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady

Will suddenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well;

Hereafter, in a better world than this,

I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well!

[Exit LE BEAU.

Thus must I from the smoke into the smother;

From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother:—

But heavenly Rosalind! [Exit

innocent as grace itself:

be thee, that I trust thee not.
t your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
hereon the likelihood depends.

Thou art thy father's daughter, there's enough.
was I when your highness took his duke-

ness;
hen your highness banish'd him:
ness inherited, my lord;

id derive it from our friends,
it to me? my father was no traitor:
my liege, mistake me not so much ty poverty is treacherous.

a sovereign, hear me speak.
Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake.

with her father rang'd along.
* Dearly—extremely.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay,
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse;<sup>a</sup>
I was too young that time to value her,

But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why, so am I; we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;

And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smooth-
ness,
Her very silence, and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.

Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,

When she is gone: then open not thy lips;
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege;
I cannot live out of her company.

Duke F. You are a fool:—You, niece, provide yourself;
If you outstay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exit DUKE FRED. and Lords.
Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.

I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.
Ros. I have more cause.
Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;

Prithee, be cheerful; know'st thou not the duke
Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.
Cel. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one:

Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?
No; let my father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,

Whither to go, and what to bear with us:
And do not seek to take your change<sup>b</sup> upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out;

For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.
Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.
Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
Maids as we are, to travel forth so far!
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber smirch my face,
The like do you; so shall we pass along,
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man?

A gallant curtise-axe upon my thigh,
A boar-spear in my hand; and (in my heart Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will)

We'll have a swashing<sup>c</sup> and a martial outside;
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee, when thou art a
man?

Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.

But what will you be call'd?
Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state;
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

<sup>c</sup> Swashing. To swash is to make a noise of swords against targets.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we essay'd to steal
The clownish fool out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;
Leave me alone to woo him: Let's away,

And get our jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight: Now go in we content,
To liberty, and not to banishment.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter DUKE senior, AMIENS, and other Lords, in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates, and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we not the penalty of Adam.
The seasons' difference,—as, the icy fang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say
This is no flattery,—these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.<sup>a</sup>
Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.

Ami. I would not change it: Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me<sup>b</sup> the poor dappled fools,—
Being native burghers of this desert city,—
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads<sup>c</sup>
Have their round haunches gor'd.

1 Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To-day, my lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood:
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunters' aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord. O yes, into a thousand similes.

<sup>a</sup> We print this passage according to the old reading—
"Here feel we not the penalty of Adam;"

and we have pointed the passage very differently from the usual mode: for, what is "the penalty of Adam"? All the commentators say, "the seasons' difference." On the contrary, it was, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." "The seasons' difference," it must be remembered, was ordained before the fall, and was in no respect a penalty. The exiled courtiers led a life without toil—a life in which they were contented with a little—and they were thus exempt from "the penalty of Adam."

<sup>b</sup> Irks me. This active use of the verb irk has become obsolete. The meaning is obvious from the adjective, which we still use—irksomely.

<sup>c</sup> Forked heads—the heads of barbed arrows.

First, for his weeping into the needless<sup>a</sup> stream;
"Poor deer," quoth he, "thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much." Then being therealone, Left and abandon'd of his velvet friend;<sup>b</sup>
"T is right," quoth he; "thus misery doth part
The flux of company:" Anon, a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him; "Ay," quoth Jaques,
"Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
'T is just the fashion: Wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?"
Thus most invecively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life: swearing, that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse
To fright the animals, and to kill them up,<sup>c</sup>
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place;
I love to cope<sup>d</sup> him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw them
It cannot be: some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1 Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed; and, in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.

2 Lord. My lord, the roynish<sup>e</sup> clown, at whom you
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses, that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant
hither;

If he be absent, bring his brother to me,
I'll make him find him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quail<sup>f</sup>
To bring again these foolish runaways. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Before Oliver's House.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?

<sup>b</sup> Friend. The singular is often used for the plural in sense more abstracted, and therefore in many instances poetical.

What! my young master!—O, my gentle master,
 et master, O you memory
 Rowland! why, what make you here?
 so virtuous? Why do people love you?
 fore are you gentle, strong and valiant?
 d you be so fond to overcome
 miser of the humorous duke?
 e is come too swiftly home before you.
 not, master, to some kind of men es serve them but as enemies?
 e years; your virtues, gentle master, ed and holy traitors to you.
 world is this, when what is comely him that bears it!
 ry, what 's the matter?

O unhappy youth,
 within these doors; within this roof
 of all your graces lives:
 —(no, no brother; yet the son—son; I will not call him son—as about to call his father)— your praises; and this night he means s lodging where you use to lie, thin it: if he fail of that,
 ve other means to cut you off:
 him and his practices.
 place,* this house is but a butchery;
 ar it, do not enter it.
 y, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?
 No matter whither, so you come not here.
 hat, wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

base and boisterous sword, enforce living on the common road?
 et do, or know not what to do;
 will not do, do how I can;
 ll subject me to the malice
 ed blood,<sup>b</sup> and bloody brother.
 But do not so: I have five hundred crowns hire I sav'd under your father, al store, to be my foster-nurse,
 ee should in my old limbs lie lame,
 and age in corners thrown;
 and He that doth the ravens feed,
 lently caters for the sparrow,
 so my age! Here is the gold;
 give you: Let me be your servant;
 eek old, yet I am strong and lusty:
 youth I never did apply
 eddious liquors in my blood;
 t with untashful forehead woo
 of weakness and debility;
 y age is as a lusty winter,
 kindly: let me go with you;
 service of a younger man
 business and necessities, good old man; how well in thee appears at service of the antique world, ee sweat for duty, not for need!
 at for the fashion of these times,
 e will sweat, but for promotion;
 g that, do choke their service up the having: it is not so with thee.
 ld man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
 e so much as a blossom yield,
 ll thy pains and husbandry:
 by ways, we'll go along together:
 have thy youthful wages spent,
 t upon some settled low content.

* Place—this is no abiding-place.
 † Wood—affections alienated and turned out of their way, as a stream of water is said to be diverted.

Adam. Master, go on; and I will follow thee,
 To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty.—
 From seventeen years till now almost fourscore
 Here lived I, but now live here no more.
 At seventeen years many their fortunes seek;
 But at fourscore, it is too late a week:<sup>a</sup>
 Yet fortune cannot recompense me better,
 Than to die well, and not my master's debtor. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter ROSALIND in boy's clothes, CELIA dressed like a Shepherdess, and TOUCHSTONE.

Ros. O Jupiter! how merry<sup>b</sup> are my spirits!
 Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you, bear with me; I cannot go no further.<sup>c</sup>

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you: yet I should bear no cross,<sup>d</sup> if I did bear you; for, I think, you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden.
 Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I;
 when I was at home I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone:—Look you, who comes here; a young man, and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter CORIN and SILVIUS.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.
 Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now.
 Sil. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess;

Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
 As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:
 But if thy love were ever like to mine,
 (As sure I think did never man love so),
 How many actions most ridiculous
 Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
 Sil. O, thou didst then never love so heartily:

If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
 That ever love did make thee run into,
 Thou hast not lov'd:
 Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,
 Wearing<sup>e</sup> thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,
 Thou hast not lov'd:
 Or if thou hast not broke from company
 Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,
 Thou hast not lov'd: O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe! [Ex. SIL.]

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,
 I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine: I remember, when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming anight to Jane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batler,<sup>f</sup> and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopped hands had milked: and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her; from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said, with weeping tears, "Wear these for my sake." We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is <sup>a</sup> Too late a week—an indefinite period, but still a short period; somewhat too late.

<sup>b</sup> Merry. Rosalind's merriment was assured as well as her dress.

<sup>c</sup> The double negative was not considered a violation of grammar in Shakspeare's time.

<sup>e</sup> Wearing. To weary and to wear are the same, in the sense of the text.

mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.*

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art 'ware of.

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove! Jove! this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man,
If he for gold will give us any food;
I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla; you clown!

Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say:—Good even to you, friend.

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

Ros. I prithee, shepherd, if that love, or gold,
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed;
Here 's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,
And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish for her sake, more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her:
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze;
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality:

Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed,
Are now on sale, and at our sheepcote now,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here but
erewhile,

That little cares for buying anything.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages: I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold:
Go with me; if you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter AMIENS, JAQUES, and others.

SONG.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn<sup>b</sup> his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prithee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I prithee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs:
More, I prithee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged;<sup>c</sup> I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire

<sup>a</sup> Mortal in folly—extremely foolish.

you to sing: Come, more; another stanza;
em stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; be nothing: Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request than to please me.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man for you: but that they call compliment is like the ter of two dog-apes; and when a man th heartily, methinks I have given him a penny renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; that will not hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sir, while; the duke will drink under this tree: been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid is too disputable<sup>a</sup> for my company: I think matters as he; but I give Heaven thanks, and boast of them. Come, warble, come.

SONG.

Who doth ambition shun, [All sing]
And loves to live 't the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:—

If it do come to pass,
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame;
Here shall he see
Gross fools as he,
An if he will come to me.

Ami. What 's that ducdame?

Jaq. 'T is a Greek invocation, to call for circle. I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, against all the first-born of Egypt.<sup>b</sup>

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke; his horse prepared. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further: for food! Here lie I down, and measure out Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer little: If this uncouth forest yield anything will either be food for it, or bring it for food. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. sake, be comfortable,<sup>c</sup> hold death awhile at end: I will here be with thee presently; and thee not something to eat I will give thee less but if thou diest before I come thou art a my labour. Well said! thou look'st cheerly; be with thee quickly.—Yet thou liest in the! Come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and not die for lack of a dinner, if there live any this desert. Cheerly, good Adam!

SCENE VII.—The same.

A table set out. Enter DUKE SENIOR, AMIENS, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a bear. For I can nowhere find him like a man.

<sup>c</sup> Be comfortable—become susceptible of comfort.

My lord, he is but even now gone hence ;
 merry, bearing of a song.

If he, compact<sup>a</sup> of jars, grow musical,
 we shortly discord in the spheres :—
 m ; tell him I would speak with him.

Enter JAQUES.

He saves my labour by his own approach.
 Why, how now, monsieur ! what a life is this,
 our friends must woo your company ?
 look merrily.

ool, a fool ! I met a fool i' the forest, ol ; a miserable world :
 by food, I met a fool ;
 us down and bask'd him in the sun,
 as lady Fortune in good terms,
 terms,—and yet a motley fool.
 row, fool," quoth I : " No, sir," quoth he,
 ot fool, till Heaven hath sent me fortune :"
 e shrew a dial from his poke ;
 g on it with lack-lustre eye,
 risely, " It is ten o'clock :
 y see," quoth he, " how the world wags :
 hour ago, since it was nine ;
 ne hour more, 't will be eleven ;
 n hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
 rom hour to hour, we rot and rot,
 y hangs a tale." When I did hear fool thus moral on the time, egan to crow like chanticleer,
 ould be so deep-contemplative ;
 laugh, sans intermission,
 r his dial.—O noble fool !
 ol ! Motley's the only wear.

What fool is this ?
 worthy fool !—One that hath been a courtier ;
 if ladies be but young, and fair,
 the gift to know it : and in his brain,— as dry as the remainder biscuit page,—he hath strange places cramm'd vation, the which he vents
 d terms :—O, that I were a fool !
 times for a motley coat.

Then shalt have one.
 It is my only suit :<sup>b</sup> that you weed your better judgments less that grows rank in them, wise. I must have liberty large a charter as the wind, whom I please ; for so fools have :
 hat are must galled with my folly,
 must laugh : And why, sir, must they so ?
 plain as way to parish church :
 feel doth very wisely hit foolishly, although he smart, am senseless of the bob :<sup>c</sup> if not,
 an's folly is anatomiz'd
 e spaniel ring glances of the fool.
 e my motley ; give me leave y raiment, and I will through and through fool body of the infected world, patiently receive my medicine.
 lie on there ! I can tell what thou wouldst do.
 at, for a counter, would I do but good ?
 Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin :
 yself hast been a libertine,
 as the Turkish sting itself :
 embossed sores, and beaded evils,
 with licence of free foot hast caught,
 as discharge into the general world.
 y, who cries out on pride,
 green tax any private party ?

<sup>a</sup> Compact—composed—made up of.
<sup>b</sup> Request. <sup>c</sup> Bob—tap.

Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,
 Till that the weary<sup>a</sup> very means do ebb ?
 What woman in the city do I name
 When that I say, The city-woman bears
 The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders ?
 Who can come in, and say that I mean her,
 When such a one as she, such is her neighbour ?
 Or what is he of basest function,
 That says, his bravery<sup>b</sup> is not on my cost,
 (Thinking that I mean him,) but therein suits
 His folly to the mettle of my speech ?
 There then ; How then ? what then ? Let me see wher'in
 My tongue hath wrong'd him : if it do him right,
 Then he hath wrong'd himself ; if he be free,
 Why, then my taxing<sup>c</sup> like a wild goose flies,
 Unclaim'd of any man.—But who comes here ?

Enter ORLANDO, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of ?

Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress,
 Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
 That in civility thou seem'st so empty ?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first ; the thorny point
 Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show
 Of smooth civility : yet am I inland bred,
 And know some nurture.<sup>d</sup> But, forbear, I say ;
 He dies that touches any of this fruit
 Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jaq. An you will not be answered with reason, I must die.

Duke S. What would you have ? Your gentleness shall force,

More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for fool, and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to
 table.

Orl. Speak you so gently ? Pardon me, I pray you
 I thought that all things had been savage here ;
 And therefore put I on the countenance
 Of stern commandment : But whate'er you are,
 That in this desert inaccessible,
 Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
 Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time ;
 If ever you have look'd on better days ;
 If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church ;
 If ever sat at any good man's feast ;
 If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear,
 And know what 't is to pity and be pitied ;
 Let gentleness my strong enforcement be :
 In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days ;
 And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church ;
 And sat at good men's feasts ; and wip'd our eyes
 Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd :
 And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
 And take upon command<sup>e</sup> what help we have.
 That to your wanting may be minister'd.

Orl. Then, but forbear your food a little while,
 Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
 And give it food. There is an old poor man,
 Who after me hath many a weary step
 Limp'd in pure love ; till he be first suffic'd,
 Oppress'd with two weak evils,<sup>f</sup> age and hunger,
 I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go, find him out,
 And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye : and be bless'd for your good comfort ! [Exit]

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy :
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jag. All the world 's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players :
They have their exits, and their entrances ;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms :
Then the whining schoolboy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school : and then, the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow : Then, a soldier ;
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth : and then, the justice ;
In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part : The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon ;
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side ;
His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank ; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound : Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion ;
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

Re-enter ORLANDO, with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome : Set down your venerable burthen,
And let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need ;
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome, fall to : I will not trouble you
As yet, to question you about your fortunes :—
Give us some music ; and, good cousin, sing.

AMIRNS SINGS.

SONG.

I.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind<sup>a</sup>
As man's ingratitude ;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude,
Heigh ho ! sing, heigh ho ! unto the green holly !
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly !
Then, heigh ho ! the holly !
This life is most jolly.

II.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
Thou dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot :
Though thou the waters warp,<sup>b</sup>
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend remember'd not.
Heigh ho ! sing, heigh ho ! &c.

Duke S. If that you were the good sir Rowland's
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were ;
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limn'd, and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither : I am the duke
That lov'd your father : The residue of your fortune
Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is ;
Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, OLIVER, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since ? Sir, sir, that cannot be :
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument<sup>a</sup>
Of my revenge, thou present : But look to it ;
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is ;
Seek him with candle ;<sup>b</sup> bring him dead or living
Wi'hin this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.
Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands ;
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth,
Of what we think against thee.

Oliv. O, that your highness knew my heart in this !
I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors ;

And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his house and lands ;
Do this expediently,<sup>c</sup> and turn him going. [Exit]

SCENE II.—The Forest.

Enter ORLANDO, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love :
And, thou, thrice-crowned queen of night, survey
With thy chaste eye from thy pale sphere above,
Thy hutchess' name, that my full life doth sway.

O Rosalind ! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character ;
That every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd everywhere.
Run, run, Orlando ; carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive<sup>e</sup> she.

Enter CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, my Touchstone ?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself it is good life ; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life it is naught. In respect that it is solitary I like it well ; but in respect that it is private it is a very life. Now, in respect it is in the fields it pleases well ; but in respect it is not in the court it is tedious.
As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour ;
but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd ?

Cor. No more, but that I know, the more one is the worse at ease he is ; and that he that wants means, and content, is without three good friends : the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn ; the good pasture makes fat sheep ; and that a great part of the night is lack of the sun : That he that learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of breeding,<sup>d</sup> or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. What ever in court, shepherd ?

 comes young master Ganymede, my new

 Must find love's prick and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses: Why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool; I found them on a tree.
 Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit in the country: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter CELIA, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace!
 Here comes my sister, reading; stand aside.

Cel. "Why should this desert be?<sup>a</sup>
 For it is unpeopled? No;
 Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
 That shall civil sayings show.
 Some, how brief the life of man
 Runs his erring<sup>b</sup> pilgrimage;
 That the stretching of a span
 Buckles in his sum of age.
 Some, of violated vows
 'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
 But upon the fairest boughs,
 Or at every sentence's end,
 Will I Rosalinda write;
 Teaching all that read, to know
 The quintessence of every sprite
 Heaven would in little<sup>c</sup> show.
 Therefore Heaven nature charg'd
 That one body should be fill'd
 With all graces wide enlarg'd:
 Nature presently distill'd
 Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
 Cleopatra's majesty;
 Atalanta's better part;
 Sad Lucretia's modesty.
 Thus Rosalind of many parts
 By heavenly synd was devis'd;
 Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
 To have the touches<sup>d</sup> dearest priz'd.
 Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
 And I to live and die her slave."

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter! what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, "Have patience, good people!"

Cel. How now! back, friends;—Shepherd, go off a little: go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. [Exeunt Cor. and Touch.

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O, yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter; the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear, without wondering how thy name should be hanged and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree: I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?
 Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck: Change you colour?
 Ros. I prithee, who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?
 Cel. Is it possible?
 Ros. Nay, I pray thee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping.<sup>a</sup>

Ros. Good my complexion!<sup>b</sup> dost thou think, though I am comparis'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery.<sup>c</sup> I prithee, tell me, who is it? quickly, and speak apace: I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouthed bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I prithee take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.
 Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.
 Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful; let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando; that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking; speak sad brow, and true maid.<sup>d</sup>

Cel. I' faith, coz, 't is he.
 Ros. Orlando?
 Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose?—What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth<sup>e</sup> first: 't is a word too great for any mouth of this age's size: To say ay, and no, to these particulars, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, as to resolve the propositions of a lover: but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with a good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped acorn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretched along, like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry, holla! to the tongue, I prithee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnished like a hunter.

Ros. O ominous! he comes to kill my hart!

<sup>c</sup> My curiosity can endure no longer. If you perplex me any farther I have a space for conjecture as wide as the South-sea.

<sup>e</sup> Gargantua's mouth—the mouth of the giant of Rabelais, who swallowed five pilgrims in a salad.

Cel. I would sing my song without a lute, but I'll bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? who I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter ORLANDO and JAQUES.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he?
 Ros. 'T is he; slink by, and note him.

[CEL. and ROS. exit.]
 Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, if I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion sake, you too for your society.

Jaq. God be with you; let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more of my veins reading them ill-favour'dly.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers: Have you been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and have you sold them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right plainly from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit; I think it will out of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me, we two will rail against our mistress the world, and our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but myself; against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'T is a fault I will not change for any other virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drowned in the brook; look but you shall see him.

Jaq. There shall I see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a clown.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you: farewell, signior Love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure; adieu, good monsieur Melancholy.

[Exit JAQ.—CEL. and ROS. come.]

Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lacquey, under that habit play the knave with him.—hear, forester?

Orl. Very well; What would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is 't a clock?

Orl. You should ask me what time o' day; no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest; sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, he detects the lazy foot of time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time? that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir: Time travels in divers persons: I'll tell you who Time trots withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I prithee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day that she is solemnized: if the interim be but a sear-night, the pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

<sup>a</sup> Bring me out—put me out.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout: for the one sleeps easily, because cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because feels no pain: the one lacking the burthen of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burthen save tedious penury: These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon to die.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how the minutes creep.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here, in the bow of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the coney, that you see dwell where she is bred.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could have in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but, indeed, an religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship well, for there he fell in love. I have heard read many lectures against it; and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy humours as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like another, as halfpence are: every one fault seeming steeper, till its fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I prithee recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest sometimes over young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on hollies; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind: I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaked; I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: might me how to know a man in love; in which case of madness, I am sure, you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not: a blue and smoken; which you have not: an unquestionable spirit; which you have not: a beard neglected; which you have not: (but I pardon you for that; for, truly, your having in beard is a younger brother's excuse;) Then your hose should be ungartered, your shirt unbuttoned, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and everything about you demonstrating a careless dissipation. But you are no such man; you are rather a joint-stevie<sup>a</sup> in your accoutrements; as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe

Ros. Me believe it? you may as soon make her that loves believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the law which women still give the lie to their consciences. But,

<sup>a</sup> Joint-stevie—joint-stiver.

in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark-house and a whip as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too: Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living<sup>a</sup> humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook merely monastic: And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will: tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you: and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind:—Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY; JAQUES at a distance, observing them.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey; I will fetch up your goats, Audrey: And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaq. O knowledge ill-inhabited! <sup>b</sup> worse than Jove in a thatched house! [Aside.]

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room: Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest; now, if thou wert a poet I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favoured: for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Aud. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest!

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.<sup>b</sup>

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! sluttiness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting. [Aside.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said, Many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 't is none of his own getting. Horns? Even so: Poor men alone? No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal.<sup>c</sup> Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a walled town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor: and by how much defence<sup>d</sup> is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir OLIVER MARTEXT.

Here comes sir Oliver:—Sir Oliver Martext, you are well met: Will you despatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the woman?

Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [discovering himself.] Proceed, proceed; I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good master "What ye call 't:" How do you, sir? You are very well met: God 'ild you<sup>e</sup> for your last company: I am very glad to see you:—Even a toy in hand here, sir:—Nay; pray be covered.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaq. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot; then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and, like green timber, warp, warp.

Touch. I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another: for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

[Aside.

Jaq. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey:

We must be married, or we must live in bawdry. Farewell, good master Oliver!

<sup>c</sup> Rascal is the hunter's term given to deer lean and out of season.

<sup>d</sup> Any means of defence is better than the lack of science; in proportion as something is to nothing.

<sup>e</sup> God yield you—give you recompense.

Not O sweet Oliver,
O brave Oliver,
Leave me not behind thee:
But wind away,
Begone I say,
I will not to wedding with thee.

[Exeunt JAQ., TOUCH., &

Sir Oli. 'T is no matter; ne'er a fantastic of them all shall flout me out of my calling.

SCENE IV.—The same. Before a Cottage.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. Never talk to me, I will weep.

Cel. Do, I prithee; but yet have the grace to order that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire; weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's: his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I' faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour: your chesnut was only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctified touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of I know not what nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religious than the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come to-morrow, and comes not?

Cel. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes; I think he is not a pick-purse, horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think as concave as a covered goblet,<sup>a</sup> or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but, I think he is not.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright?

Cel. Was is not is: besides, the oath of a lover is stronger than the word of a tapster; they are confirmers of false reckonings: He attends his father's forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much to do with him: He asked me, of what party you were; I told him, of as good as he; so he laugh'd at me. But what talk we of fathers, when we have such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave words, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and does them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, that spurs his horse but one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose: but all that youth mounts, and folly guides:—Where is he?

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft inquired after the shepherd that complain'd of love; Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly played, Between the pale complexion of true love And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove;

The sight of lovers feedeth those in love:

<sup>a</sup> The goblet is covered when it is empty; when drunk out of, the cover is removed.

his sight, and you shall say a busy actor in their play.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

O Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe:
Do love me not; but say not so as: The common executioner, at the accustomed sight of death makes
and,

as axe upon the humbled neck,
as pardon; Will you sterner be as dies and lives by bloody drops?

ALIND, CELIA, and CORIN, at a distance.

ould not be thy executioner;
or I would not injure thee.
me, there is murder in mine eye;
sure, and very probable,
hat are the frailst and softest things,
hair coward gates on atomies,
all'd tyrants, butchers, murderers!
town on thee with all my heart;
as eyes can wound, now let them kill thee;
erfist to swoon; why, now fall down;
canst not, O, for shame, for shame,
say mine eyes are murderers.

he wound mine eye hath made in thee:
e but with a pin, and there remains of it; lean upon a rush,
te and capable * impressure,
some moment keeps: but now mine eyes,
are darted at thee, hurt thee not;
sure, there is no force in eyes to hurt.

O dear Phebe, that ever may be near)
in some fresh cheek the power of fancy, you know the wounds invisible that keen arrows make.

But, till that time,
how near me; and, when that time comes,
with thy mocks, pity me not;
at time, I shall not pity thee.
d why, I pray you? [Advancing.] Who right be your mother?

ault, exult, and all at once, wretched? What though you have no
santy,

faith, I see no more in you
at candle may go dark to bed, e therefore proud and pitiless?
means this? Why do you look on me?
e in you than in the ordinary saw-work:—O'd's my little life!
means to tangle my eyes too:—
proud mistress, hope not after it;
as inky brows, your black silk hair,
eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream,
stame my spirits to your worship.
shepherd, wherefore do you follow her,
south, puffing with wind and rain?
leasant times a properer man, woman; 'T is such fools as you
the world full of ill-favour'd children:
e glass, but you, that flatters her;
you she sees herself more proper of her lineaments can show her.

as know yourself; down on your knees,
Heaven, fasting, for a good man's love:
tell you friendly in your ear,
you can; you are not for all markets:

* Capable—able to receive.

Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer;
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So, take her to thee, shepherd; fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together;
I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger: If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am false than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: If you will know my house,
'T is at the tuft of olives, here hard by:—
Will you go, sister? Shepherd, ply her hard;
Come, sister: Shepherdess, look on him better,
And be not proud: though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as he.

Come, to our flock. [Exeunt Ros., CELIA, and COR.]

Phe. Dead shepherd! now I find thy saw of might;
"Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?"

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—

Phe. Ha! what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be;

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief
Were both exterrin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love; Is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was that I hated thee;
And yet it is not that I bear thee love:
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompense
Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me
erewhile?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;
And he hath bought the cottage, and the bounds,
That the old carlot * once was master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him;
'T is but a peevish boy:—yet he talks well:—
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.

It is a pretty youth:—not very pretty:—
But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes
him:

He'll make a proper man: The best thing in him
Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.
He is not very tall; yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so; and yet 't is well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip;
A little riper and more lusty red
Than that mix'd in his cheek; 't was just the difference

Betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask.
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but, for my part,
I love him not, nor hate him not; and yet
Have more cause to hate him than to love him:

* Carlot—churl or peasant.

For what had he to do to chide at me?
He said, mine eyes were black, and my hair black;
And now I am remember'd, scorn'd at me;
I marvel why I answer'd not again:
But that 's all one: omittance is no quittance.
I 'll write to him a very taunting letter,

And thou shalt bear it; Wilt thou, Silvius
Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phe. I 'll write it
The matter 's in my head, and in my heart
I will be bitter with him, and passing short
Go with me, Silvius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and JAQUES.

Jaq. I prithee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

Jaq. I am so: I do love it better than laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows; and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 't is good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why, then, 't is good to be a post.

Jaq. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice;<sup>a</sup> nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and, indeed, the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad: I fear, you have sold your own lands, to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter ORLANDO.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind!

Jaq. Nay, then, God be wi' you, an you talk in blank verse. [Exit.

Ros. Farewell, monsieur traveller: Look you lip and wear strange suits; disable<sup>b</sup> all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.—Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover?—An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love? He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid bath clapped him o' the shoulder, but I 'll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight; I had as lief be wooed of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman: Besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What 's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholden to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no norm-maker; and my virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so; but Rosalind of a better leer<sup>a</sup> than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now holiday humour, and like enough to consent would you say to me now, an I were your Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; as were gravelled for lack of matter, you might sion to kiss. Very good orators, when they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were tress; or I should think my honesty ran wit.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say—I will not.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The almost six thousand years old, and in all that was not any man died in his own person, nor love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed Grecian club: yet he did what he could; and he is one of the patterns of love.

He would have lived many a fair year, though he had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot night: for, good youth, he went but forth in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the drowned; and the foolish chroniclers<sup>b</sup> of that it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all have died from time to time, and worms eat them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly now I will be your Rosalind in a more convenient position; and ask me what you will, I will answer.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays, and Saturdays.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why, then, can one desire too much of a thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest us.—Give me your hand, Orlando:—Wilt you be my sister?

<sup>a</sup> Leer—feature.

<sup>b</sup> We must accept chroniclers in the sense of

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin,—“Will you, Orlando,”—

Cel. Go to:—“Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?”

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why, now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—“I take thee, Rosalind, to wife.”

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but,—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: There's a girl you before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me, how long you would have her, after you have possessed her.

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: to wear the waywarder: Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 't will out at the key-hole; stop that, 't will fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say,—“Wit, whither wilt?”

Ros. Nay, you might keep that cheek for it, till you see your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never see her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner; by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways;—I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:—that flattering tongue of yours won me,—'t is but one cast away, and so,—come, death.—Two o'clock is your hour?

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my truth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most unconstant break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be shown out of the gross band of the unfaithful: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion than if thou wert indeed Rosalind: So, adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all offenders, and let Time try: Adieu! [Exit ORL.]
Orl. You have simply misused our sex in your love: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

* Take the doors—the language of the midland counties for they fit the doors.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love:—I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter JAQUES and LORDS, in the habit of Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

1 Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory:—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it; 't is no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

1. What shall he have that kill'd the deer?

2. His leather skin, and horns to wear.

Take thou no scorn, to wear the horn;

It was a crest ere thou wast born.

1. Thy father's father wore it;

2. And thy father bore it;

All. The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Forest.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth—to sleep: Look, who comes here.

Enter SILVIUS.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;—My gentle Phebe did bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter]

I know not the contents; but, as I guess, By the stern brow, and waspish action Which she did use as she was writing of it, It bears an angry tenor: pardon me, I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter, And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: She says, I am not fair; that I lack manners; She calls me proud; and, that she could not love me Were man as rare as phoenix; Od's my will! Her love is not the hare that I do hunt. Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd, well, This is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents; Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool, And turn'd into the extremity of love.

I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, A freestone-colour'd hand; I verily did think That her old gloves were on, but 't was her hands; She has a huswife's hand: but that's no matter:

* Much Orlando—ironically, a great deal of Orlando.

*I say, she never did invent this letter—
This is a man's invention, and his hand.*

Sil. Sure, it is his.

*Ros. Why, 't is a deliberate and a cruel style,
A style for challenges; why, she defies me,
Like Death to Christian: woman's gentle hand
Could not drop forth such giant made invention,
Such Rithony words, blinder in their effect
Than in their countenance:—Will you hear the letter?*

*Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phoebe's cruelty.*

Ros. She Phoebe me: Mark how the rhymer writes.

*" Art thou got to shepherd's work? "
That a snail's heart hath turn'd? "*—

Can a woman kill time?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. " Why, thy goddess laid apart, Wear'st thou with a woman's heart? "

Did you ever hear such railing?

*" Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance " to me. "*

Meaning me a heart—

*" If the stars of your bright eye
Have power to mine such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange offer
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whiles you did me, I did love;
How then might your purple move?
He that brings this love to thee
Little knows this love in me;
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die. "*

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Col. Alas, poor shepherd!

*Ros. Do you pity him? no, he deserves no pity.—
Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee! not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tame snake,) and say this to her;—
That if she love me, I charge her to love thee: if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her.—If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word;
for here comes more company.* [Exit SILVIUS.

Enter OLIVER.

*Ol. Good morrow, fair ones: Pray you, if you know Where, in the purlieus of this forest, stands
A sheep-cote, fenc'd about with olive-trees?*

Col. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom,

*The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream,
Left on your right hand,<sup>a</sup> brings you to the place:
But at this hour the house doth keep itself,
There's none within.*

*Ol. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description;
Such garments, and such years: " The boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister: the woman low,
And browner than her brother. " Are not you
The owner of the house I did inquire for?*

Col. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say, we are.

*Ol. Orlando doth commend him to you both;
And to that youth, he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloody napkin; Are you he?*

Ros. I am; what must we understand by this?

*Ol. Some of my shame; if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.*

Col.

I pray you, tell it.

*Ol. When last the young Orlando parted his
you,*

*He left a promise to return again
Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! he threw his eye aside,
And mark, what object did present itself!
Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age,*

*And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with cubs all drawn dry,
Lay crouching, head on ground, with catlike watch,
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 't is
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead;
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.*

*Col. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother
And he did render " him the most unnatural
That liv'd 'mongst men.*

*Ol. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.*

*Ros. But, to Orlando;—Did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?*

*Ol. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd to:
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,<sup>b</sup>
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him; in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awak'd.*

Col. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescu'd?

*Col. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill
him?*

*Ol. 'T was I; but 't is not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.*

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?—

Ol. By and by.

*When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As, how I came into that desert place;—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fain'd,
And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind
Brief, I recover'd him; bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dyed in this blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.*

Col. Why, how now, Ganymede? sweet Ganymede!

Ol. Many will swoon when they do look at blood. [ROSALIND faints.]

Col. There is more in it;—Cousin—Ganymede!

I would I were at home.
 We'll lead you thither:—
 Will you take him by the arm?
 He of good cheer, youth:—You a man?—
 A man's heart.
 I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirra, a body would as was well counterfeited: I pray you, tell your or well I counterfeited.—Heigh ho!
 This was not counterfeited; there is too great ten-your complexion, that it was a passion of

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
 Oli. Well, then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
 Ros. So I do: but, i' faith, I should have been a woman by right.
 Cel. Come, you look paler and paler; pray you, draw homewards:—Good sir, go with us.
 Oli. That will I, for I must bear answer back
 How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
 Ros. I shall devise something: But, I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him:—Will you go?
 [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

We shall find a time, Audrey; patience,
 Audrey.
 Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the eman's saying.
 A most wicked sir Oliver, Audrey, a most text. But, Audrey, there is a youth here in lays claim to you.
 Ay, I know who 't is; he hath no interest in the world: here comes the man you mean.

Enter WILLIAM.

It is meat and drink to me to see a clown:
 troth, we that have good wits have much to or; we shall be flouting; we cannot hold.
 Good even, Audrey.
 God ye good even, William.
 And good even to you, sir.
 Good even, gentle friend: Cover thy head, y head; nay, prithee, be covered. How old friend?
 Five-and-twenty, sir.
 A ripe age: Is thy name William?
 William, sir.
 A fair name: Was't born i' the forest here?
 Ay, sir, I thank God.
 Thank God!—a good answer: Art rich?
 Faith, sir, so so.
 So so is good, very good, very excellent and yet it is not; it is but so so. Art thou

Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.
 Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember y; "The fool doth think he is wise, but the as knows himself to be a fool." The heathen der, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would lips when he put it into his mouth; meaning that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open.
 kers this maid?
 I do, sir.
 Give me your hand: Art thou learned?
 No, sir.
 Then learn this of me; To have, is to have:
 a figure in rhetoric, that drink, being poured con into a glass, by filling the one doth empty it. For all your writers do consent,<sup>a</sup> that ipse is as you are not ipse, for I am he.
 Which he, sir?
 He, sir, that must marry this woman: Thereas, clown, abandon, which is in the vulgar, leave, sey, which in the boorish is, company, of this which in the common is, woman, which toge-abandon the society of this female; or, clown,

<sup>a</sup> Conveni—concur.

thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest:
 or to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'errun thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways;
 therefore tremble, and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, sir.

[Exit.]

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Our master and mistress seeks you; come, away, away.

Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey;—I attend, I attend.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter ORLANDO and OLIVER.

Ori. Is 't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her?
 and, loving, woo? and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persevere to enjoy her?

Oli. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me,
 I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old sir Rowland's, will I estate<sup>a</sup> upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Enter ROSALIND.

Ori. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Oli. And you, fair sister.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf!

Ori. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Ori. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to sound,<sup>b</sup> when he showed me your handkercher?

Ori. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are:—Nay, 't is true:
 there was never anything so sudden, but the fight of two rams, and Cæsar's thrasonical brag of—"I came, saw, and overcame:" For your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no

sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy : and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent,* or else be incontinent before marriage : they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together ; clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow ; and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes ! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why, then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind ?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you no longer than with idle talking. Know of me then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit : I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch, I say, I know you are ; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe, then, if you please, that I can do strange things : I have, since I was three year old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena shall you marry her : I know into what straits of fortune she is driven ; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings ?

Ros. By my life I do ; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician : Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends ; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall ; and to Rosalind, if you will.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness, To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have : it is my study To seem despiteful and ungentle to you : You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd ; Look upon him, love him ; he worships you.

Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 't is to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears ;— And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service ;— And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes ;
All adoration, duty and observance,
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience,
All purity, all trial, all observance ;
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you ?

[To ROS.]

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you ?

[To PHE.]

Why is he so, why blame you me to love you ?
do you speak to, " why blame you me to love you ?"

* Incontinent—immediately

Orl. To her, that is not here, nor doth not need

Ros. Pray you, no more of this ; 't is like the ing of Irish wolves against the moon.—I will help [to SILVIUS] if I can :—I would love you, [to P
if I could.—To-morrow meet me all together.—
marry you, [to PHEBE] if ever I marry woman
I 'll be married to-morrow :—I will satisfy yo ORLANDO] if ever I satisfied man, and you sh married to-morrow :—I will content you, [to Su
if what pleases you contents you, and you shall b ried to-morrow.—As you [to ORLANDO] love Ros meet ;—as you [to SILVIUS] love Phebe, meet ;
I love no woman, I 'll meet.—So, fare you well ;
left you commands.

Sil. I 'll not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I. [E

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audre morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart : and I is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman world.* Here comes two of the banished duke's

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentleman.

Touch. By my troth, well met : Come, sit, sit a song.

2 Page. We are for you : sit i' the middle.

1 Page. Shall we clap into 't roundly, w hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse ;
are the only prologues to a bad voice ?

2 Page. I' faith, i' faith ; and both in a tune two gipsies on a horse.

SONG.

I.

It was a lover, and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o'er the green corn-field did pass,
In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding ;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

II.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino ;
For love is crowned with the prime
In spring time, &c.

III.

Between the acres of the rye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
These pretty country folks would lie,
In spring time, &c.

IV.

This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a flower
In spring time, &c.

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was ver tuneable.

1 Page. You are deceived, sir ; we kept time, not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes ; I count it but tim to hear such a foolish song. God be with you ; and mend your voices ! Come, Audrey. [E

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter DUKE SENIOR, AMIENS, JAQUES, ORLANDO, OLIVER, and CELIA.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the
Can do all this that he hath promised ?

* To be married.

sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not; at fear,—they hope, and know they fear.

Enter ROSALIND, SILVIUS, and PHEBE.

Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd:—

[I bring in your Rosalind, [To the DUKE. Bestow her on Orlando here?]

That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

And you say, you will have her, when I bring her?

[To ORLANDO. At would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

And you say, you'll marry me, if I be willing?

[To PHEBE. What will I, should I die the hour after.

But, if you do refuse to marry me, I'll bestow myself to this most faithful shepherd.

And you say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

[To SILVIUS. Enough to have her and death were both one thing.

I have promis'd to make all this matter even.

Your word, O duke, to give your daughter;—

Your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me;—

Your word, to wed this shepherd:—

Your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her, and me:—and from hence I go, and these doubts all even. [Ex. ROS. and CELIA.

I do remember in this shepherd-boy touches of my daughter's favour.

My lord, the first time that I ever saw him, he was a brother to your daughter:

My lord, this boy is forest-born;

My lord, I have seen tutor'd in the rudiments of desperate studies by his uncle, reports to be a great magician, and to be the circle of this forest.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

There is, sure, another flood toward, and these coming to the ark! Here comes a pair of beasts, which in all tongues are called salutation and greeting to you all!

My lord, bid him welcome. This is the best gentleman that I have so often met in the forest; he hath been a courtier, he swears.

If any man doubt that, let him put me to the proof. I have trod a measure; I have flattered; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with my enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have married, and like to have fought one.

How was that ta'en up?*

Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was the seventh cause?—

Good my lord, like this I like him very well.

God bid you, sir; I desire you of the like.

Here, sir, amongst the rest of the country, to swear, and to forswear; according as the wind, and blood breaks: A poor virgin, sir, red thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour, sir, to take that that no man else will: Rich she like a miser, sir, in a poor house; as in your fool oyster.

By my faith, he is very swift and sensible.

According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such such.

* Ta'en up—made up.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed;—Bear your body more seeming,* Audrey:—as thus, sir. I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard; he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: This is called the "Retort courteous." If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: This is called the "Quip modest." If again, it was not well cut, he disabled<sup>b</sup> my judgment: This is called the "Reply churlish." If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: This is called the "Reproof valiant." If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: This is called the "Countercheck quarrelsome:" and so to the "Lie circumstantial," and the "Lie direct."

Jaq. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the "Lie circumstantial," nor he durst not give me the "Lie direct;" and so we measured swords and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book; as you have books for good manners. I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as, "If you said so, then I said so;" and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good at anything, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter HYMEN, leading ROSALIND and CELIA.

Still Music.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.<sup>c</sup>
Good duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea, brought her hither;
That thou mightst join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Ros. To you I give myself, for I am yours.

[To DUKE S. To you I give myself, for I am yours. [To ORLANDO.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true,

Why, then,—my love adieu!

Ros. I'll have no father, if you be not he:— [To DUKE S.

I'll have no husband, if you be not he:— [To ORL.

Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she. [To PHEBE.

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:
'T is I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here 's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.

* Seeming—seemly.

<sup>c</sup> Atone together—unite.

You and you no cross shall part :

[To ORL. and Ros.]

You and you are heart in heart :

[To OLI. and CRI.]

You [to PHE.] to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord :—

You and you are sure together,

[To TOUCH. and AUD.]

As the winter to foul weather.

Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,

Feed yourselves with questioning ;<sup>a</sup>

That reason wonder may diminish,

How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown ;
O blessed bond of board and bed !
'T is Hymen peoples every town,
High wedlock then be honoured :
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town !

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me ;

Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. I will not eat my word ; now thou art mine, Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine. [To SIL.]

Enter JAQUES DE BOIS.

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word, or two ;
I am the second son of old sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly :
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Address'd<sup>b</sup> a mighty power ; which were on foot,
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword :
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came ;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise, and from the world :
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again
That were with him exil'd : This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man ;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding :
To one, his lands withheld ; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot :
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with us,

<sup>a</sup> Questioning—discoursing.    <sup>b</sup> Address'd—prepared.

Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.

Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,

And fall into our rustic revelry :—

Play, music ;—and you brides and bridegroom

With measure heap'd in joy, to the measure

Jaq. Sir, by your patience ; If I heard you

The duke hath put on a religious life,

And thrown into neglect the pompous court

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I : out of these convert

There is much matter to be heard and learn

You to your former honour I bequeath ; [

Your patience, and your virtue, well deserve

You [to ORLANDO] to a love that your true

merit :—

You [to OLIVER] to your land, and love, as lies :—

You [to SILVIUS] to a long and well-deserv'd

And you [to TOUCHSTONE] to wrangling ;

ing voyage

Is but for two months victuall'd :—So to you

I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime I :—what you would

I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave.

Duke S. Proceed, proceed : we will begin

And we do trust they'll end in true delight

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady first but it is no more unhandsome, than to see prologue. If it be true, that "good wine bush," 't is true, that a good play needs
Yet to good wine they do use good bushes plays prove the better for the help of good What a case am I in then, that am neither logue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the good play ! I am not furnished like a beggar to beg will not become me : my way is you ; and I'll begin with the women. I O women, for the love you bear to men, to of this play as please you : and I charge you for the love you bear to women, (as I perceive simpering, none of you hates them,) that and the women, the play may please woman, I would kiss as many of you as that pleased me, complexions that liked me that I defied not : and, I am sure, as many good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

F. W. QUARTLEY SCULPT.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS comedy was first printed in the folio collection of 1623. The original edition is divided into acts and scenes. It also gives the enumeration of characters as we have printed them, such a list of "the names of the actors" being rarely presented in the early copies. It has been recently ascertained that 'Measure for Measure' was presented at Court by the King's players (the company to which Shakspeare belonged) in 1601.

The general outline of the story upon which 'Measure for Measure' is founded is presented to us in such different forms, and with reference to such distinct times and persons, that, whether historically true or not, we can have no doubt of its universal interest. It is told of an officer of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy; of Oliver le Diable, the wicked favourite of Louis XI.; of Colonel Kirke, in our own country; of a captain of the Duke of Ferrara. In all these cases an unhappy woman sacrifices her own honour for the promised safety of one she loves; and in all, with the exception of the case of Colonel Kirke, the abuser of authority is punished with death. Whatever interest may attach to the narrative of such an event, it is manifest that the dramatic conduct of such a story is full of difficulty, especially in a scrupulous age. But the public opinion, which, in this particular, would operate upon a dramatist in our own day, would not affect a writer for the stage in the times of Elizabeth and James; and, in point of fact, plots far more offensive became the subject of very popular dramas long after the times of Shakspeare. It appears to us that, adopting such a subject in its general bearings, he has managed it with uncommon adroitness by his deviations from the accustomed story. By introducing a contrivance by which the heroine is not sacrificed, he preserves our respect for her, which would be involuntarily lost if she fell, even though against her own will; and by this management he is also enabled to spare the great offender without an unbearable violation of our sense of justice.

The leading idea of the character of Isabella is that of one who abides the direst temptation which can be presented to a youthful, innocent, unsuspecting, and affectionate woman—the temptation of saving the life of one most dear, by submitting to a shame which the sophistry of self-love might represent as scarcely criminal. All other writers who have treated the subject have conceived that the temptation could not be resisted. Shakspeare alone has confidence enough in female virtue to make Isabella never for a moment even doubt of her proper course. But he has based this virtue, most unquestionably, upon the very highest principle upon which any virtue can be built. The foundation of Isabella's character is religion. The character of Angelo is the antagonist to that of Isabella. In a city of licentiousness he is "A man of stricture and firm abstinence."

He is

"Precise;

Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows."

He is one who

"Doth rebate and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast."

But he wanted the one sustaining principle by which Isabella was upheld. After Shakspeare had conceived the character of Isabella, and in that conception had made it certain that her virtue must pass unscathed through the fire, he had to contrive a series of incidents by which the catastrophe should proceed onward through all the stages of Angelo's guilt of intention, and terminate in his final exposure. Mr. Hallam says, "There is great skill in the invention of Mariana, and without this the story could not have anything like a satisfactory termination." But there is great skill also in the management of the incident in the Duke's hands, as well as in the invention; and this is produced by the wonderful propriety with which the character of the Duke is drawn. He is described by Hazlitt as a very imposing and mysterious stage character, absorbed in his own plots and gravity. This is said depreciatingly. But it is precisely this sort of character that Shakspeare meant to put in action.

And here, then, as it appears to us, we have a key to the purpose of the poet in the introduction of what constitutes the most unpleasant portion of this play,—the exhibition of a very gross general profligacy. There is an atmosphere of impurity hanging like a dense fog over the city of the poet. The philosophical ruler, the saintly votaress, and the sanctimonious deputy, appear to belong to another region to that in which they move. This, possibly, was not necessary for the higher dramatic effects of the comedy; but it was necessary for those lessons of political philosophy which we think Shakspeare here meant to inculcate, and which he appears to us on many occasions to have kept in view in his later plays. In this play he manifests, as we apprehend, his philosophical view of a corrupt state of manners fostered by weak government: but the subject is scarcely dramatic, and it struggles with his own proper passions.

SCENE,—VIENNA.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE, ESCALUS, Lords, and Attendants.

Enter Escalus,—

My lord.

*Of government the properties to unfold, I seem in me to affect speech and discourse; I am not to know,* that your own science is, in that, the lists<sup>b</sup> of all advice which can give you: Then, no more remains: sit, to your sufficiency as your worth, is able; let them work.<sup>c</sup> The nature of our people, thy's institutions, and the terms<sup>d</sup> of common justice, you are as pregnant in, and practice hath enriched any of us to remember: There is our commission, which we would not have you warp.—Call hither, bid come before us Angelo.—[Exit an Attendant.] Figure of us think you he will bear? We must know, we have with special soul bid him our absence to supply; bid him our terror, dress'd him with our love; from his deputation all the organs of our own power: What think you of it?*

As to know—equivalent to I cannot avoid knowing.

As to unfold.
 *Remember at the onset one of the obscure passages for this play is remarkable. We believe it may be read thus, it much difficulty: Then, no more remains: (to say on mind) Not that, (your science) to your sufficiency, (joined with authority) as your worth (as well as your virtue) is able; (to the duty) and let them work (call them into action).

Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth To undergo such ample grace and honour, It is lord Angelo.

Enter ANGELO.

Duke. Look, where he comes. Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will, I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo, There is a kind of character<sup>a</sup> in thy life, That, to the observer, doth thy history Fully unfold: Thyself and thy belongings Are not thine own so proper, as to waste Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee. Heaven doth with us as we with torches do; Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues Did not go forth of us, 't were all alike As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd But to fine issues: nor Nature never lends The smallest scruple of her excellence, But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor, Both thanks and use.<sup>b</sup> But I do bend my speech To one that can my part in him advertise;<sup>c</sup> Hold,<sup>d</sup> therefore, Angelo:

<sup>c</sup>My part in him is, my part deputed to him, which he can advertise—direct his attention to—without my speech.

<sup>d</sup>Hold. The word hold is, we believe, addressed to Angelo; and used technically in the sense of to have and to hold. Hold therefore, our power, Angelo.

In our remove, be thou at full yourself:
Mortality and mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart: Old Escalus,
Though first in question, is thy secondary:
Take thy commission.

Ang. Now, good my lord,
Let there be some more test made of my metal,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion:
We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of needful value. We shall write to you,
As time and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with us; and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So, fare you well:
To the hopeful execution do I leave you
Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet, give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it;
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
With any scruple: your scope is as mine own:
So to enforce or qualify the laws
As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand;
I'll privily away: I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and aves vehement:
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.

Ang. The Heavens give safety to your purposes!

Escal. Lead forth, and bring you back in happiness.

Duke. I thank you: Fare you well. [Exit.]

Escal. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have; but of what strength and nature
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'T is so with me:—Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

Escal. I'll wait upon your honour. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. If the duke, with the other dukes, come not to composition with the king of Hungary, why, then all the dukes fall upon the king.

1 Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the king of Hungary's!

2 Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2 Gent. Thou shalt not steal?

Lucio. Ay, that he razed.

1 Gent. Why, 't was a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions; they put forth to steal: There 's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition
well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for I think thou never wast where grace was said.

2 Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What? in metre?

Lucio. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any religion.

2o. Ay! why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: As for example: Thou thyself art villain, despite of all grace.

1 Gent. Well, there went but a pair of shears on.

Lucio. I grant; as there may between the
the velvet: Thou art the list.

1 Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good thou 'rt a three-piled piece, I warrant thee:
Lief be a list of an English kersey, as be piled art piled, for a French velvet. Do I speak
now?

Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, 's painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of 't confession, learn to begin thy health; but whi forget to drink after thee.

1 Gent. I think I have done myself wrong not?

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether tainted or free.

Lucio. Behold, behold, where madam M comes! I have purchased as many diseases roof as come to—

2 Gent. To what, I pray?

Lucio. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars* a-year.

1 Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in thou art full of error; I am sound.

Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy sound as things that are hollow: thy bones an impiety has made a feast of thee.

Enter Bawd.

1 Gent. How now? Which of your hips has profound sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well; there 's one yonder arm carried to prison, was worth five thousand of y

1 Gent. Who 's that, I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry, sir, that 's Claudio, signior C

1 Gent. Claudio to prison! 't is not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 't is so: I saw him saw him carried away; and, which is more, wi three days his head 's to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would n so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it; and it is for ge dam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promises me two hours since; and he was ever precise in keeping.

2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws someth to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the p tion.

Lucio. Away; Let 's go learn the truth of i

[Exeunt Lucio and Ge]

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with th
what with the gallows, and what with pove custom-shrunk. How now? what 's the news?

Enter Clown.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well; what has he done?

Clo. A woman.

Bawd. But what 's his offence?

Clo. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

Bawd. What, is there a maid with child?

Clo. No; but there 's a woman with maid.
You have not heard of the proclamation, have?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Clo. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna plucked down.

* Dollars—a quibble upon dollars.

And what shall become of those in the city? They shall stand for seed: they had gone down but a wise burgher put in for them.

But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pulled down?

To the ground, mistress.

Why, here's a change, indeed, in the countenance! What shall become of me?

Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no though you change your place, you need not our trade; I'll be your tapster still. Courage; I'll be pity taken on you: you that have worn almost out in the service, you will be con-

What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's

Here comes signior Claudio, led by the provost; and there's madam Juliet. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.

Provost, CLAUDIO, JULIET, and Officers; LUCIO and two Gentlemen.

Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world?

To prison, where I am committed.

Do it not in evil disposition,

Lead Angelo by special charge.

Thus can the demi-god, Authority,

Pay down for our offence by weight,<sup>a</sup>—

Of Heaven—on whom it will, it will;

It will not, so; yet still 't is just.

Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:

It is the father of much fast,

Scope, by the immoderate use,

Restraint: Our natures do pursue

That ravish<sup>b</sup> down their proper bane<sup>c</sup>

Evil, and when we drink we die.

If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I Should for certain of my creditors: And yet, to say

I had as lief have the foppery of freedom as

Liberty of imprisonment.—What's thy offence,

What but to speak of would offend again.

What! is't murder?

No.

Lechery?

Call it so.

Away, sir; you must go.

One word, good friend:—Lucio, a word with you.

[Takes him aside.

A hundred, if they'll do you any good.—

So look'd after?

Thus stands it with me:—Upon a true contract,

Seizure of Julietta's bed;

Of the lady; she is fast my wife,

And we do the denunciation lack

Of order: this we came not to,

Propagation of a dowry

Of in the coffer of her friends;

And we thought it meet to hide our love,

Which had made them for us. But it chanced,

That of our most mutual entertainment,

Whose character too gross, is writ on Juliet.

With child, perhaps?

Unhappily, even so.

Send deputy now for the duke,—

That it be the fault and glimpse of newness;

Or that the body public be

Shewn by weight is to pay the full price or penalty.

<sup>a</sup> Rasas—devour greedily.

A horse whereon the governor doth ride,
Who, newly in the seat, that it may know
He can command, lets it straight feel the spur;

Whether the tyranny be in his place,

Or in his eminence that fills it up,

I stagger in:—But this new governor

Awakes me all the enrolled penalties,

Which have, like unscour'd armour, hung by the wall

So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,

And none of them been worn; and, for a name,

Now puts the drowsy and neglected act

Freshly on me:—'t is surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant, it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milkmaid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, but he's not to be found.

I prithee, Lucio, do me this kind service;

This day my sister should the cloister enter,

And there receive her approbation;<sup>a</sup>

Acquaint her with the danger of my state;

Implore her in my voice, that she make friends

To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him;

I have great hope in that: for in her youth

There is a prone<sup>b</sup> and speechless dialect,

Such as moves men; beside, she hath prosperous art

When she will play with reason and discourse,

And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray she may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition; as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I'll to her.

Claud. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours.

Claud. Come, officer, away. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Monastery.

Enter DUKE and Friar THOMAS.

Duke. No, holy father; throw away that thought;

Believe not that the dribbling dart of love

Can pierce a complete bosom: why I desire thee

To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose

More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends

Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than you

How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd;

And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,

Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps.<sup>c</sup>

I have deliver'd to lord Angelo

(A man of stricture<sup>d</sup> and firm abstinence)

My absolute power and place here in Vienna,

And he supposes me travell'd to Poland;

For so I have strew'd it in the common ear,

And so it is receiv'd: Now, pious sir,

You will demand of me why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes, and most biting laws,

(The needful bits and curbs to headstrong steeds,<sup>e</sup>)

Which for this fourteen years we have let slip;<sup>f</sup>

Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave,

That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond fathers

Having bound up the threatening twigs of birch,

Only to stick it in their children's sight,

For terror, not to use, in time the rod

<sup>e</sup> Slip. The Duke compares himself with the animal "who goes not out to prey." He has let the laws slip.

ACT II.

L.—A Hall in Angelo's House.

*ESCALUS, a Justice, Provost,* Officers, and other Attendants.*

Must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Fear<sup>b</sup> the birds of prey,
One shape, till custom make it
And not their terror.

Ay, but yet
And rather cut a little,
Bruise to death: Alas! this gentleman,
I save, had a most noble father.
I honour know,

And to be most straight in virtue,
Seeking of your own affections,
I'd with place, or place with wishing,
I hate acting of our blood<sup>d</sup>
And sin'd the effect of your own purpose,
And not sometime in your life
Sent which now you censure him,<sup>e</sup>
Law upon you.

One thing to be tempted, Escalus,
To fall. I not deny,
Lying on the prisoner's life,
Orn twelve, have a thief or two Whom they try: What's open made to
You,

What know the laws,
That pass on<sup>f</sup> thieves? 'Tis very pregnant,
We find we stoop and take it,
But what we do not see
And never think of it.
To extenuate his offence,
And such faults; but rather tell me
To ensure him, do so offend,
Judgment pattern out my death,
Come in partial. Sir, he must die.
As your wisdom will.

Where is the provost?
If it like your honour.

See that Claudio
Be nine to-morrow morning:
Confessor, let him be prepar'd;
Atmost of his pilgrimage. [Exit Prov.]
Heaven forgive him! and forgive us all!
In, and some by virtue fall:
Breaks of ice, and answer none;
Punished for a fault alone.

Now, FROTH, Clown, Officers, &c.

Bring them away: if these be good Humane that do nothing but use their Man houses, I know no law; bring them Away, sir! What's your name? and what's your name? and what's your name?

My name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon

My name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon

My name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon

My name is Elbow; I do lean upon
Your name is Elbow; I do lean upon

My name is Elbow; I do lean upon

they are: but precise villains they are, that I am sure of; and void of all profanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well; here's a wise officer.

Ang. Go to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Clo. He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir?

Elb. He, sir? a tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, sir, was, as they say, plucked down in the suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before Heaven and your honour,—

Escal. How! thy wife?

Elb. Ay, sir; whom, I thank Heaven, is an honest
woman,—

Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, constable?

Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elb. Ay, sir, by mistress Overdone's means: but as she spit in his face, so she defied him.

Clo. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Escal. Do you hear how he misplaces? [To Ang.]

Clo. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing (saving your honour's reverence) for stewed prunes: sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some three-pence; your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escal. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, sir.

Clo. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great bellied, and longing, as I said, for prunes; and having but two in the dish, as I said, master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly;—for, as you know, master Froth, I could not give you three-pence again.

Froth. No, indeed.

Clo. Very well: you being then, if you be remembered, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes.

Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Clo. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remembered, that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Froth. All this is true.

Clo. Why, very well then.

Escal. Come, you are a tedious fool: to the purpose.
—What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave: And, I beseech you, look into master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a-year; whose father died at Hallowmas:—Was 't not at Hallowmas, master Froth?

Froth. All-hallownd eve.

Clo. Why, very well; I hope here be trutis: He,

is here a kind of sheriff—a keeper of prisoners.
affright.
erth is here used actively. We still say to fall
ably Shallopere had this image in his mind.
by mean, one nature—the nature of man.
herstand for after censure him.
demn, adjulluste. † For—because.

sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir;—'t was in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit: Have you not?

Froth. I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter.

Clo. Why, very well then;—I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave, And leave you to the bearing of the cause; Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Escal. I think no less: Good morrow to your lordship.

[Exit ANGELO.]

Now, sir, come on: What was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Clo. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escal. Well, sir: What did this gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face:—Good master Froth, look upon his honour; 't is for a good purpose: Doth your honour mark his face?

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Escal. Well, I do so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Escal. Why, no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him: Good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right: Constable, what say you to it?

Elb. First, as it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest, wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that she was ever respected, with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Escal. Which is the wiser here? Justice, or Iniquity?—Is this true?

Elb. O thou caitiff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her! If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer:—Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escal. If he took you a box o' th' ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for it: What is 't your worship's pleasure I should do with this wicked caitiff?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it:—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come upon thee; thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Escal. Where were you born, friend? [To FROTH.]

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a-year?

Froth. Yes, an 't please you, sir.

Elb. So.—What trade are you of, sir? [To the Clo.]

A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Your mistress's name?

Mistress Overdone.

Hath she had any more than one husband?

Nine, sir; Overdone by the last.

Escal. Nine!—Come hither to me, ma Master Froth, I would not have you acquit tapsters: they will draw you, master Froth will hang them: Get you gone, and let us be more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship: For mine I never come into any room in a taphouse, drawn in.

Escal. Well; no more of it, master Froth [Exit FROTH.].—Come you hither to me, master; what's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Escal. What else?

Clo. Bum, sir.

Escal. 'Troth, and your bum is the great about you; so that, in the beastliest sense Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being. Are you not? come, tell me true; it shall be for you.

Clo. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that w

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? hawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and the youth of the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they then: If your worship will take order for the the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning you: It is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend but for ten year together, you'll be glad to commission for more heads. If this law hold ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it a pence a bay: If you live to see this come to Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey: and, in your prophecy, hark you,—I advise you, let me see you before me again upon any complaint; no, not for dwelling where you do; if I do, shall beat you to your tent, and prove a sin to you; in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall whipped: so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your worship for your good but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune determine.

Whip me? No, no; let carman whip his horse. The valiant heart's not whipped out of his breast.

Escal. Come hither to me, master Elbow, hither, master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by your readiness in the had continued in it some time: You say, seven year together?

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas! it hath been great pains to you do you wrong to put you so oft upon 't: Are there men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such a ward as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me, I do it for some piece of money, and go through.

Escal. Look you bring me in the names of the most sufficient of your parish.

Elb. To your worship's house, sir?

Escal. To my house: Fare you well. [Exit ELBOW.]

What's o'clock, think you?

Just. Eleven, sir.

Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me.

I humbly thank you.
It grieves me for the death of Claudio;
There's no remedy.
Lord Angelo is severe.
It is but needful:
Not itself, that oft looks so;
Is still the nurse of second woe:
—Poor Claudio!—There is no remedy.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

He's hearing of a cause; he will come straight
To him of you.
Pray you do. [Exit Servant.] I'll know
The sure; may be, he will relent: Alas,
But as offended in a dream!
As all ages, smack of this vice; and he For't—

Enter ANGELO.

Now, what's the matter, provost?
Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?
Did not I tell thee, yea? hadst thou not order'd
That thou ask again?

Lest I might be too rash:
Your good correction, I have seen,
After execution, judgment hath D'o'er his doom.

Go to; let that be mine:
Your office, or give up your place,
I shall well be spar'd.

I crave your honour's pardon.—
All be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet?
Try near her hour.

Dispose of her
In more fitter place; and that with speed.

Re-enter Servant.

Here is the sister of the man condemn'd,
Access to you.

Hath he a sister?
Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid,
As shortly of a sisterhood,
Ready.

Well, let her be admitted. [Exit Servant.]
The fornicatress be remov'd;
Have needful, but not lavish, means;
All be order for it.

Enter LUCIO and ISABELLA.

Save your honour! [Offering to retire.]
Stay a little while.—[To ISAB.] You are Welcome: What's your will?
I am a woeful suitor to your honour,
And your honour hear me.

Well; what's your suit?
There is a vice that most I do abhor,
Whose desire should meet the blow of justice;
Which I would not plead, but that I must;
Which I must not plead, but that I am
Twixt will, and will not.

Well; the matter?
I have a brother is condemn'd to die:
Each you, let it be his fault,
Not my brother.

Heaven give thee these moving graces!
Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?
Every fault's condemn'd, ere it be done:
Not the very cipher of a function,
Whose faults, whose fine stands in record,
Go by the actor.

* To fine is to sentence—to bring to an end.

Isab. O just, but severe law!
I had a brother then.—Heaven keep your honour!
[Retiring.]
Lucio. [To ISAB.] Give't not o'er so: to him again,
Entreat him;

Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown;
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs die?
Ang. Maiden, no remedy.
Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither Heaven, nor man, grieve at the mercy.
Ang. I will not do't.
Isab. But can you, if you would?
Ang. Look, what I will not that I cannot do.
Isab. But might you do't, and do the world no
wrong,

If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse
As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentenc'd; 't is too late.
Lucio. You are too cold. [To ISAB.]

Isab. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word,
May call it back again: Well believe this,<sup>a</sup>
No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.

If he had been as you, and you as he,
You would have slipp'd like him; but he, like you,
Would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you, begone.
Isab. I would to Heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabel! should it then be thus?
No; I would tell what't were to be a judge,
And what a prisoner.

Lucio. Ay, touch him; there's the vein. [Aside.]
Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas! alas!
Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
And He that might the vantage best have took Found out the remedy: How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgment, should
But judge you as you are? O, think on that;
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new made.<sup>b</sup>

Ang. Be you content, fair maid;
It is the law, not I, condemns your brother:
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him;—he must die to-morrow.

Isab. To-morrow? O, that's sudden! Spare him, Spare him:

He's not prepar'd for death! Even for our kitchens
We kill the fowl of season;<sup>c</sup> shall we serve Heaven
With less respect than we do minister
To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink you:
Who is it that hath died for this offence?
There's many have committed it.

Lucio. Ay, well said.
Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:

Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
If the first that did the edict infringe
Had answer'd for his deed; now, 't is awake;
Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils (Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv'd,

<sup>b</sup> This has, we think, reference to the fine allusion to the redemption which has gone before: Think on that, and you will then be as merciful as a man regenerate.

<sup>c</sup> The fowl of season—when in season.

And so in progress to be hatch'd and born)
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But where they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.

Ang. I show it most of all, when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall;
And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to-morrow; be content.

Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence;
And he, that suffers: O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio. That 's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
For every pelting, petty officer
Would use his heaven for thunder: nothing but thunder.
Merciful Heaven!
Thou rather, with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,
Splitt'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle: But man, proud man!
Dress'd in a little brief authority;
Most ignorant of what he 's most assur'd,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high Heaven,
As make the angels weep: who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.*

Lucio. O, to him, to him, wench: he will relent,
He 's coming, I perceive 't.

Prov. Pray Heaven, she win him!

Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with ourself:
Great men may jest with saints: 't is wit in them;
But, in the less, foul profanation.

Lucio. Thou 'rt in the right, girl; more o' that.

Isab. That in the captain 's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio. Art avis'd o' that? more on 't.

Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?

Isab. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That skins the vice o' the top: Go to your bosom;
Knock there; and ask your heart, what it doth know
That 's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.

Ang. She speaks, and 't is Such sense, that my sense breeds with it.—Fare you well.

Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back.

Ang. I will bethink me:—Come again to-morrow.

Isab. Hark, how I 'll bribe you: Good my lord, turn back.

Ang. How! bribe me?

Isab. Ay, with such gifts that Heaven shall share with you.

Lucio. You had marr'd all else.

Isab. Not with fond shekels of the tested gold,
Or stones, whose rates are either rich or poor
As fancy values them; but with true prayers
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there,
Ere sunrise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.

Ang. Well: come to me to-morrow.

Lucio. Go to: 't is well; away. [Aside to ISABEL.]

Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!

Ang. Amen:

For I am that way going to temptation, [Aside.]
Where prayers cross.

Isab. At what hour to-morrow

* We understand this passage,—as they are angels, they sleep at folly: if they had our spleens, they would laugh, as mortals.

Shall I attend your lordship?

Ang. At any time 'fore

Isab. Save your honour!

[Exeunt LUCIO, ISAB., &c.]

Ang. From thee; even from thy vi-

What 's this? what 's this? Is this her fault,

The tempter or the tempted, who sins most? I

Not she; nor doth she tempt: but it is I,

That, lying by the violet, in the sun,

Do, as the carrion does, not as the flower,

Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be,

That modesty may more betray our sense

Than woman's lightness? Having waste

enough,

Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary,

And pitch our evils there? O, fie, fie, fie!

What dost thou? or what art thou, Angelo?

Dost thou desire her foully, for those things

That make her good? O, let her brother live:

Thieves for their robbery have authority,

When judges steal themselves. What? do I lo

That I desire to bear her speak again,

And feast upon her eyes? What is 't I dream

O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,

With saints dost bait thy hook! Most dangerous

Is that temptation, that doth goad us on

To sin in loving virtue: never could the strump

With all her double vigour, art, and nature,

Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid

Subdues me quite:—Ever till now,

When men were fond, I smil'd and wonder'd how

SCENE III.—A Room in a Prison.

Enter DUKE, habited like a Friar, and Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost! so I think you

Prov. I am the provost: What 's your will frail?

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my bless'd
I come to visit the afflicted spirits

Here in the prison: do me the common right

To let me see them; and to make me know

The nature of their crimes, that I may minister

To them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that if more were

Enter JULIET.

Look, here comes one; a gentlewoman of mine,

Who, falling in the flaws of her own youth,

Hath blister'd her report: She is with child;

And he that got it, sentenc'd: a young man

More fit to do another such offence,

Than die for this.

Duke. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.—

I have provided for you; stay a while,

And you shall be conducted. [To]

Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you c

Juliet. I do; and bear the shame most patie

Duke. I 'll teach you how you shall arrai conscience,

And try your penitence, if it be sound,

Or hollowly put on.

Juliet. I 'll gladly learn.

Duke. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Juliet. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd

Duke. So then, it seems, your most offence

Was mutually committed?

Juliet. Mutually.

Duke. Then was your sin of heavier kind than

Juliet. I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke. 'T is meet so, daughter: but lest you do

As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,—

Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not I

we would not spare Heaven, as we love it, stand in fear,—

I do repent me, as it is an evil;
the shame with joy.

There rest.

ner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,

going with instruction to him.—

with you! Benedicite!

[Exit.]

Must die to-morrow! O, injurious love, ites me a life, whose very comfort dying horror!

'T is pity of him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter ANGELO.

When I would pray and think, I think and pray subjects: Heaven hath my empty words;

y invention,<sup>a</sup> bearing not my tongue,

in Isabel: Heaven in my mouth,

d but only chew his name;

y heart, the strong and swelling evil ception: The state whereon I studied good thing, being often read,

se'd and tedious; yea, my gravity,

(let no man hear me) I take pride,

with boot,<sup>b</sup> change for an idle plume,

e air beats for vain. O place! O form!

idest thou with thy case,<sup>c</sup> thy habit,

we from fools, and tie the wiser souls be seeming! Blood, thou art blood:

te good angel on the devil's horn,

the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

Who's there?

One Isabel, a sister,

ness to you.

Teach her the way. O Heavens! [Exit Serv.]

my blood thus muster to my heart,

eth it unable for itself,

assessing all my other parts

ary fitness?

se foolish throngs with one that swoons;

to help him, and so stop the air

he should revive: and even so al,<sup>d</sup> subject to a well-wish'd king, rown part, and in obsequious fondness his presence, where their untaught love is appear offence.

Enter ISABELLA.

Fair maid?

I am come to know your pleasure.

That you might know it would much better

please me,

demanded what 't is. Your brother cannot live.

Even so.—Heaven keep your honour! [Retiring.]

Yet may he live a while; and, it may be,

as you, or I: yet he must die.

Under your sentence?

Yes.

When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,

if shorter, he may be so fitted,

soul sicken not.

Ha! Fie, these filthy vices! It were as good to him that lath from nature stolen humbly made, as to remit

any sweetness, that do coin Heaven's image that are forbid: 't is all as easy to take away a life true made,

as to mangle in restrained means.

A false one.

Isab. 'T is set down so in heaven, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you so? then I shall poze you quickly.

Which had you rather, That the most just law

Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him,

Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness,

As she that he hath stain'd?

Isab. Sir, believe this,

I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul: Our compell'd sins

Stand more for number than for accompt.

Isab.

How say you?

Ang. Nay, I 'll not warrant that; for I can speak

Against the thing I say. Answer to this;—

I, now the voice of the recorded law,

Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:

Might there not be a charity in sin,

To save this brother's life?

Isab.

Please you to do 't,

I 'll take it as a peril to my soul,

It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Pleas'd you to do 't, at peril of your soul,

Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,

Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my suit,

If that be sin, I 'll make it my morn prayer

To have it added to the faults of mine,

And nothing of your answer.<sup>e</sup>

Ang.

Nay, but hear me:

Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,

Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,

But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright,

When it doth tax itself: as these black masks

Proclaim an enshield beauty ten times louder

Than beauty could, displayed.—But mark me;

To be received plain, I 'll speak more gross:

Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears

Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,

(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,

But in the loss of question,) that you, his sister,

Finding yourself desir'd of such a person,

Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,

Could fetch your brother from the manacles

Of the all-binding law; and that there were

No earthly mean to save him, but that either

You must lay down the treasures of your body

To this suppos'd, or else to let him suffer;

What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother as myself:

That is, Were I under the terms of death,

The impression of keen whips I 'd wear as rubies,

And strip myself to death, as to a bed

That longing had been sick for, ere I 'd yield

My body up to shame.

Ang.

Then must your brother die.

Isab. And 't were the cheaper way:

Better it were a brother died at once,

Than that a sister, by redeeming him,

Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence

That you have slander'd so?

Isab. Ignomy in ransom, and free pardon,

Are of two houses: lawful mercy

Is nothing kin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a tyrant,

And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother

A merriment, than a vice.

Isab.

O pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out,

<sup>e</sup> Your answer—for you to answer.

To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean:

I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail.

Isab. Else let my brother die,
If not a feodary, but only he Owe, and succeed thy weakness.

Ang. Nay, women are frail too.

Isab. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;
Which are as easy broke as they make forms.
Women!—Help Heaven! men their creation mar
In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail;
For we are soft as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well:

And from this testimony of your own sex,
(Since, I suppose, we are made to be no stronger Than faults may shake our frames,) let me be bold;—
I do arrest your words: Be that you are,
That is, a woman; if you be more, you're none;
If you be one, (as you are well express'd
By all external warrants,) show it now,
By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one: gentle my lord,
Let me entreat you speak the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.

Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me
That he shall die for it.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.

Isab. I know, your virtue hath a licence in 't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose!—Seeming, seeming!—
I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for 't:

Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or, with an outstretch'd throat, I'll tell the world aloud,
What man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoil'd name, the austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place in the state,
Will so your accusation outweigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun;
And now I give my sensual race the rein:
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;
Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes,
That banish what they sue for; redeem thy brother
By yielding up thy body to my will;
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To lingering sufferance: answer me to-morrow,
Or, by the affection that now guides me most,
I'll prove a tyrant to him: As for you,
Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true. [Exit

Isab. To whom should I complain? Did I tell thee,
Who would believe me? O perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approval!
Bidding the law make court'sy to their will;
Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,
To follow as it draws! I'll to my brother:
Though he hath fallen by prompture<sup>a</sup> of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
That, had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhor'd pollution.

Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:

More than our brother is our chastity.

I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,

And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter DUKE, CLAUDIO, and Provost.

Duke. So, then you hope of pardon from lord Angelo?

Claud. The miserable have no other medicine,
But only hope:

I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death; either death, or life,
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing

That none but fools would keep: a breath thou art,
(Servile to all the skiey influences,)

That dost this habitation, where thou keep'st,
Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death's fool;

For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet runn'st toward him still: Thou art not noble;

For all the accommodations that thou bear'st
Are nurs'd by baseness: Thou art by no means valiant;

For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm: Thy best of rest is sleep,

And that thou oft provok'st; yet grossly fear'st
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thyself;

For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains
That issue out of dust: Happy thou art not:

For what thou hast not still thou striv'st to get;
And what thou hast, forgett'st: Thou art not certain;

For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the moon: If thou art rich, thou art poor;

For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows,

Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee: Friend hast thou none;
For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,
The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
Do curse the gout, serpigio, and the rheum,
For ending thee no sooner: Thou hast nor youth, nor age,
But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep,
Dreaming on both: for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
Of palsied old;<sup>b</sup> and when thou art old, and rich,
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this,
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.

Claud. I humbly thank you.
To sue to live, I find I seek to die;
And seeking death find life: Let it come on.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome.

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior, be your sister.

<sup>a</sup> Prompture—suggestion. <sup>b</sup> Eld—old age, or old people

Provost, a word with you.

As many as you please.

Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be conceal'd. [Exit DUKE and Prov.]

Now, sister, what 's the comfort?

Why, as all comforts are; most good, most good indeed:

Angelo, having affairs to heaven,

you for his swift ambassador,

you shall be an everlasting leiger:

your best appointment make with speed; or you set on.

Is there no remedy?

None, but such remedy as, to save a head,
is a heart in twain.

But is there any?

Yes, brother, you may live;

but a devilish mercy in the judge,

will implore it, that will free your life,

or you till death.

Perpetual durance?

Ay, just, perpetual durance; a restraint, of all the world's vastidity you had,
within'd scope.

But in what nature?

In such a one as (you consenting to 't) steal your honour from that trunk you bear, and are you naked.

Let me know the point.

O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake, to see a feverous life shouldst entertain,

and at seven winters more respect

a perpetual honour. Darest thou die?

For such a death is most in apprehension;

like poor beetle, that we tread upon,

its mortal sufferance finds a pang as great as when a giant dies.

Why give you me this shame?

For you I can a resolution fetch of every tenderness? If I must die, let me encounter darkness as a bride,

and my grave in mine arms.

There spake my brother; there my father's grave

gave forth a voice! Yes, thou must die:

but 't is too noble to conserve a life of appliances. This outward-sainted deputy,— with settled visage and deliberate word with f' the head, and follies doth emmew

his face, as doth the fowl,—is yet a devil;

and within being cast, he would appear as deep as hell.

The precise Angelo?

O, 't is the cunning livery of hell,

and 't is the body to invest and cover

the guards! Darest thou think, Claudio, that I should yield him my virginity,

that might be freed?

O, Heavens! it cannot be.

Yes, he would give 't thee, from this rank offence.

Send him still: This night 's the time should do what I abhor to name, thou diest to-morrow.

Thou shalt not do 't.

O, were it but my life,

or it down for your deliverance

as a pin.

Thanks, dear Isabel.

Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.

Yes.—Has he affections in him,

that can make him bite the law by the nose,

or would force it? Sure it is no sin;

and deathly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Claud. If it were damnable, he, being so wise,

Why would he for the momentary trick

Be perdurably fin'd?—O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?

Claud. Death is a fearful thing.

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;

To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot;

This sensible warm motion to become

A kneaded clod; and the delighted<sup>a</sup> spirit

To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside

In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice;

To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,

And blown with restless violence round about

The pendent world; or to be worse than worst

Of those, that lawless and incertain thoughts

Imagine howling!—'t is too horrible!

The weariest and most loathed worldly life,

That age, ach, penury, and imprisonment

Can lay on nature, is a paradise

To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas! alas!

Claud. Sweet sister, let me live.

What sin you do to save a brother's life,

Nature dispenses with the deed so far,

That it becomes a virtue.

Isab. O, you beast!

O, faithless coward! O, dishonest wretch!

Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?

Is 't not a kind of incest, to take life

From thine own sister's shame? What should I think?

Heaven shield, my mother play'd my father fair!

For such a warped slip of wilderness<sup>b</sup>

Ne'er issued from his blood. Take my defiance

Die; perish! might but my bending down

Relieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed;

I 'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,

No word to save thee.

Claud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isab. O fie, fie, fie!

Thy sin 's not accidental, but a trade:

Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd:

'T is best that thou diest quickly. [Going.]

Claud. O hear me, Isabella.

Re-enter DUKE.

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.

Isab. What is your will?

Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction

I would require is likewise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous leisure; my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you a while.

Duke. [To CLAUDIO, aside.] Son, I have overheard

what hath passed between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an assay of her virtue, to practise his judgment with the disposition of natures; she, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death: Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die; go to your knees, and make ready.

Claud. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.

Duke. Hold you there: farewell. [Exit CLAUD.]

Re-enter Provost.

Provost, a word with you.

Prov. What's your will, father?

Duke. That now you are come you will be gone: Leave me a while with the maid; my mind promises with my habit no loss shall touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time.<sup>a</sup> [Exit Prov.]

Duke. The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, should keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolve him: I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss: Yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only.—Therefore, fasten your ear on my advisings; to the love I have in doing good. A remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have a hearing of this business.

Isab. Let me hear you speak further; I have spirit to do anything that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier, who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. She should this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed; between which time of the contract and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wracked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark, how heavily this befel to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate<sup>b</sup> husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending, in her, discoveries of dishonour; in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death, to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live!—But how out of this can she avail?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal; and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

Isab. Show me how, good father.

Duke. This fore-named maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to this point: only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and answer to convenience: this being granted now follows all. We shall advise this wrong to stand up your appointment, go in your pleasure encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may be to him to her recompense: and here, by this, is she saved, your honour untainted, the poor advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. I will I frame, and make fit for his attempt think well to carry this as you may, the dot the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. V you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already I trust, it will grow to a most prosperous port.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up: speedily to Angelo; if for this night he ent his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I sently to St. Luke's; there, at the moated sides this dejected Mariana: At that place me; and despatch with Angelo, that it may be

Isab. I thank you for this comfort: Fare good father. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Street before the Priory

Enter DUKE, as a Friar; to him ELBOW, and Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but we shall have all the world drink brown bastard.

Duke. O, Heavens! what stuff is here?

Clo. 'T was never merry world, since, of the merriest was put down, and the worse order of law a furred gown to keep him w furred with fox and lambskins too, to signify, being richer than innocency, stands for the friar.

Elb. Come your way, sir:—Bless you, g friar.

Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go, mend; go,

Clo. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee gn Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, of Correction and instruction must both work, Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a Clo. I spy comfort; I cry, hail: Here 's man, and a friend of mine.

Still thus, and thus! still worse!
How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? she still? Ha?

Truth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and self in the tub.

Why, 't is good; it is the right of it: it must see your fresh whore, and your powdered bawd: unmet consequence; it must be so: Art going, Pompey?

Yes, faith, sir.

Why, 't is not amiss, Pompey: Farewell; Go; at these thither. For debt, Pompey? Or how? For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be of a bawd, why, 't is his right: Bawd is he, and of antiquity too: bawd-born. Farewell, my: Commend me to the prison, Pompey: I turn good husband now, Pompey; you will loose.

I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.
No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: like it not patiently, why, your mettle is the hills, trusty Pompey.—Bless you, friar.

And you.

Does Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha? Come your ways, sir; come.

You will not bail me men, sir?

Then, Pompey,—not now.—What news friar? What news?

Come your ways, sir; come.

Go,—to kennel, Pompey, go:

[Exit ESCALUS, Clown, and Officers.

Enter friar, of the duke?

I know none: Can you tell me of any?

Some say he is with the emperor of Russia; and he is in Rome: But where is he, think you?

I know not where: But wheresoever, I wish it.

It was a mad fantastical trick of him, to steal a state, and usurp the beggary he was never born of: Angela dukes it well in his absence; he puts down to 't.

He does well in 't.

A little more lenity to lechery would do no him: something too crabbed that way, friar.

It is too general a vice, and severity must

Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kind: is well allied: but it is impossible to extirp friar, till eating and drinking be put down.

Yes, this Angelo was not made by man and woe: this downright way of creation: Is it true, or not?

How should he be made, then?

Some report, a sea-maid spawned him:—that he was begot between two stock-fishes:—But I think, that when he makes water his urine is conscience: that I know to be true: and he is a motion: that 's infallible.

You are pleasant, sir; and speak apace.

Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for him of a colpiece to take away the life of a man? Would the duke, that is absent, have done this? would he have hanged a man for the getting a hundred, he would have paid for the nursing a hundred: He had some feeling of the sport; he knew it: and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women; he was not inclined that way.

Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.

Duke. 'T is not possible.

Lucio. Who? not the duke? yes, your beggar of fifty;—and his use was, to put a ducat in her clack-dish: the duke had crotchets in him: He would be drunk too; that let me inform you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward<sup>a</sup> of his: A shy fellow was the duke: and, I believe, I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I prithee, might be the cause?

Lucio. No,—pardon;—'t is a secret must be locked within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand,—The greater file of the subject<sup>b</sup> held the duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise? why, no question but he was.

Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking; the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed,<sup>c</sup> must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier: Therefore, you speak unskilfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the duke return, (as our prayers are he may,) let me desire you to make your answer before him: If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it: I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name.

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to the duke.

Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

Duke. O, you hope the duke will return no more; or you imagine me too un hurtful an opposite.<sup>d</sup> But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you 'll forswear this again.

Lucio. I 'll be hanged first: thou art deceived in me, friar. But no more of this: Canst thou tell if Claudio die to-morrow, or no?

Duke. Why should he die, sir?

Lucio. Why? for filling a bottle with a tun-dish. I would the duke we talk of were returned again: this ungenitured agent will unpeople the province with continency; sparrows must not build in his house-eaves, because they are lecherous. The duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered; he would never bring them to light: would he were returned! Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrussing. Farewell, good friar; I prithee, pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He 's now past it; yet, and I say to thee, he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic: say, that I said so. Farewell. [Exit.]

Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality Can censure 'scape; back-wounding calumny The whitest virtue strikes: What king so strong, Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue! But who comes here?

Enter ESCALUS, Provost, Bawd, and Officers.

Escal. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man: good my lord.

<sup>a</sup> Inward—intimate. <sup>b</sup> The greater number of the people. <sup>c</sup> Helmed—steered through. <sup>d</sup> Opposite—adversary.

ACT IV.

Scene 1. A Room in Mariana's House.
Mariana distressed sitting, a Boy wailing.
[Faint text of dialogue and stage directions.]

I pray you tell me, hath anybody inquired for me here today? upon this time have I promised here to meet.
Maria. You have not been inquired after: I have not been here all day.
Enter ISABELLA.
Duke. I do constantly believe you:—The time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little; may be, I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.
Maria. I am always bound to you. [Exit.]
Duke. Very well met, and welcome. What is the news from this good deputy?
Isab. He hath a garden circummur'd<sup>a</sup> with brick, Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd; And to that vineyard is a planched<sup>b</sup> gate, That makes his opening with this bigger key: This other doth command a little door, Which from the vineyard to the garden leads; There have I made my promise upon the Heavy middle of the night to call upon him.

But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Have ta'en a due and wary note upon 't; sparing and most guilty diligence, all of precept, he did show me twice o'er.

Are there no other tokens you 'grees, concerning her observance? No, name, but only a repair i' the dark; I have passess'd<sup>a</sup> him, my most stay at brief: for I have made him know, servant comes with me along, as upon me; whose persuasion is, about my brother.

'T is well borne up. It yet made known to Mariana of this:—What, ho! within! come forth!

Re-enter MARIANA.

Be acquainted with this maid; as to do you good.

I do desire the like.

Do you persuade yourself that I respect you? Good friar, I know you do; and have found it. Take then this your companion by the hand, in a story ready for your ear: attend your leisure; but make haste; serious night approaches.

Will 't please you walk aside?

[Exeunt MARI. and ISAB.]

O place and greatness, millions of false eyes look upon thee! volumes of report in these false and most contrarious quests<sup>b</sup> thy doings! thousand escapes of wit we the father of their idle dream, seek thee in their fancies!—Welcome! How agreed?

Re-enter MARIANA and ISABELLA.

She'll take the enterprise upon her, father, advise it.

It is not my consent, contrary too.

Little have you to say, as depart from him, but, soft and low, deliver now my brother.

Fear me not.

Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all: as husband on a pre-contract: you thus together, 't is no sin; the justice of your title to him wish<sup>c</sup> the deceit. Come, let us go; 's to reap, for yet our tithe 's<sup>d</sup> to sow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Provost and Clown.

Come hither, sirrah: Can you cut off a man's head if the man be a bachelor, sir, I can: but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can cut off a woman's head.

Come, sir, leave me your matches, and yield me an answer. To-morrow morning are to die and Barnardine: Here is in our prison a comitioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem your gyles; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping; for you have been a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, time out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Prov. What ho, Abhorson! Where 's Abhorson, there?

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here 's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution: If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him: He cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a bawd.

Abhor. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him, he will discredit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a feather will turn the scale. [Exit]

Clo. Pray, sir, by your good favour, (for, surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look,) do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Clo. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery: but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hanged I cannot imagine.

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clo. Proof?

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief—
Clo. If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd; he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe, to-morrow four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade; follow.

Clo. I do desire to learn, sir; and, I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare:<sup>a</sup> for, truly, sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:

[Exeunt Clown and ABHOR.]

Th' one has my pity; not a jot the other, Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter CLAUDIO.

Look, here 's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death:

'T is now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where 's Barnardine?

Claud. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltless labour When it lies starkly<sup>b</sup> in the traveller's bones: He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare yourself. But hark, what noise?

Heaven give your spirits comfort! [Knocking within.]

[Exit CLAUD.]

By and by:—

I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve, For the most gentle Claudio.—Welcome, father.

<sup>b</sup> Starkly—stiffly.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night
Envelop you, good provost! Who call'd here of late?

Prov. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel!

Prov. No.

Duke. They will then, ere 't be long.

Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There 's some in hope.

Prov. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice;
He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself, which he spurs on his power
To qualify<sup>a</sup> in others: were he meal'd<sup>b</sup>
With that which he corrects, then were he tyrannous;
But this being so, he 's just.—Now are they come.—

[Knocking within.—Provost goes out.]
This is a gentle provost: Seldom, when
The steeld gaoler is the friend of men.
How now? What noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste,
That wounds the unsoftening<sup>c</sup> postern with these strokes.

Provost returns, speaking to one at the door.

Prov. There he must stay, until the officer
Arise to let him in; he is call'd up.

Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,
But he must die to-morrow?

Prov. None, sir, none.

Duke. As near the dawning, provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere morning.

Prov. Happily
You something know; yet, I believe, there comes
No countermand; no such example have we:
Besides, upon the very siege<sup>d</sup> of justice,
Lord Angelo hath to the public ear
Profess'd the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

This is his lordship's man.

Duke. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, nor other circumstance. Good morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

Prov. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.]

Duke. This is his pardon purchas'd by such sin,
[Aside.]

For which the pardoner himself is in:
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority:
When vice makes mercy, mercy 's so extended,
That for the fault's love is the offender friend.—
Now, sir, what news?

Prov. I told you: Lord Angelo, belike, thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting on:<sup>e</sup> methinks, strangely; for he hath not used it before.

Duke. Pray you, let 's hear.

Prov. [Reads.] "Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and, in the afternoon, Barnardine: for my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought, that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fall not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril."

What say you to this, sir?

never at rest, from sisto, to stand still.

—sent

<sup>d</sup> Putting on—incitement

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in the afternoon?

Prov. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.<sup>f</sup>

Duke. How came it, that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Prov. His friends still wrought reprieves for him:
And, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of lord
Angelo, came not to an undoubtful proof.

Duke. Is it now apparent?

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison?
How seems he to be touched?

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what 's past, present, or to come; insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.

Duke. He wants advice.

Prov. He will hear none; he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison; give him leave to escape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft awaked him, as if to carry him to execution, and showed him a seeming warrant for it: it hath not moved him at all.

Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him: To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite; for the which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Prov. Alack! how may I do it? having the hour limited; and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

Duke. O, death 's a great disguiser: and you may add to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say, it was the desire of the penitent to be so bare before his death: You know the course is common. If anything fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fellows, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father, it is against my wish.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Prov. To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet once I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor persuasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the debt you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure: where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. It is a thing that Angelo knows not: for he this very day

letters of strange tenor : perchance, of the duke's perchance, entering into some monastery ; but, no, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfold-calls up the shepherd. Put not yourself into out, how these things should be : all difficulties may when they are known. Call your execual off with Barnardine's head : I will give him
: shift, and advise him for a better place. Yet
: amazed : but this shall absolutely resolve you.
: say ; it is almost clear dawn. [Exit.

ENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Clown.

I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our profession : one would think it were mistress

Enter ABHORSON.

Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.
Barnardine ! you must rise and be master Barnardine !
What ho, Barnardine !
e. [Within.] A pox o' your throats ! Who at noise there ! What are you ?
four friends, sir ; the hangman : You must be sir, to rise and be put to death.
e. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away ! I am
Tell him he must awake, and that quickly

Pray, master Barnardine, awake till you are
, and sleep afterwards.
Go in to him, and fetch him out.
He is coming, sir, he is coming ; I hear his ble.

Enter BARNARDINE.

Is the axe upon the block, sirrah ?
ery ready, sir.
e. How now, Abhorson ? what 's the news with Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into ers ; for, look you, the warrant 's come.
e. You rogue, I have been drinking all night,
feted for 't.
A, the better, sir ; for he that drinks all night, aged testimes in the morning, may sleep the
all the next day.

Enter DUKE.

Look you, sir, here comes your ghostly father.
e now, think you ?
Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how as one to depart, I am come to advise you,
you, and pray with you.
e. Friar, not I ; I have been drinking hard all I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets : I will not consent to die this day, that 's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must ; and therefore, I beseech you,
Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barnar. I swear, I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,—

Barnar. Not a word ; if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward ; for thence will not I to-day.
[Exit.

Enter Provost.

Duke. Unfit to live, or die : O, gravel heart !—
After him, fellows ; bring him to the block.

[Exit ABHORSON and Clown.

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner ?

Duke. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death ;
And to transport him in the mind he is
Were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father,
There died this morning of a cruel fever
One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate,
A man of Claudio's years ; his beard, and head,
Just of his colour : What if we do omit
This reprobate, till he were well inclin'd ;
And satisfy the deputy with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio ?

Duke. O, 't is an accident that Heaven provides Despatch it presently ; the hour draws on Prefix'd by Angelo : See this be done,
And sent according to command ; whiles I
Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently.
But Barnardine must die this afternoon ;
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To save me from the danger that might come,
If he were known alive ?

Duke. Let this be done :—
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio :
Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting
To yonder generation, you shall find
Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependant.

Duke. Quick, despatch,
And send the head to Angelo. [Exit Provost.
Now will I write letters to Angelo,—
The provost, he shall bear them,—whose contents
Shall witness to him I am near at home ;
And that by great injunctions I am bound
To enter publicly : him I 'll desire
To meet me at the consecrated fount,
A league below the city ; and from thence,
By cold gradation and weal-balan'd form,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head ; I 'll carry it myself.

Duke. Convenient is it : Make a swift return ;
For I would commune with you of such things
That want no ear but yours.

Prov. I 'll make all speed. [Exit.

Isab. [Within.] Peace, ho, be here !

Duke. The tongue of Isabel :—She 's come to know,
If yet her brother's pardon be come hither :
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despair
When it is least expected.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. Ho, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a man.
Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon ?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from the world; His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isab. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other: Show your wisdom, daughter, in your close patience.

Isab. O, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isab. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabel!

Injurious world! Most damned Angelo!

Duke. This nor hurts him nor profits you a jot; Forbear it therefore; give your cause to Heaven. Mark what I say; which you shall find, By every syllable, a faithful verity: The duke comes home to-morrow;—nay, dry your eyes;

One of our convent, and his confessor, Gives me this instance: Already he hath carried Notice to Escalus and Angelo;

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates, There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go; And you shall have your bosom<sup>a</sup> on this wretch, Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart, And general honour.

Isab. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter then to friar Peter give; 'T is that he sent me of the duke's return: Say, by this token, I desire his company At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause, and yours, I 'll perfect him withal: and he shall bring you Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo Accuse him home, and home. For my poor self, I am combin'd<sup>b</sup> by a sacred vow, And shall be absent. Wend you with this letter: Command these fretting waters from your eyes With a light heart; trust not my holy order, If I pervert your course.—Who 's here?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Good even! Friar, where is the provost?

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O, pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient: I am fain to dine and sup with water and bran; I dare not for my head fill my belly; one fruitful meal would set me to 't: But they say the duke will be here to-morrow. By my troth, Isabel, I loved thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived. [Exit ISAB.]

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beholden to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he 's a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you 'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I 'll go along with thee; I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yea, marry, did I: but I was fain to forswear it; they would else have married me to the rotten medlar.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest: Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I 'll go with thee to the lane's end: If bawdy talk offend you, we 'll have very little of it. Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr, I shall stick.

[Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Bosom—wish, heart's desire.

<sup>b</sup> Combin'd—bound.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter ANGELO and ESCALUS.

Escal. Every letter he hath writ hath disvouch'd other.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner. His actions show much like to madness: pray Heaven, his wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gate, and re-deliver our authorities there?

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering, that, if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a despatch of complaints; and to deliver us from devils hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaim'd: Betimes i' the morn I 'll call you at your house: Give notice to such men of sort and suit, As are to meet him.

Escal. I shall, sir: fare you well. [Exit.]

Ang. Good night.—

This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant, And dull to all proceedings. A deflower'd maid! And by an eminent body, that enforce'd The law against it!—But that her tender shame Will not proclaim against her maiden loss, How might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her No<sup>a</sup> For my authority bears<sup>b</sup> of a credent bulk, That no particular scandal once can touch, But it confounds the breather. He should have liv'd, Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense, Might, in the times to come, have ta'en revenge, By so receiving a dishonour'd life, With ransom of such shame. 'Would yet he had liv'd! Alack, when once our grace we have forgot, Nothing goes right; we would, and we would not. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Fields without the Town.

Enter DUKE in his own habit, and Friar PETER.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me. [Giving letters.]

The provost knows our purpose, and our plot. The matter being afoot, keep your instruction, And hold you ever to our special drift; Though sometimes you do blench from this to that, As cause doth minister. Go, call at Flavius' house, And tell him where I stay: give the like notice To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus, And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate; But send me Flavius first.

F. Peter. It shall be speeded well. [Exit Friar.]

Enter VARRIUS.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste: Come, we will walk: There 's other of our friends Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter ISABELLA and MARIANA.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loth; I would say the truth; but to accuse him so, That is your part: yet I am advis'd to do it; He says, to veil full purpose.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>c</sup> To veil full purpose—to conceal the whole extent of purpose.

Be rul'd by him.
Besides, he tells me, that, if peradventure against me on the adverse side, not think it strange; for 't is a physic letter to sweet end.
I would, friar Peter—
O, peace; the friar is come

Enter Friar PETER.
F. Peter. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the duke,
He shall not pass you: Twice have the trumpets sounded;
The generous<sup>a</sup> and gravest citizens
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is ent'ring; therefore, hence, away. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

E. L.—A public Place near the City Gate.

(veiled), ISABELLA, and PETER, at a distance
Enter at opposite sides, DUKE, VARRIUS, ANGELO, ESCALUS, LUCIO, Provost, Officers, THIEFS.

My very worthy cousin, fairly met:—
and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.
and Escal. Happy return be to your royal grace!
Many and hearty thankings to you both.
made inquiry of you; and we hear dness of your justice, that our soul at yield you forth to public thanks,
ing more requital.

You make my bonds still greater.
O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it,
it in the wards of covert bosom, deserves with characters of brass residence, 'gainst the tooth of time, se of oblivion. Give me your hand, he subject see, to make them know ward courtesies would fain proclaim but keep within.—Come, Escalus;
t walk by us on our other hand;
l supporters are you.

PETER and ISABELLA come forward.

er. Now is your time; speak loud, and kneel before him. justice, O royal duke! Vail<sup>a</sup> your regard rong'd, I would fain have said, a maid!
[prince, dishonour not your eye
ing it on any other object, have heard me in my true complaint,
n me justice, justice, justice, justice!
Relate your wrongs: In what? By whom?
Be brief:
and Angelo shall give you justice!
myself to him.

O, worthy duke,
we seek redemption of the devil:
yourself; for that which I must speak er punish me, not being believ'd, redness from you: hear me, O, hear me, here.
ly lured, her wits, I fear me, are not firm:
been a suitor to me for her brother,
r course of justice!

By course of justice!
and she will speak most bitterly and strange.
Most strange, but yet most truly, will I speak:
who 's forsworn; is it not strange?
who 's a murderer; is 't not strange?
who is an adulterous thief,
rite, a virgin-violator;
strange, and strange?

Nay, it is ten times strange.
It is not truer he is Angelo,
tis all as true as it is strange;
t ten times true; for truth is truth
d of reckoning.

<sup>a</sup> Vail—lower.

Duke. Away with her;—Poor soul,
She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.
Isab. O prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st
There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madness; make not impossible
That which but seems unlike: 't is not impossible
But one, the wicked'st caitiff on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute,
As Angelo; even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings, characts,<sup>b</sup> titles, forms,
Be an arch-villain; believe it, royal prince,
If he be less, he 's nothing; but he 's more,
Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty,
If she be mad, as I believe no other,
Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
(Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As e'er I heard in madness.)

Isab. O, gracious duke,
Harp not on that: nor do not banish reason
For inequality; but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear where it seems hid;
And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad,
Have, sure, more lack of reason.—What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the act of fornication
To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo:
I, in probation of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother: One Lucio
As then the messenger;—

Lucio. That 's I, an 't like your grace
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her
To try her gracious fortune with lord Angelo,
For her poor brother's parlon.

Isab. That 's he, indeed.

Duke. You were not bid to speak.
Lucio. No, my good lord
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I wish you now then;
Pray you, take note of it: and when you have
A business for yourself, pray Heaven, you then Be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour.

Duke. The warrant 's for yourself; take heed to it.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right; but you are in the wrong
To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Isab. I went

To this pernicious caitiff deputy.

Duke. That 's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it;

The phrase is to the matter.

Duke. Mended again: the matter:—Proceed.

Isab. In brief,—to set the needless process by,

How I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd,

How he refell'd<sup>c</sup> me, and how I replied;

(For this was of much length,) the vile conclusion
I now begin with grief and shame to utter:
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust,
Release my brother; and, after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yield to him: But the next morn betimes,
His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most likely!

Isab. O, that it were as like<sup>a</sup> as it is true!

Duke. By Heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st;

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour,
In hateful practice: <sup>b</sup> First, his integrity
Stands without blemish:—next, it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off: Some one hath set you on;
Confess the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?
Then, oh, you blessed ministers above,
Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time,
Unfold the evil which is here wrapp'd up
In countenance!<sup>c</sup>—Heaven shield your grace from woe,

As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd go!

Duke. I know you 'd fain be gone:—An officer!
To prison with her:—Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice.
Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?

Isab. One that I would were here, friar Lodowick.

Duke. A ghostly father, belike: Who knows that Lodowick?

Lucio. My lord, I know him; 't is a meddling
friar.

I do not like the man: had he been lay, my lord,
For certain words he spake against your grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

Duke. Words against me? This is a good friar, belike!

And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our substitute!—Let this friar be found.

Lucio. But yesternight, my lord, she and that friar
I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar,
A very scurvy fellow.

F. Peter. Bless'd be your royal grace!
I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abus'd: First, bath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute;
Who is as free from touch or soil with her,
As she from one ungot.

Duke. We did believe no less.
Know you that friar Lodowick that she speaks of?

F. Peter. I know him for a man divine and hol';
Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,
As he 's reported by this gentleman;
And, on my trust, a man that never yet
Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it.

F. Peter. Well, he in time may come to clear himself;

But at this instant he is sick, my lord,
Of a strange fever: Upon his mere<sup>d</sup> request,
'Being come to knowledge that there was complaint Intended 'gainst lord Angelo,) came I hither,
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know

<sup>d</sup> Mere—sole, unmixed, absolute.

Is true, and false; and what he with his oath,
And all probation, will make up full clear,

 here with the provost.

Escal. In very good time:—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Escal. Come, sir: Did you set these women on to slander lord Angelo? they have confessed you did.

Duke. 'T is false.

Escal. How! know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the devil
 Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne:—
 Where is the duke? 't is he should hear me speak.

Escal. The duke 's in us; and we will hear you

Look you speak justly.

 Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?

Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone?

Then is your cause gone too. The duke 's unjust

Thus to retort your manifest appeal,

And put your trial in the villain's mouth,

Lucio. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke of.

Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unhallow'd friar!

Is 't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women,

To accuse this worthy man? but, in foul mouth,

And in the witness of his proper ear,

To call him villain? and then to glance from him

To the duke himself, to tax him with injustice?

What! unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot; the duke

Dare no more stretch this finger of mine, than he

Dare rack his own; his subject am I not,

Nor here provincial: My business in this state

Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,

Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble,

Till it o'erran the stew: laws, for all faults;

But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong statutes

Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,

As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him, signior

Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Lucio. 'T is he, my lord. Come hither, Goodman baldepate: Do you know me?

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him;

and much more, much worse.

Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest I love the duke, as I love myself.

Ang. Hark! how the villain would close now, after his treasonable abuses.

Escal. Such a fellow is not to be talked withal:—
 Away with him to prison:—Where is the provost?—

Away with him to prison; lay bolts enough upon him;
 let him speak no more:—Away with those giglots<sup>a</sup> too,

Duke. Stay, sir; stay awhile.

Ang. What! resists he? Help him, Lucio.

Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh, sir: Why, you baldpated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pox to you! show your sheepbiting face, and be hanged an hour! Will 't not off? [Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.]

Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er made a duke.—

First, provost, let me bail these gentle three;— Sneak not away, sir; [to Lucio] for the friar and you must have a word anon:—lay hold on him.

Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon; sit you down.— [To Escalus.]

We'll borrow place of him—Sir, by your leave: [To Ang.]

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee office? If thou hast, Rely upon it till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

Ang. O my dread lord, I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be undiscernible, When I perceive your grace, like power divine, Hath look'd upon my passes.* Then, good prince, No longer session hold upon my shame, But let my trial be mine own confession: Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither, Mariana:— Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my lord.

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her, instantly.— Do you the office, friar; which consummate, Return him here again:—Go with him, provost.

[Exeunt ANG., MARI., PETER, and PROV.]

Escal. My lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonour, Than at the strangeness of it.

Duke. Come hither, Isabel: Your friar is now your prince: As I was then Advertising, and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isab. O give me pardon, That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd Your unknown sovereignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel: And now, dear maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart; And you may marvel, why I obscur'd myself, Labouring to save his life; and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Than let him so be lost: O most kind maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: But peace be with him! That life is better life, past fearing death, Than that which lives to fear: make it your comfort, So happy is your brother.

Re-enter ANGELO, MARIANA, PETER, and PROVOST

Isab. I do, my lord.

Duke. For this new-married man, approaching here, Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd Your well-defended honour, you must pardon For Mariana's sake: but as he adjudg'd your brother, Being criminal, in double violation 't sacred chastity, and of promise-breach hereon dependent, for your brother's life,) he very mercy of the law cries out * Passes is used, we believe, in the same sense as the somewhat obsolete word passages.

Most audible, even from his proper tongue, An Angelo for Claudio, death for death. Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure; Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure. Then, Angelo, thy fault 's thus manifested: Which, though thou wouldst deny, denies thee sanctity. We do condemn thee to the very block Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste Away with him.

Mari. O, my most gracious lord, I hope you will not mock me with a husband!

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband:

Consenting to the safeguard of your honour, I thought your marriage fit; else imputation, For that he knew you, might reproach your life, And choke your good to come: for his possessions, Although by confiscation they are ours, We do instate and widow you withal, To buy you a better husband.

Mari. O, my dear lord, I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mari. Gentle my liege,— [Kneels]

Duke. You do but lose your labour. Away with him to death.—Now, sir, [to Lucio] to you.

Mari. O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel, take my part. Lend me your knees, and all my life to come I'll lend you all my life to do you service.

Duke. Against all sense you do importune her: Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact, Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break, And take her hence in horror.

Mari. Isabel, Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me; Hold up your hands, say nothing, I'll speak all. They say, best men are moulded out of faults; And, for the most, become much more the better For being a little bad: so may my husband. O, Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. Most bounteous sir, [Kneels] Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd, As if my brother liv'd: I partly think, A due sincerity govern'd his deeds, Till he did look on me; since it is so, Let him not die: My brother had but justice In that he did the thing for which he died: For Angelo,

His act did not o'ertake his bad intent; And must be buried but as an intent That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subjects, Intents but merely thoughts.

Mari. Merely, my lord.

Duke. Your suit 's unprofitable; stand up, I see. I have bethought me of another fault:— Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private means.

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your office. Give up your keys.

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord: I thought it was a fault, but knew it not; Yet did repent me, after more advice: For testimony whereof, one in the prison, That should by private order else have died, I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What 's he?

Prov. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio. Go, fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

[Exit Provost]

I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
 Lord Angelo, have still appear'd, slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
 and of temper'd judgment afterward.

I am sorry that such sorrow I procure:
 deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
 crave death more willingly than mercy;
 I'm deserving, and I do entreat it.

PROVOST, BARNARDINE, CLAUDIO, and JULIET.

Which is that Barnardine?

This, my lord.

There was a friar told me of this man:—
 thou art said to have a stubborn soul, apprehends no further than this world,
 and art thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd;
 for these earthly faults, I quit them all;
 say thee, take this mercy to provide for times to come:—Friar, advise him;
 send him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's
 that?

This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
 would have died when Claudio lost his head,
 almost to Claudio as himself.

Wherein have I so deserv'd of you,
 That you extol me thus?

Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick:<sup>a</sup> If you will hang me for it, you may, but I had rather it would please you I might be whipped.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.
 Proclaim it, provost, round about the city;
 If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,
 (As I have heard him swear himself there's one Whom he begot with child,) let her appear,
 And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd,
 Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now, I made you a duke; good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
 Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal
 Remit thy other forfeits:—Take him to prison;
 And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a prince deserves it.—
 She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.
 Joy to you, Mariana!—love her, Angelo;
 I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue.
 Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:
 There's more behind that is more grateful.<sup>b</sup>
 Thanks, provost, for thy care and secrecy;
 We shall employ thee in a worthier place:—
 Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
 The head of Ragozine for Claudio's;
 The offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
 I have a motion much imports your good;
 Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
 What's mine is yours and what is yours is mine:
 So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show
 What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

[Exeunt.

<sup>a</sup> According to the trick—after the fashion of banter or exaggeration.

<sup>b</sup> More grateful—more to be rejoiced in.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

WE have no edition of the 'Winter's Tale' prior to that of the folio of 1623; nor was it entered upon the registers of the Stationers' Company previous to the entry by the proprietors of the folio. The original text, which is divided into acts and scenes, is remarkably correct.

The novel of Robert Greene, called 'Pandosto,' and 'The History of Dorastus and Fawnia,' which Shakspeare undoubtedly followed, with very few important deviations, in the construction of the plot of his 'Winter's Tale,' was a work of extraordinary popularity, there being fourteen editions known to exist.

"In the country of Bohemia," says the novel, "there reigned a king called Pandosto." The Leontes of Shakspeare is the Pandosto of Greene. The Polixenes of the play is Egistus in the novel:—"It so happened that Egistus, King of Sicilia, who in his youth had been brought up with Pandosto, desirous to show that neither tract of time nor distance of place could diminish their former friendship, provided a navy of ships and sailed into Bohemia to visit his old friend and companion." Here, then, we have the scene of the action reversed. The jealous king is of Bohemia,—his injured friend of Sicilia. But the visiter sails into Bohemia. The most accomplished scholars of Shakspeare's period purposely committed such apparent violations of propriety, when dealing with the legendary and romantic. The wife of Pandosto is Bellaria; and they have a young son called Garinter. Pandosto becomes jealous, slowly, and by degrees; and there is at least some want of caution in the queen to justify it. The great author of 'Othello' would not deal with jealousy after this fashion. He had already produced that immortal portrait "Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought, Perplex'd in the extreme."

He had now to exhibit the distractions of a mind to which jealousy was native; to depict the terrible access of passion, uprooting in a moment all deliberation, all reason, all gentleness. The instant the idea enters the mind of Leontes the passion is at its height.

The action of the novel and that of the drama continue in a pretty equal course. Pandosto tampers with his cupbearer, Fraion, to poison Egistus; and the cupbearer, terrified at the fearful commission, reveals the design to the object of his master's hatred. Eventually they escape together. Bellaria is committed to prison, where she gives birth to a daughter. The guard "carried the child to the king, who, quite devoid of pity, commanded that without delay it should be put in the boat, having neither sail nor rudder to guide it, and so to be carried into the midst of the sea, and there left to the wind and wave as the destinies please to appoint." The queen appeals to the oracle of Apollo: and certain lords are sent to Delphos, where they receive this decree:—"Suspicion is no proof: jealousy is an unequal judge: Bellaria is chaste; Egistus blameless: Fraion a true subject; Pandosto treacherous: his babe innocent; and the king shall live without an heir, which is lost be not found." On their return, on the appointed day, the queen was "brought in to judgment-seat." Shakspeare has followed a poetical and tragical ending of this scene; but he preserved Hermione, to be re-united to her daughter after years of solitude and suffering.

The story of the preservation of the deserted child is prettily told in the novel. The infant is taken to a shepherd's home, and is brought up by his mother, himself under the name of Fawnia. In a narrow lapse of sixteen years may occur without any violation of propriety. The changes are gradual. But in whose action depends upon a manifest lapse there must be a sudden transition. Shakspeare is perfectly aware of the difficulty; and he diminishes the introduction of Time as a Chorus:—

"Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried
Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom."

Shakspeare has exhibited his consummate art in bringing the fourth act with Polixenes and Camillo. Here we have lost sight since the end of the first. Had he otherwise,—had he brought Autolycus, and Perdita, at once upon the scene,—the construction of the action would have been destroyed; and the commencement of the fourth act would have appeared as the commencement of a new play. Shakspeare's difficulties of his plot bend to his art; instead of being art, as Ben Jonson says. Autolycus and Perdita prepare us for Perdita; and when the third scene opens what a beautiful vision lights upon this earth! perhaps never was such a union of perfect simplicity and perfect grace as in the character of Perdita. An exquisite idea of her mere personal appearance is presented in Florizel's rapturous exclamation,—

"When you do dance, I wish you
A wave of the sea, that you might ever do Nothing but that!"

In the novel we have no trace of the intermission. The father of the princely lover is in the disguise of a shepherd at the shepherd's cottage. Dorastus and Fawnia come from the country without the knowledge of Egistus. The ship in which they embark is thrown by a storm upon the coast of Bohemia. Messengers are dispatched in search of the lovers; and they arrive in Bohemia with the request of Egistus that the companions of the flight of Dorastus shall be put to death. The discovery of Fawnia's birth is discovered by the shepherd; the father recognises her. But the previous circumstances exhibit as much grossness of conception on the part of the novelist, as the different management of the drama shows the matchless skill and taste of the poet. We forgive Leontes for his early folly and wildness; but during sixteen years has his remorse been his affection constant.

SCENE,—SOMETIMES IN SICILIA; SOMETIMES IN BOHEMIA.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes' Palace.

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia like occasion whereon my services are now engaged, shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia will pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly desires. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we shall be satisfied in our loves: for, indeed,—

Blessed you,—

Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—what to say.—We will give you sleep at your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, though they cannot praise us, as little you pay a great deal too dear for what's given

Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Arch. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia were trained together in their childhoods; and, if separated betwixt them then such an affection as they bear each other is not so easily lost. Since their more necessities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attorneyed, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast sea, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The Heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world either malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius; it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh; they that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, CAMILLO, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the wat'ry star have been since the shepherd's note, since we have left our throne * Fast probably has the meaning of great space.

Without a burthen : time as long again
Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks ;
And yet we should, for perpetuity,
Go hence in debt : And therefore, like a cipher
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply,
With one we-thank-you, many thousands more
That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile ;
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that 's to-morrow.
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance,
Or breed upon our absence : That may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say,
"This is put forth too truly!"<sup>a</sup> Besides, I have stay'd
To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to 't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We 'll part the time between 's then : and in that
I 'll no gainsaying.

Pol. Press me not, 'beseech you, so ;
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world,
So soon as yours, could win me : so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'T were needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward : which to hinder
Were, in your love, a whip to me ; my stay,
To you a charge and trouble : to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen ? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. You, sir, Charge him too coldly : Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia 's well : this satisfaction
The by-gone day proclaim'd ; say this to him,
He 's 'beat from his best ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell he longs to see his son, were strong ;
But let him say so then, and let him go ;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We 'll thwack him hence with distaffs.—
Yet of your royal presence [to POLIX.] I 'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I 'll give him my commission,
To let<sup>b</sup> him there a month, behind the guest<sup>c</sup>
Prefix'd for 's parting : yet, good deed,<sup>d</sup> Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock<sup>e</sup> behind
What lady she her lord.—You 'll stay ?

Pol. No, madam.

Her. Nay, but you will ?

Pol. I may not, verily.

Her. Verily !

You put me off with limber vows : But I,
Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with oaths,
Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily,
You shall not go ; a lady's verily is
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet ?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest ; so you shall pay your fees,
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you ?
My prisoner ? or my guest ? by your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest then, madam :
To be your prisoner should import offending ;

<sup>a</sup> The construction of this passage is somewhat involved : but the meaning is, O that no sneaping (ruffling) winds at home may blow, to make us say my presages were too true.

<sup>b</sup> To let is to hinder ; and it is probably here used as a reflexive verb—to stay himself.

<sup>c</sup> Guest is literally a lodging ; and the houses or towns where a prince had assigned to stop in his progress, and of which a list was prepared with dates, were so called.

Which is for me less easy to commit,
Than you to punish.

Her. Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I 'll question you
Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys ;
You were pretty lordings then.

Pol. We were, fair queen,
Two lads, that thought there was no more behind
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two ?

Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs, that did frisk i' the sun,

And bleat the one at the other : What we chang'd
Was innocence for innocence ; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did : Had we pursued that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd Heaven
Boldly, "Not guilty ;" the imposition clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to us : for
In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl ;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young playfellow.

Her. Grace to boot !
Of this make no conclusion ; lest you say
Your queen and I are devils : Yet, go on ;
The offences we have made you do we 'll answer ;
If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not
With any but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet ?

Her. He 'll stay, my lord.

Leon. At my request, he would Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never ?

Leon. Never, but once.

Her. What ? have I twice said well ? when was before ?

I prithee, tell me : Cram us with praise, and make us
As fat as tame things : One good deed dying tongueless Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages : You may ride us,
With one soft kiss, a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal ;—
My last good deed was to entreat his stay ;
What was my first ? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you : O, would her name were Grace !
But once before I spoke to the purpose : When ?
Nay, let me have 't ; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when
Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love ; then didst thou utter,
"I am yours for ever."

Her. It is Grace, indeed.—
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice :
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband ;
The other, for some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to Pol.]
Leon. Too hot, too hot : [Asks

To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis on me :—my heart dances ;
But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment
May a free face put on ; derive a liberty

And well become the agent : it may, I grant ;

Are you so fond of your young prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

POL.

If at home, sir,

He 's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:

Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;

My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:

He makes a July's day short as December;

And, with his varying childness, cures in me

Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

LEON.

So stands this squire

Offic'd with me: We two will walk, my lord,

And leave you to your graver steps.—Hermione,

How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome;

Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:

Next to thyself, and my young rover, he 's

Apparent to my heart.<sup>a</sup>

HER.

If you would seek us,

We are yours i' the garden: Shall 's attend you there?

LEON.

To your own beata dispose you: you 'll be

Be you beneath the sky:—I am angling now,

Though you perceive me not how I give line.

Go to, go to! [Aside. Observing POL. and HERM.]

How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!

And arms her with the boldness of a wife

To her allowing husband! Gone already;

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one.

[Exit POL., HERM., and Attendants.]

Go, play, boy, play;—thy mother plays, and I

Play too; but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue

Will hiss me to my grave; contempt and clamour

Will be my knell.—Go, play, boy, play;—There have been,

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now;

And many a man there is, even at this present,

Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by the arm,

That little thinks she has been sluic'd in his absence,

And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by

Sir Smile, his neighbour: nay, there 's comfort in 't,

Whiles other men have gates, and those gates open'd,

As mine, against their will: Should all despair

That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind

Would hang themselves. Physic for 't there 's none;

It is a bawdy planet, that will strike

Where 't is predominant; and 't is powerful, think it,

From east, west, north, and south: Be it concluded,

No barricado for a belly; know it;

It will let in and out the enemy,

With bag and baggage: many thousand of us

Have the disease, and feel 't not.—How now, boy?

MAM. I am like you, they say.

LEON.

Why, that 's some comfort.—

What! Camillo, there?

CAM. Ay, my good lord.

LEON. Go play, Mamillius; thou 'rt an honest man.—

[Exit MAMILLIUS.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

CAM. You had much ado to make his anchor hold:

When you cast out, it still came home.

LEON.

Didst note it?

CAM. He would not stay at your petitions; made

His business more material.

LEON.

Didst perceive it?—

They 're here with me already; whispering, rounding,<sup>b</sup>

“Sicilia is a—so-forth:” ‘T is far gone,

When I shall gust it last.—How came 't, Camillo?

That he did stay?

CAM.

At the good queen's entreaty.

LEON. At the queen's, be 't: good, should be pertinent:

But so it is, it is not. Was this taken

By any understanding pate but thine?

For thy conceit is soaking, will draw in <sup>a</sup> Apparent to my heart—next to my heart.

<sup>b</sup> Rounding—telling secretly.

More than the common blocks :—Not noted, is 't,
But of the finer natures? by some severals
Of head-piece extraordinary? lower messes
Perchance are to this business purblind? say.

Cam. Business, my lord? I think most understand Bohemia stays here longer.

Leon. Ah!
Cam. Stays here longer.

Leon. Ay, but why?

Cam. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon. Satisfy
The entreaties of your mistress?—satisfy?—
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils: wherein, priest-like, thou Hast cleans'd my bosom; I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord!

Leon. To bide upon 't;—Thou art not honest: or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward;
Which hoxes<sup>a</sup> honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd: Or else thou must be counted
A servant grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent: or else a fool,
That sees a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful;
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Among the infinite doings of the world,
Sometimes puts forth: In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 't was a fear
Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me: let me know my trespass
By its own visage: if I then deny it,
'T is none of mine.

Leon. Have not you seen, Camillo,
(But that 's past doubt—you have; or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,) or heard (For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute,) or thought, (for cogitation Resides not in that man that does not think,)
My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
(Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought,) then say
My wife 's a hobbyhorse; deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench, that puts to Before her troth-pledge: say it, and justify it.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken: 'Strew my heart
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh? (a note in fallible
Of breaking honesty:) horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift?
Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes

<sup>a</sup> Hoxes. To hox is to hamstring—to hough.

Blind with the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
Why, then the world, and all that 's in 't, is nothing;
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes;
For 't is most dangerous.

Leon. Say, it be; 't is 'true.

Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave;
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: Were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Cam. Who does infect her?

Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging
About his neck, Bohemia: Who—if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts,—they would do that
Which should undo more doing: Ay, and thou,
His cupbearer,—whom I from meaner form
Have bench'd and rear'd to worship; who may'st see Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled,—mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this; and that with no rash potion,
But with a ling'ring dram, that should not work Maliciously like poison: But I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee,——

Leon. Make that thy question, and go not?
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve is sleep; which being spotted,
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps?
Give scandal to the blood of the prince my son,
Who I do think is mine, and love as mine;
Without ripe moving to 't?—Would I do this?
Could man so blench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir;
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for 't:
Provided, that when he 's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first;
Even for your son's sake; and, thereby, for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down;
I 'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen: I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all:
Do 't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do 't not, thou splitt'st thine own.

Cam. I 'll do 't, my lord.

Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me.

[Exit]

"miserable lady!—But, for me, stand I in? I must be the poisoner Polixenes: and my ground to do 't hence to a master; one, rebellion with himself, will have his so too.—To do this deed, follows: If I could find example sds that had struck anointed kings sh'd after, I 'd not do 't: but since ner stone, nor parchment, bears not one, ty itself forswear 't. I must e court: to do 't, or no, is certain eak-neck. Happy star, reign now! s Bohemia.

Enter POLIXENES.

This is strange! methinks, here begins to warp. Not speak?— Camillo.

Hail, most royal sir! What is the news i' the court?

None rare, my lord. The king hath on him such a countenance lost some province, and a region he loves himself: even now I met him ordinary compliment; when he, his eyes to the contrary, and falling such contempt, speeds from me; and me, to consider what is breeding goes thus his manners.

I dare not know, my lord. How! dare not? do not? Do you know, and dare not vent to me. 'T is thereabouts; myself, what you do know you must; at say, you dare not. Good Camillo, g'd complexions are to me a mirror, swas me mine chang'd too: for I must be this alteration, finding as alter'd with it.

There is a sickness in some of us in distemper; but same the disease; and it is caught it yet are well.

How caught of me? Not sighted like the basilisk: I'd see thousands who have sped the better and, but kill'd none so. Camillo— certainly a gentleman; thereto experienc'd, which no less adorns t, than our parents' noble names, success* we are gentle,—I beseech you, we ought which does behove my knowledge be inform'd, imprison it not t concealment.

I may not answer. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well! answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Camillo? See, by all the parts of man ear does acknowledge,—whereof the least suit of mine,—that thou declare deny thou dost guess of harm toward me; how far off, how near; y to be prevented, if to be; t best to bear it.

Sir, I will tell you; e charg'd in honour, and by him at honourable: Therefore, mark my counsel;

* Success—succession.

Which must be even as swiftly follow'd as I mean to utter it; or both yourself and me Cry "lost," and so good night.

Pol. On, good Camillo.

Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.

Pol. For what?

Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence, he swears, As he had seen 't or been an instrument To vice you to 't,—that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. O, then my best blood turn To an infected jelly; and my name Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best! Turn then my freshest reputation to A savour that may strike the dullest nostril Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd, Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection That e'er was heard, or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over!

By each particular star in heaven, and By all their influences, you may as well Forbid the sea for to obey the moon, As, or by oath, remove, or counsel, shake The fabric of his folly; whose foundation Is pil'd upon his faith, and will continue The standing of his body.

Pol. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not: but, I am sure, 't is safer to Avoid what 's grown than question how 't is born. If therefore you dare trust my honesty,— That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you Shall bear along impawn'd,—away to-night. Your followers I will whisper to the business: And will, by twos and threes, at several posterns, Clear them o' the city: For myself, I 'll put My fortunes to your service, which are here By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain; For, by the honour of my parents, I Have utter'd truth: which, if you seek to prove, I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon His execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee; I saw his heart in his face. Give me thy hand; Be pilot to me, and thy places<sup>a</sup> shall Still neighbour mine: My ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure Two days ago.—This jealousy Is for a precious creature: as she 's rare, Must it be great; and, as his person 's mighty, Must it be violent: and as he does conceive He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me: Good expedition be my friend, and comfort The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo; I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence: Let us avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authority to command The keys of all the posterns: Please your highness To take the urgent hour: come, sir, away. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. The Palace.

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you : he so troubles me
'T is past enduring.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your playfellow ?

Mam. No, I 'll none of you.

1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord ?

Mam. You 'll kiss me hard ; and speak to me as if I were a baby still.—I love you better.

2 Lady. And why so, my lord ?

Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker ; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best ; so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught you this ?

Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces : pray now
What colour are your eyebrows ?

1 Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that 's a mock : I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

2 Lady. Hark ye :

The queen, your mother, rounds apace : we shall Present our services to a fine new prince,
One of these days ; and then you 'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.

1 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk ; Good time encounter her !

Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you ? Come, sir,
now

I am for you again : Pray you, sit by us,
And tell 's a tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall 't be ?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale 's best for winter :
I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let 's have that, good sir.
Come on, sit down :—Come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites : you 're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man,—

Her. Nay, come, sit down ; then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard ;—I will tell it softly ;
You crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then,
And give 't me in mine ear.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and others.

Leon. Was he met there ? his train ? Camillo with him ?

1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them ; never Saw I men scour so on their way : I ey'd them
Even to their ships.

Leon. How bless'd am I
In my just censure !—in my true opinion !—
Alack, for lesser knowledge !—How accurs'd
In being so bless'd !—There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd,<sup>a</sup> and one may drink ; depart,
And yet partake no venom ; for his knowledge
Is not infected : but if one present
The abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts :<sup>b</sup>—I have drunk, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander :—

<sup>a</sup> There was a popular notion that spiders were poisonous.

<sup>b</sup> Hefts—heavings.

There is a plot against my life, my crown ;
All 's true that is mistrusted :—that false villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him :
He has discover'd my design, and I
Remain a pinch'd thing ;<sup>a</sup> yea, a very trick
For them to play at will :—How came the postern
So easily open ?

1 Lord. By his great authority ;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so,
On your command.

Leon. I know 't too well.—
Give me the boy ; I am glad you did not nurse him
Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this ? sport ?

Leon. Bear the boy hence, he shall not come about Away with him :—and let her sport herself
With that she 's big with ; for 't is Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I 'd say, he had not
And, I 'll be sworn, you would believe my saying,
Howe'er you lean to the nayward.

Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well ; he but about
To say "she is a goodly lady," and

The justice of your hearts will thereto add,
" 'T is pity she 's not honest, honourable :"

Praise her but for this her without-door form,
(Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,) and strain

The shrug, the hum, or ha ; these petty brands
That calumny doth use :—O, I am out,

That mercy does ; for calumny will rear
Virtue itself : these shrugs, these hums, and ha's,

When you have said she 's goodly, come between,
Ere you can say she 's honest : But be 't known,
From him that has most cause to grieve it should be
She 's an adultress.

Her. Should a villain say so,
The most replenish'd villain in the world,
He were as much more villain : you, my lord,
Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes : O thou thing,

Which I 'll not call a creature of thy place,
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,

Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out

Betwixt the prince and beggar !—I have said,
She 's an adultress ; I have said, with whom :

More, she 's a traitor ; and Camillo is
A federary<sup>b</sup> with her ; and one that knows

What she should shame to know herself,
But with her most vile principal, that she 's

A bed-swerger, even as bad as those
That vulgars give bold 'st titles ; ay, and privy

To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this : How will this grieve you

When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me ! Gentle my lord,

You scarce can right me throughly then, to say
You did mistake.

Leon. No ; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The centre is not big enough to bear

<sup>a</sup> Pinch'd may convey the meaning of one made pett contemptible, shrunk up, pinched, as we say, by poverty hunger.

<sup>b</sup> Federary—confederate ; the same as feodary.

boy's top.—Away with her to prison :
I shall speak for her is afar off<sup>a</sup> guilty,
I'th' speak.

There 's some ill planet reigns :
Be patient, till the heavens look
An aspect more favourable.—Good my lords,
I'm prone to weeping, as our sex
Naturally are; the want of which vain dew,
I, like you, shall dry your pities: but I have
A mournful grief lodg'd here, which burns
Like tears shewn: Beseech you all, my lords,
Be so qualified as your charities
To instruct you, measure me;—and so
My griefs will be perform'd!

Shall I be heard? [To the Guards.]
Who is 't that goes with me?—Beseech your Highness,
I may be with me; for, you see,
The cause requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
The cause: when you shall know your mistress
Shall be in prison, then abound in tears,
And weep out: this action I now go on
In your better grace.—Adieu, my lord;
I wish'd to see you sorry; now,
I shall.—My women, come; you have leave.
Go, do our bidding; hence.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]
Beseech your highness, call the queen again.
Be certain what you do, sir; lest your justice
Be in the which three great ones suffer,
Your queen, your son.

For her, my lord,
My life lay down, and will do 't, sir,
You 't accept it, that the queen is spotless
In the eyes of Heaven, and to you; I mean,
Which you accuse her.

If it prove
Otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
My wife; I'll go in couples with her;
When I feel and see her, no further trust her;
No inch of woman in the world,
No dram of woman's flesh, is false,
I.

Hail your peaces.

Good my lord,—
It is for you we speak, not for ourselves;
I shall be damn'd for 't; 'would I knew the villain,
I would I knew the villain: Be she honour-flaw'd—
Three daughters; the eldest is eleven;
The second, and the third, nine, and some five;<sup>c</sup>
If they prove true, they'll pay for 't: by mine honour,
I'll be damn'd if I do not see 'em all: fourteen they shall not see,
If they prove false generations: they are co-heirs;
I had rather glib myself than they Should produce fair issue.

Cease; no more.
I'll do all this business with a sense as cold
As a dead man's nose: but I do see 't, and feel 't,
I feel doing thus; and see withal
The arguments that feel.<sup>d</sup>

If it be so,
I'll be damn'd to bury honesty;
I'll put a grain of it, the face to sweeten
The whole duny earth.

What! lack I credit?
I had rather you did lack than I, my lord,

[Exit.—Re-enter a Gentleman.]

We are unable to explain this. Farmer's note that it must be hardness him—poison him with it—is, we suppose, intended for a joke.

is and see refers to the second, and some five to the first. The scene must accompany this passage, as that of Antigonus.

Upon this ground: and more it would content me
To have her honour true, than your suspicion;
Be blam'd for 't how you might.

Leon. Why, what need we Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels; but our natural goodness
Imparts this: which—if you (or stupified,
Or seeming so in skill) cannot, or will not,
Relish a truth like us; inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on 't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity
(Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation,<sup>a</sup>
But only seeing,<sup>b</sup> all other circumstances
Made up to the deed), doth push on this proceeding
Yet, for a greater confirmation (For, in an act of this importance, 't were Most piteous to be wild), I have despatch'd in post,
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency: Now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well?

Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need no more Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others; such as he Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth: So have we thought it good,
From our free person she should be confin'd;
Lest that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us;
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter PAULINA and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison,—call to him;
[Exit an Attendant.]
Let him have knowledge who I am.—Good lady!
No court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou then in prison?—Now, good sir,

Re-enter Attendant, with the Keeper.

You know me, do you not?
Keep. For a worthy lady,
And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.

Keep. I may not, madam; to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here 's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from
The access of gentle visitors!—Is 't lawful, pray you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?

Keep. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.
[Exeunt Attendants.]

Keep. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.

<sup>a</sup> Approbation—proof. <sup>b</sup> Seeing—used as a noun.

Paul. Well, be it so, prithee. [Exit Keeper.
Here 's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.

Re-enter Keeper, with EMILIA.

Dear gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious lady?
Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn,
May hold together: on her frights, and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater,
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy?
Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives Much comfort in 't: says, "My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you."

Paul. I dare be sworn:—
These dangerous unsafe lures i' the king! beshrew them!
He must be told on 't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take 't upon me;
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister;
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more:—Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen;
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show 't the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to th' loudest: We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o' the child;
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue; there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand: Please your ladyship
To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer;
Who, but to-day, hammer'd of this design;
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it,
As boldness from my bosom, let it not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you bless'd for it!
I'll to the queen: Please you, come something nearer.
Keep. Madam, if 't please the queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur, to pass it,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir:
This child was prisoner to the womb; and is
By law and process of great nature, thence Freed and enfranchis'd: not a party to
The anger of the king; nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Keep. I do believe it.
Paul. Do not you fear; upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leon. Nor night nor day, no rest: It is but weakness
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness, if
The cause were not in being;—part o' the cause,
She, the adulteress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level of my brain, plot-proof: but she
I can hook to me: Say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again.—Who 's there?

I Attend. My lord! [Advancing.
Leon. How does the boy?

I Attend. He took good rest to-night
'T is hop'd his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply;
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on 't in himself;
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languish'd.—Leave me solely:— See how he fares. [Exit Attend.]—Fie, fie! no time
of him;

The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty:
And in his parties, his alliance.—Let him be,
Until a time may serve: for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh if I could reach them; nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter PAULINA, with a Child.

I Lord. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul;
More free than he is jealous.

Ant. That 's enough.
I Attend. Madam, he hath not slept to-night;
manded
None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot, good sir;
I come to bring him sleep. 'T is such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings,—such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as medicinal as true;
Honest as either; to purge him of that humour
That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho!
Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference
About some gossips for your highness.

Leon. How?—
Away with that audacious lady: Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me;
I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leon. What, canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this,
(Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me, for committing honour,) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Ant. La<sup>a</sup> you now; you hear!
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she 'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who professes Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor; yet that dares
Less appear so, in comforting<sup>b</sup> your evils,
Than such as most seem yours,—I say, I come
From your good queen.

Leon. Good queen!
Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say,
queen;

And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leon. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine own accord, I 'll off;
But, first, I 'll do my errand.—The good queen,

<sup>a</sup> La. This is commonly printed lo. The words such look you; but lo is used affectually, or ironically, as in this <sup>b</sup> Comforting—encouraging.

word. This is equivalent to our hen-pecked. To fire

Verdugan explains this as "one that hath lost e most of his own good and welfare, and so is and careless of credit and honesty."

(Not able to produce more accusation

Than your own weak-hing'd fancy) something savours
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon.

On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her. Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life ? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you, do not push me ; I 'll be gone.

Look to your babe, my lord ; 't is yours : Jove send
her

A better guiding spirit !—What need these hands ?—
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.

So, so :—Farewell ; we are gone. [Exit.

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this.—
My child ! away with 't !—even thou, that hast

A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire ;
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight
Within this hour bring me word 't is done,

(And by good testimony,) or I 'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine : If thou refuse,

And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so ;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands

Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire ;

For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant.

I did not, sir :

These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in 't.

I Lord.

We can, my royal liege,

He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leon. You are liars all.

I Lord. 'Beseech your highness, give us better credit ;

We have always truly serv'd you ; and beseech

So to esteem of us : And on our knees we beg,

(As recompense of our dear services,

Past, and to come,) that you do change this purpose ;

Which, being so horrible, so bloody, must

Lead on to some foul issue : We all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows :—

Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel

And call me father ? Better burn it now,

Than curse it then. But, be it ; let it live :

It shall not neither. You, sir, come you hither ; [to Ant.

You, that have been so tenderly officious

With lady Margery, your midwife, there,

To save this bastard's life : for 't is a bastard,

So sure as this beard's grey,<sup>a</sup>—what will you adventure

To save this brat's life ?

Ant.

Anything, my lord,

That my ability may undergo,

And nobleness impose : at least, thus much,—

I 'll pawn the little blood which I have left

To save the innocent : anything possible.

Leon. It shall be possible : Swear by this sword,

Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant.

I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark, and perform it ; (seest thou ?) for the fail

Of any point in 't shall not only be

Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife ;

Whom, for this time, we pardon. We enjoin thee,

As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry

This female bastard hence ; and that thou bear it

To some remote and desert place, quite out

Of our dominions ; and that there thou leave it,

Without more mercy, to its own protection,

And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune

It came to us, I do in justice charge thee,—

On thy soul's peril, and thy body's torture,—

That thou commend it strangely to some place

Where chance may nurse, or end it : Take it up.

<sup>a</sup> Leontes here probably points to the beard of Antigonus.

Ant. I swear to do this, though a present death
Had been more merciful.—Come on, poor babe :
Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens
To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,
Casting their savageness aside, have done
Like offices of pity.—Sir, be prosperous
In more than this deed does require! and blessing,
Against this cruelty, fight on thy side,
Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!<sup>a</sup> [Exit, with the Child.]

Leon. No, I'll not rear
Another's issue.

I Attend. Please your highness, posts,
From those you sent to the oracle, are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,

Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to the court.

I Lord. So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond account.

Leon. Twenty-three days
They have been absent: 't is good speed; foretells
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords;
Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady: for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burthen to me. Leave me;
And think upon my bidding. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Street.

Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate 's delicate: the air most sweet;
Fertile the isle; the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits,
(Methinks I so should term them,) and the reverence
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was i' the offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst
And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense,
That I was nothing.

Dion. If the event o' the journey
Prove as successful to the queen,—O, be 't so!—
As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on 't.

Cleo. Great Apollo,
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end, the business: When the oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up)
Shall the contents discover, something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge.—Go,—fresh horses;—
And gracious be the issue! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Court of Justice.

LEONTES, Lords, and Officers, appear properly seated.

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart: The party tried,
The daughter of a king; our wife; and one
Of us too much belov'd.—Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice; which shall have due course,
Even <sup>b</sup> to the guilt, or the purgation.
Produce the prisoner.

Offi. It is his highness' pleasure that the queen
Appear in person here in court.—Silence!

HERMIONE is brought in, guarded; PAULINA and Ladies attending.

Leon. Read the indictment.

Offi. "Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king probably means exposure.

of Bohemia; and conspiring with Camillo to take the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal band: the pretence<sup>a</sup> thereof being by circumstance partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and them, for their better safety, to fly away by night."

Her. Since what I am to say must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testimony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me
To say, "Not guilty;" mine integrity,
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus,—If powers divine
Behold our human actions, as they do,
I doubt not then but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience.—You, my lord, best know,
(Who least will seem to do so,) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devis'd,
And play'd, to take spectators: For behold me,—
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince,—here standing,
To prate and talk for life and honour 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it,
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honour,
'T is a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal

To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent I
Have strain'd, <sup>b</sup> to appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour; or, in act or will,
That way inclining; harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry Fie! upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.

Her. That 's true enough;
Though 't is a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mist
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must be
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes, chivalry, in which one swerving from the accustomed would be uncurrent.

themselves I am accus'd,) I do confess,
 as in honour he requir'd,
 as a kind of love as might become like me; with a love, even such,
 as either, as yourself commanded:
 as to have done, I think, had been in me obedience and ingratitude, and toward your friend; whose love had spoke,
 as it could speak, from an infant, freely,
 as yours. Now, for conspiracy, as how it tastes; though it be dish'd as to try how: all I know of it as Camillo was an honest man;
 as he left your court, the gods themselves,
 as no more than I, are ignorant.

You knew of his departure, as you know
 as to have underta'en to do in his absence.

Sir,
 as a language that I understand not:
 as words in the level of your dreams,<sup>a</sup>
 'll lay down.

Your actions are my dreams;
 as a bastard by Polixenes,
 as a dream'd it:—As you were past all shame,
 as (your fact are so,) so past all truth:
 as deny, concerns more than avails: For as
 as hath been cast out, like to itself, as poisoning it, (which is, indeed, as animal in thee, than it,) so thou as our justice; in whose easiest passage, as no less than death.

Sir, spare your threats;
 as which you would fright me with I seek.
 as a life be no commodity:
 as and comfort of my life, your favour,
 as lost; for I do feel it gone,
 as not how it went: My second joy,
 as fruits of my body, from his presence
 as 'd, like one infectious: My third comfort, as sent unduckily, is from my breast,
 as sent milk in its most innocent mouth,
 as it to murder: Myself on every post
 as 'd a strumpet; with immodest hatred, as that privilege denied, which longs as of all fashion:—Lastly, hurried as his place, 't the open air, before as a strength of limit. Now, my liege, as what blessings I have here alive,
 as would fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
 as fear this; mistake me not;—No life,
 as not a straw:—but for mine honour,
 as I would free,) if I shall be condemn'd as misis; all proofs sleeping else, as (your jealousies awake; I tell you as not, and not law.—Your honours all,
 as me to the oracle;
 as my judge.

This your request
 as for just: therefore, bring forth,
 as Apollo's name, his oracle. [Ex. certain Officers.
 as the emperor of Russia was my father:
 as were alive, and here beholding as her's trial! that he did but see as me of my misery; yet with eyes as not revenge!

Enter Officers, with CLOMENS and DION.
 as (we here shall swear upon this sword of justice, as Clomenes and Dion, have as out Delphus; and from thence have brought as the-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd

as seems a kind the level, the aim, of this accusation;
 as therefore stands within the range of the attack you

Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
 as You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
 as Nor read the secrets in 't.

Cleo., Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Offi. [Reads.] "Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, as Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, as his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall as live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found."

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Prais'd!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Offi. Ay, my lord; even so as As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle:
 as The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, hastily.

Serv. My lord the king, the king!

Leon. What is the business?

Serv. O sir, I shall be hated to report it:
 as The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
 as Of the queen's speed,<sup>a</sup> is gone.

Leon. How! gone?

Serv. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry; and the Heavens themselves as Do strike at my injustice. [HERMIONE faints.] How as now there?

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen:—Look down, as And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:

as Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover.—
 as I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion:— as 'Beseech you, tenderly apply to her as Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon

[Exeunt PAULINA and Ladies, with HERM.

as My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!—

as I 'll reconcile me to Polixenes;

as New woo my queen; recall the good Camillo,

as Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy:

as For, being transported by my jealousies

as To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose as Camillo for the minister, to poison

as My friend Polixenes: which had been done,

as But that the good mind of Camillo tardied as My swift command, though I with death, and with as Reward, did threaten and encourage him,

as Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane,

as And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest

as Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here,

as Which you knew great; and to the hazard

as Of all incertainties himself commended,

as No richer than his honour:—How he glisters

as Thorough my rust! and how his piety

as Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter PAULINA.

Paul. Woe the while!

as O, cut my lace; lest my heart, cracking it,

as Break too!

as Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

as Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?

as What wheels? racks? fires? What flaying? boiling, as In leads, or oils? what old or newer torture

as Must I receive; whose every word deserves

as To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny as Together working with thy jealousies,—

as Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle

as For girls of nine!—O, think what they have done,

as And then run mad, indeed; stark mad! for all as Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.

as That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 't was nothing;

as That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant,

as <sup>a</sup> Of how the queen may speed—of the issue of this charge.

And damnable ingrateful : nor was 't much,
 Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's honour,
 To have him kill a king ; poor trespasses,
 More monstrous standing by : whereof I reckon
 The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter,
 To be or none, or little ; though a devil
 Would have shed water out of fire, ere done 't :
 Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death
 Of the young prince ; whose honourable thoughts
 (Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
 That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
 Blemish'd his gracious dam : this is not, no,
 Laid to thy answer : But the last,—O, lords,
 When I have said, cry Woe !—the queen, the queen,
 The sweetest, dearest creature 's dead ; and vengeance
 for 't

Not dropp'd down yet.

Lord. The higher powers forbid !

Paul. I say, she 's dead : I 'll swear 't : if word, nor oath,

Prevail not, go and see : if you can bring Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
 Heat outwardly, or breath within, I 'll serve you
 As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant !
 Do not repent these things ; for they are heavier
 Than all thy woes can stir : therefore betake thee
 To nothing but despair. A thousand knees,
 Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
 Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
 In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
 To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on :

Thou canst not speak too much ; I have deserv'd
 All tongues to talk their bitterest.

Lord. Say no more ;

Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
 I the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for 't ;

All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
 I do repent : Alas, I have show'd too much
 The rashness of a woman : he is touch'd
 To the noble heart.—What 's gone, and what 's past help,

Should be past grief : Do not receive affliction
 At my petition, I beseech you ; rather Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
 Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
 Sir, royal sir, forgiv' a foolish woman :
 The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool, again !—
 I 'll speak of her no more, nor of your children ;
 I 'll not remember you of my own lord,
 Who is lost too : Take your patience to you,
 And I 'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well,

When most the truth ; which I receive much better Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee, bring me
 To the dead bodies of my queen, and son :
 One grave shall be for both ; upon them shall
 The causes of their death appear, unto
 Our shame perpetual : Once a day I 'll visit
 The chapel where they lie ; and tears, shed there,
 Shall be my recreation : So long as Nature
 Will bear up with this exercise, so long
 I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
 To these sorrows.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Bohemia. A desert Country near the Sea.

Enter ANTIGONUS, with the Child ; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect<sup>a</sup> then, our ship hath touch'd upon

The deserts of Bohemia ?

<sup>a</sup> Perfect—assured.

Mar.

Ay, my lord ; and fear
 We have landed in ill time : the skies look grimly,
 And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
 The Heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
 And frown upon us.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done !—Go, get aboard
 Look to thy bark ; I 'll not be long before
 I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste ; and go not Too far i' the land : 't is like to be loud weather ;
 Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
 Of prey, that keep upon 't.

Ant. Go thou away :
 I 'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
 To be so rid o' the business.

[Exit.]

Ant.

Come, poor babe !—
 I have heard, (but not believ'd,) the spirits of the dead
 May walk again : if such thing be, thy mother
 Appear'd to me last night ; for ne'er was dream
 So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
 Sometimes her head on one side, some another ;
 I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
 So fill'd, and so becoming : in pure white robes,
 Like very sanctity she did approach
 My cabin where I lay : thrice bow'd before me ;
 And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
 Became two spouts : the fury spent, anon
 Did this break from her : " Good Antigonus,
 Since fate, against thy better disposition,
 Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
 Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
 Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
 There weep, and leave it crying ; and, for the babe
 Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,
 I prithee, call 't : for this ungentle business,
 Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see Thy wife Paulina more : "—and so, with shrieks,
 She melted into air. Affrighted much,
 I did in time collect myself ; and thought
 This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys ;
 Yet, for this once, yea, superstitiously,
 I will be squar'd by this. I do believe Hermione hath suffer'd death ; and that Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
 Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
 Either for life, or death, upon the earth
 Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well !

[Laying down the Child.]
 There lie ; and there thy character :<sup>a</sup> there these ;

[Laying down a bundle.]
 Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee prey
 And still rest thine.—The storm begins :—
 wretch,

That, for thy mother's fault, art thus expos'd
 To loss, and what may follow !—Weep I cannot,
 But my heart bleeds : and most accur'd am I,
 To be by oath enjoin'd to this.—Farewell !
 The day frowns more and more—thou 'rt like to be
 A lullaby too rough : I never saw
 The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour !—
 Well may I get aboard !—This is the chace ;
 I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a Storm.]

Enter an old Shepherd.

Shep. I would there was no age between me three-and-twenty ; or that youth would sleep out there for there is nothing in the between but getting wench with child, wronging the ancients, stealing, lying,
 —Hark you now !—Would any but these boiled heads of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather
 They have scared away two of my best sheep ; what
 I fear, the wolf will sooner find than the master ;

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman; he 's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou mett'at with things thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth<sup>a</sup> for a squire's child!

Clo. You 're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you 're well to live. Gold!
 all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 't will prove so:
 up with it, keep it close; home, home, the next way.
 We are lucky, boy, and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy.—Let my sheep go:—Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings; I 'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst,<sup>c</sup> but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I 'll bury it.

Shep. That 's a good deed: If thou mayst discern, by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him
 i' the ground.

Shep. 'T is a lucky day, boy; and we 'll do good deeds on 't. [Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes.

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 't is a sickness denying thee anything; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country.
 Though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me: to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so; which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee thine own goodness hath made; better not to the church to be baptized."

to have had thee than thus to want thee: thou, having made me businesses which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered. (as too much I cannot,) to be more thankful to thee shall be my study; and my profit therein, the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, prithee speak no more; whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou callest him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when sawest thou the prince Florizel my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince: What his happier affairs may be are to me unknown: but I have, missingly,<sup>a</sup> noted he is of late much retired from court; and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service which look upon his removedness, from whom I have this intelligence: That he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence. But I fear the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place: where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd: from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prithee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.<sup>b</sup>

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!
Both set my pugging<sup>c</sup> tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark that tirra-lirra chants,
With heigh! with hey! the thrush and the jay
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile;<sup>d</sup> but now I am out of service.

But shall I go mourne for that, my dear?
The pale moon shines by night;
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin bowget;
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.

<sup>a</sup> Missingly. Steevens explains this,—“I have observed him at intervals.” But is it not rather—missing him, I have noted he is of late much retired from court?

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, linen.<sup>a</sup> My father named me Autolycus as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise up of unconsidered trifles: With die, and chased this caparison; and my revenue cheat: Gallows, and knock, are too pow highway: beating, and hanging, are terror the life to come, I sleep out the thought of a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Let me see:—Every eleven wether-tod yields—pound and odd shilling: fift shorn,—What comes the wool to?<sup>b</sup>

Clow. I cannot do't without counters.—what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing fe pound of sugar; five pound of currants: What will this sister of mine do with rice father bath made her mistress of the feast, it on. She hath made me four-and-twef for the shearers: three-man song-men all good ones; but they are most of them mean but one Puritan amongst them, and he sin hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour pies;<sup>c</sup> mace,—dates,—none; that's out o nutmegs, seven; a race or two of ginger may beg; four pound of prunes, and as sins o' the sun.

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Groveling o]

Clow. I' the name of me,—

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but o and then, death, death!

Clow. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need o to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir, the loathsomeness of them more than the stripes I have received; whic ones, and millions.

Clow. Alas, poor man! a million of beating to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my apparel ta'en from me, and these detestabl upon me.

Clow. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-m

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man,

Clow. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, ments he hath left with thee; if this be a coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend n I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand. [

Aut. O, good sir, tenderly, oh!

Clow. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good sir, softly, good sir: I f shoulder-blade is out.

Clow. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [picks his pocket softly; you ha' done me a charitable office.

Clow. Dost lack any money? I have a l for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir, no, I beseech have a kinsman not past three-quarters of a unto whom I was going; I shall there have anything I want: Offer me no money, I p kills my heart.

I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues

His vices, you would say; there's no virtue out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay and yet it will no more but abide.<sup>a</sup>

Vices, I would say, sir. I know this man well:
been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server,
then he compassed a motion of the prodigal and married a tinker's wife within a mile where professions, he settled only in rogue: some call

Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he

Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that 's the rogue that

Sweet sir, much better than I was; I can stand,

Shall I bring thee on the way?

No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Then face thee well; I must go buy spices for p-shearing.

NE III.—The same. A Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

These your unusual weeds to each part of you

g in April's front. This your sheep-shearing meeting of the petty gods,
so the queen on 't.

Sir, my gracious lord,
sit at your extremes it not becomes me;
don, that I name them: your high self,
across mark o' the land, you have obscur'd
a swain's wearing; and me, poor lowly maid,

<sup>a</sup> Shale-shears.

Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now: Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer;
Nor in a way so chaste: since my desires
Run not before mine honour; nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 't is Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power o' the king;
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak; that you must change this purpose,

Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prithee, darken not
The mirth o' the feast: Or I 'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's: for I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any, if
I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say No. Be merry, gentle;
Strangle such thoughts as these, with anything
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming:
Lift up your countenance; as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!

Enter Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAMILLO disguised; Clown, MOPSA, DORCAS, and others.

Flo. [See, your guests approach:
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let 's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook;
Both dame and servant: welcom'd all; serv'd all Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now
here,

At upper end o' the table, now, i' the middle;
On his shoulder, and his: her face o' fire
With labour; and the thing she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip: You are retir'd
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting: Pray you, bid
These unknown friends to us welcome: for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come, quench your blushes; and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast: Come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. Sir, welcome! [To POL.]
It is my father's will I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day:—You 're welcome, sir!

[To CAM.]
Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs,
For you there 's rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming, and savour, all the winter long:
Grace, and remembrance, be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess,
(A fair one are you,) well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gilly'vors,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Gilly'vors. We print this word as it is twice printed in the original. Some of the old authors write gillyflower, some gillifre. Gilly'vor is perhaps a contraction of gillyflower.

Which some call nature's bastards : of that kind
Our rustic garden 's barren ; and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them ?

Per. For I have heard it said,
There is an art which, in their piedness, shares
With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be ;
Yet nature is made better by no mean,
But nature makes that mean : so, over that art,
Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock ;
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race : This 's an art
Which does mend nature,—change it rather : but
The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.
Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilly'vors,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. I 'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them :
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say, 't were well ; and only therefore Desire to breed by me.—Here 's flowers for you ;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram ;
The marigold, that goes to bed with the sun,
And with him rises weeping ; these are flowers
Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given
To men of middle age : You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.

Per. Out, alas !
You 'd be so lean, that blasts of January Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fairest friend,

I would I had some flowers o' the spring, that might Become your time of day ; and yours, and yours ;
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing :—O, Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that, frighted, thou lett'st fall
From Dis's waggon ! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty ; violets, dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath ; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids ; bold oxlips, and
The crown-imperial ; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one ! O ! these I lack,
To make you garlands of ; and, my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Flo. What ! like a corse ?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on ;
Not like a corse : or if,—not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers :
Methinks, I play as I have seen them do,
In Whitsun' pastorals : sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I 'd have you do it ever : when you sing,
I 'd have you buy and sell so ; so give alms ;
Pray so ; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too : When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that ; move still, still so,
And own no other function : Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
at all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles,

Your praises are too large : but that your you
And the true blood which peeps fairly through Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think, you h
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to 't.—But, come ; our dance !
Your hand, my Perdita : so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I 'll swear for 'em
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass that Ran on the green sward : nothing she does or
But snacks of something greater than herself ;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something
That makes her blood look out : Good sooth,
The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, str
Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress : marry,
To mend her kissing with.

Mop. Now, in good tim
Clo. Not a word, a word ; we stand upon ners.—

Come, strike up.

Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdes.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain
Which dances with your daughter ?

Shep. They call him Doricles ; and boasts
To have a worthy feeding :<sup>a</sup> but I have it Upon his own report, and I believe it ;
He looks like sooth :<sup>b</sup> He says, he loves my d
I think so too : for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he 'll stand, and read,
As 't were, my daughter's eyes : and, to be pl
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances feately.
Shep. So she does anything ; though I rep
That should be silent : if young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear the ped door, you would never dance again after a pipe ; no, the bagpipe could not move you :
several tunes faster than you 'll tell money ;
them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better : he shall I love a ballad but even too well ; if it be dol ter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thin and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of no milliner can so fit his customers with glove the prettiest love-songs for maids ; so without which is strange ; with such delicate burthens and fadings :<sup>c</sup> " jump her and thump her ;"
some stretch-mouthed rascal would, as it w mischief, and break a foul gap into the n makes the maid to answer, " Whoop, do me good man ;"<sup>d</sup> puts him off, slights him, with do me no harm, good man."

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an adm ceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares ?

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours i bow ; points, more than all the lawyers in Boh learnedly handle, though they come to him
gross ; inkles, caddisses, cambrics, lawns ;

<sup>a</sup> Feeding—pasture.

As white as driven snow;
As black as e'er was crow;
As sweet as damask roses;
As like for loons, and for noses;
The bracelet, necklace-amber,
Brim for a lady's chamber;
Then quiffs, and stomachers,
My lads to give their dears;
As, and poking-sticks of steel,
At maids lack from head to heel:

Or else your lasses cry: Come, buy.

e 'll buy the other things anon.

er's another ballad, Of a fish, that appeared man, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, and fathom above water, and sung this ballad hard hearts of maids: it was thought she as, and was turned into a cold fish, for she exchange flesh with one that loved her: The ry painful, and as true.

modern usage signifies." <sup>b</sup>

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it; and witnesses, more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: Another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad; but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let 's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one; and goes to the tune of 'Two maids wooing a man:' there 's scarce a maid westward, but she sings it; 't is in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it; if thou 'lt bear a part,
thou shalt bear; 't is in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on 't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know, 't is my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

A. Get you hence, for I must go;

Where it fits not you to know.

D. Whither?

M. O, whither?

D. Whither?

M. It becomes thy oath full well,

Thou to me thy secrets tell:

D. Me too, let me go thither.

M. Or thou go'st to the grange, or mill:

D. If to either, thou dost ill.

A. Neither.

D. What, neither?

A. Neither.

D. Thou hast sworn my love to be;

M. Thou hast sworn it more to me:

Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

Clo. We 'll have this song out anon by ourselves:
My father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we 'll not trouble them: Come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I 'll buy for you both:—Pedlar, let 's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em. [Aside.]

Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your cape,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Money 's a medler,
That doth utter all men's ware-a.

[Exeunt Clo., Aut., Dor., and Mop.]

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neatherds, three swineherds, that have made themselves all men of hair; they call themselves saltiers:
and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry<sup>a</sup> of gambols, because they are not in 't;
but they themselves are o' the mind, (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling,) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away! we 'll none on 't; here has been too much homely foolery already:—I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us: Pray, let 's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.<sup>b</sup>

Shep. Leave your prating: since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in; but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.]

Re-enter Servant, with Twelve Rustics, habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.

Pol. O, father, you 'll know more of that hereafter.—
Is it not too far gone?—'T is time to part them.—<sup>c</sup>

conversing apart, and this is a continuation of their supposed dialogue.

He's simple and tells much. [Aside.—How now, fair shepherd?

Your heart is full of something that does take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young,
And handed love as you do, I was wont
To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd
The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it
To her acceptance; you have let him go
And nothing marted with him: If your lass Interpretation should abuse, and call this
Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited
For a reply, at least, if you make a care
Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are:
The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd
Up in my heart; which I have given already,
But not deliver'd.—O, hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it;
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow,
That's bolted by the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?—
How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand was fair before!—I have put you out:—
But to your protestation; let me hear
What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to 't.
Pol. And this my neighbour too?
Flo. And he, and more
Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all:
That, were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve; had force, and knowledge,
More than was ever man's, I would not prize them,
Without her love: for her, employ them all;
Commend them, and condemn them, to her service,
Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.
Cam. This shows a sound affection.
Shep. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargain;—
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to 't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.

Flo. O, that must be
I' the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder: But, come on,
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.
Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, 'beseech you;
Have you a father?

Flo. I have: But what of him?
Pol. Knows he of this?
Flo. He neither does, nor shall.

Pol. Methinks, a father
Is, at the nuptial of his son, a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more;
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? and again does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo. No, good sir:

He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial: Reason, my son
Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason
The father (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this;
But, for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 't is not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know 't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Prithee, let him.

Flo. No, he must
Shep. Let him, my son; he shall not need to
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir [Discovering]

Whom son I dare not call; thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: Thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheephook!—Thou old traitor
I am sorry, that, by hanging thee, I can
But shorten thy life one week.—And thou, fresh
Of excellent witchcraft, who, of force, must know
The royal food thou cop'st with;—

Shep. O, my heart

Pol. I 'll have thy beauty scratch'd with his

More homely than thy state.—For thee, fond boy
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh
That thou no more shalt never see* this knave
never

I mean thou shalt,) we 'll bar thee from success
Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin,
Far than Deucalion off.—Mark thou my words
Follow us to the court.—Thou churl, for this tin
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchantment
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever, henceforth, thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to 't.

Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afeard: for once, or twice,
I was about to speak; and tell him plainly,
The self-same sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.—Will 't please you, sir, be gone?
I told you what would come of this: 'Beseech you
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine
Being now awake, I 'll queen it no inch farther,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, &c.
Speak, ere thou diest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.—O, sir,
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay
Where no priest shovels in dust.—O cursed was [to Per]

That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst not
To mingle faith with him.—Undone! undone!

* The double negative is characteristic of Shakspeare die within this hour, I have liv'd as I desire.

Why look you so upon me?
Why, not afraid; delay'd,
I alter'd: What I was, I am:
I sing on, for plucking back; not following unwillingly.

Gracious my lord,
your father's temper: at this time
I have no speech,—which, I do guess,
I purpose to him;—and as hardly
I dare your sight as yet, I fear:
The fury of his highness settle,
before him.

I not purpose it.
Camillo.

Even he, my lord.
How often have I told you 't would be thus!
I said, my dignity would last were known!

It cannot fail, but by an of my faith: And then
I crush the sides o' the earth together,
I he seeds within! Lift up thy looks:
I succession wipe me, father! I
I my affection.

Be advis'd.
I do; and by my fancy: * if my reason to be obedient, I have reason;
I senses, better pleas'd with madness,
I welcome.

This is desperate, sir.
I call it: but it does fulfil my vow;
I set think it honesty. Camillo,
I shema, nor the pomp that may
I gleam'd; for all the sun sees, or
I earth womb, or the profound seas hide
I in fathoms, will I break my oath
I fair below'd: Therefore, I pray you,
I we ever been my father's honour'd friend,
I shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
I a any more,) cast your good counsels
I passion: Let myself and fortune
I a time to come. This you may know,
I diver,—I am put to sea
I whom here I cannot hold on shore;
I t opportunity to her need,<sup>b</sup> I have
I flies fast by, but not prepar'd
I design. What course I mean to hold
I sing benefit your knowledge, nor
I we the reporting.

O, my lord,
I our spirit were easier for advice,
I or for your need.

Hark, Perdita. [Takes her aside.
I you by and by. [to CAMILLO.

He 's irremovable,
I to flight: now were I happy, if
I I could frame to serve my turn;
I from danger, do him love and honour;
I the sight again of dear Sicilia,
I unhappy king, my master, whom
I I chide to see.

Now, good Camillo,
I sought with curious business, that
I t ceremony.

Sir, I think,
I heard of my poor services, 't the love
I or harme your father?

Very nobly
I deserv'd: it is my father's music,
I our deeds; not little of his care
I our recompens'd as thought on.

Per. * Her need—the need we have o' her.

Cam.

Well, my lord,

If you may please to think I love the king,
And, through him, what is nearest to him, which is
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction,
(If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration,) on mine honour
I 'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see,
There 's no disjunction to be made, but by,
As Heavens forbid! your ruin;) marry her;
And (with my best endeavours, in your absence)
Your discontenting father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done?

That I may call thee something more than man,
And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place, whereto you 'll go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:
This follows,—if you will not change your purpose,
But undergo this flight,—make for Sicilia;
And there present yourself, and your fair princess,
(For so, I see, she must be,) 'fore Leontes;
She shall be habited as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping
His welcomes forth: asks thee, the son, forgiveness,
As 't were i' the father's person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess: o'er and o'er divides him
Twixt his unkindness and his kindness; the one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than thought or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king your father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I 'll write you down:

The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say; that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you:
There is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores: most certain,

To miseries enough: no hope to help you:
But, as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certain as your anchors; who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you 'll be loth to be: Besides, you know,
Prosperity 's the very bond of love;
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not, at your father's house, these seven years,
Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo.

She is as forward of her breeding, as
She is i' the rear of our birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 't is pity
She lacks instructions; for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir, for this:
I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita!—
But, O, the thorns we stand upon!—Camillo,— Preserver of my father, now of me;
The medicine of our house!—how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son;
Nor shall appear in Sicilia—

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The scene you play were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want,—one word.

[They talk aside.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery; not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting; they throng who should buy first, as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture; and what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his petticoats till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears:
you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless;
't was nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses: and had not the old man come in with a whoobub against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs from the chaff,
I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

[CAM., FLO., and PER. come forward.]

Cam. Nay, but my letters by this means being
there

So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from king
Leontes—

Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!
All that you speak shows fair.

Cam. Who have we here?—

[Seeing AUTOLYCUS.]

We'll make an instrument of this; omit
Nothing may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now,—why, hanging. [Aside.]

Cam. How now, good fellow? why shakest thou so?
Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.

Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee: Yet, for the outside of thy poverty we must make an exchange: therefore, discase thee instantly, (thou must think there's a necessity in 't,) and change garments with this gentleman: Though the pennyworth, on his side, be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir:—I know ye well enough. [Aside.]

Cam. Nay, prithee, despatch: the gentleman is half flay'd already

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—I smell on 't.—

Flo. Despatch, I prithee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I can conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—

[FLO. and AUT. exchange g]

Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy
Come home to you!—you must retire yourself
Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat,
And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face
Dismantle you; and, as you can, disliken
The truth of your own seeming; that you may (For I do fear eyes over you) to shipboard Get undescried.

Per. I see the play so lies
That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.—
Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my
He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have Come, lady, come.—Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu.

Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot
Pray you, a word. [They conce]

Cam. What I do next shall be, to tell the king
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail
To force him after; in whose company
I shall review Sicilia; for whose sight
I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed the better.

[Exeunt FLO., PER., &]

Aut. I understand the business, I hear it:
an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand,
sary for a cutpurse; a good nose is requisite to smell out work for the other senses. I see this is that the unjust man doth thrive. What an had this been, without boot! what a boot is this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year us, and we may do anything extempore. Theft himself is about a piece of iniquity; steals from his father, with his clog at his heels: If it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king
I would not do 't: I hold it the more kn conceal it; and therein am I constant to fession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside;—here is more matter for a
Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, yields a careful man work.

Clo. See, see; what a man you are now! the other way but to tell the king she's a changel none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to then.

Clo. She being none of your flesh and bl flesh and blood has not offended the king; and flesh and blood is not to be punished by him those things you found about her; those secrets all but what she has with her: This being don law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word;
his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no less neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to the king's brother-in-law.

Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the farthest could have been to him; and then your blood
the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

very wisely; puppies!
Well; let us to the king; there is that in this
I make him scratch his beard.

I know not what impediment this complaint is the flight of my master.

Pray heartily he be at palace.
Though I am not naturally honest, I am so by chance:—Let me pocket up my pedlar's
t.—[Takes off his false beard.] How now,
whither are you bound?

To the palace, an 't like your worship.
Four affairs there; what; with whom; the
of that fardel; the place of your dwelling;
ses; your ages; of what having, breeding;
ing that is fitting to be known, discover.

We are but plain fellows, sir.
I lie; you are rough and hairy: Let me nave it becomes none but tradesmen, and they us soldiers the lie: but we pay them for it ped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they re us the lie.

Your worship had like to have given us one, if not taken yourself with the manner.

Are you a courtier, an 't like you, sir?
Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier.

Is not the air of the court in these enfoldings?
my gait in it the measure of the court? rel thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not seness, court-contempt? Think'st thou, for imate, or toze from thee thy business, I am no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pè; and will either push on or pluck back thy business serapon I command thee to open thy affair.

My business, sir, is to the king.
What advocate hast thou to him?

I know not, an 't like you.
Advocate 's the court-word for a pheasant; say, same.

None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen.
Iow bless'd are we that are not simple men!
I might have made me as these are,
I 'll not disdain.

His cannot be but a great courtier.
His garments are rich, but he wears them not by.

It seems to be the more noble in being fantastist man, I 'll warrant; I know by the picketch.

Is the fardel there? what 's i' the fardel?
that box?

It, there lies such secrets in this fardel and I scarce must know but the king; and which are within this hour, if I may come to the time.

Or, thou hast lost thy labour.
Why, sir?

The king is not at the palace: he is gone
new ship to purge melancholy, and air him-if thou be st capable of things serious, thou the king is full of grief.

So 't is said, sir, about his son, that should ed a shepherd's daughter.

That shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him eyes he shall have, the tortures he shall feel,
the back of man, the heart of monster.

Think you so, sir?

—estate.
are paid for lying, they do not give us the lie.
—measure—in the lan.

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I; Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an 't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive; then,
'nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then stand, till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vitæ, or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication proclaims, shall he be set against a brick wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the king: being something gently considered, I 'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold;
show the inside of your nurse to the outside of his hand,
and no more ado: Remember, stoned and flayed alive!

Shep. An 't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I 'll make it as much more; and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety:—Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir; but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O, that 's the case of the shepherd's son:—
Hang him, he 'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: we must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know 't is none of your daughter, nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the seaside; go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

Shep. Let 's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good. [Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion; gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement?
I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: it he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to 't: To him will I present them; there may be matter in it. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes.

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down More penitence than done trespass: At the last Do, as the Heavens have done; forget your evil; With them, forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them; and so still think of The wrong I did myself: which was so much, That heirless it hath made my kingdom; and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion that e'er man Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord: If, one by one, you wedded all the world, Or, from the all that are took something good, To make a perfect woman, she, you kill'd, Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd! She I kill'd! I did so: but thou strik'st me Sorely, to say I did; it is as bitter Upon thy tongue as in my thought. Now, good now, Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady; You might have spoken a thousand things that would Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so, You pity not the state, nor the remembrance Of his most sovereign name; consider little, What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue, May drop upon his kingdom, and devour Incertain lookers-on. What were more holy Than to rejoice the former queen is well? What holier than,—for royalty's repair, For present comfort and for future good,— To bless the bed of majesty again With a sweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy, Respecting her that 's gone. Besides, the gods Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes: For has not the divine Apollo said, Is 't not the tenor of his oracle, That king Leontes shall not have an heir Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall, Is all as monstrous to our human reason, As my Antigonus to break his grave, And come again to me; who, on my life, Did perish with the infant. 'T is your counsel My lord should to the Heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills.—Care not for issue; [to LEON.] The crown will find an heir: Great Alexander Left his to the worthiest; so his successor Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,— Who hast the memory of Hermione, I know, in honour,—O, that ever I Had squar'd me to thy counsel! then, even now,

* In 'Antony and Cleopatra' we have an explanation of the text:—

"We use to say, the dead are well."

I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes; Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paul. And left them More rich, for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth. No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one worse, And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit Again possess her corps; and, on this stage, (Where we offenders now,) appear, soul-vex'd, And begin, "Why to me?"

Paul. Had she such power, She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so: Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark Her eye; and tell me, for what dull part in 't You chose her: then I'd shriek, that even your ears Should rift to hear me; and the words that follow'd Should be, "Remember mine!"

Leon. Stars, stars, And all eyes else dead coals!—fear thou no wife, I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear Never to marry, but by my free leave?

Leon. Never, Paulina: so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to an oath,—

Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Paul. Unless another, As like Hermione as is her picture, Affront his eye;—

Cleo. Good madam, I have done.

Paul. Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, No remedy but you will; give me the office To choose you a queen; she shall not be so young As was your former; but she shall be such As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina, We shall not marry till thou bidd'st us.

Paul. That Shall be, when your first queen 's again in breath; Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. One that gives out himself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes as Like to his father's greatness: his approach, So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us 'T is not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd By need and accident. What train?

Gent. But few, And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with her?

Gent. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth, I think That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione, As every present time doth boast itself Above a better, gone, so must thy grave Give way to what 's seen now. Sir, you your Have said, and writ so, (but your writing now Is colder than that theme,) "She had not been,

* The vehemence of Paulina overbears the issue (Cleomenes, and he says, "I have done.")

at to be equall'd ;"—thus your verse
In her beauty once ; 't is shrewdly ebb'd,
I have seen a better.

Pardon, madam ;
I have almost forgot ; (your pardon,)
When she has obtain'd your eye,
Your tongue too. This is a creature,
Who begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of others else ; make proselytes
But bid follow.

How ? not women ?
Women will love her, that she is a woman,
More than any man ; men, that she is Not of all women.

Go, Cleomenes ;
Assisted with your honour'd friends,
Come to our embracement.—Still 't is strange,
Excellent CLEOMENES, Lords, and Gentleman,
How could you steal upon us.

Had our prince
(children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
With this lord ; there was not full a month
Between their births.

Prithce, no more ; cease ; thou know'st,
I come again, when talk'd of : sure,
I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Give me to consider that which may Be of some reason.—They are come.—

CLEOMENES, with FLORIZEL, PERDITA, and Attendants.

Her was most true to wedlock, prince ;
I had print your royal father off,
I beg you : Were I but twenty-one,
Your image is so hit in you,
Sir, that I should call you brother,
And him ; and speak of something, wildly
I should reform'd before. Most dearly welcome :
O fair princess, goddess !—O, alas !
A couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Have stood, begetting wonder, as Such couples, do ! and then I lost
My own folly) the society,
And of your brave father ; whom,
Bearing misery, I desire my life
To look on him.

By his command
I have touch'd Sicilia : and from him
I call greetings, that a king, at friend,
This brother : and, but infirmity
(I wait upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His ability, he had himself
In sea and waters 'twixt your throne and his
To look upon you ; whom he loves
(I may say so) more than all the sceptres,
That bear them, living.

O, my brother,
(Gentleman !) the wrongs I have done thee stir
Not in me ; and these thy offices,
So kind, are as interpreters
Of my blind-hand slackness !—Welcome hither,
I spring to the earth. And hath he too
This paragon to the fearful usage
(So ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
A man not worth her pains ; much less
The nature of her person ?

Good my lord,
I come from Libya.

Where the warlike Simalus,
The honour'd lord, is fear'd and lov'd ?
Most royal sir, from thence ; from him, whose Daughter
I proclaim'd his, parting with her : thence Against south-wind friendly) we have cross'd,

To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness : My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd ;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do climate here ! You have a holy father,
A graceful gentleman ; against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin :
For which the Heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless ; and your father 's bless'd
(As he from Heaven merits it) with you, Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you !

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself by me :
Desires you to attach his son ; who has (His dignity and duty both cast off)
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where 's Bohemia ? speak.
Lord. Here in your city ; I now came from him :
I speak amazedly ; and it becomes
My marvel, and my message. To your court Whiles he was hast'ning, (in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple,) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me ;
Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay 't so to his charge ;
He 's with the king your father.

Leon. Who ? Camillo ?
Lord. Camillo, sir ; I spake with him ; who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake : they kneel, they kiss the earth ;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak :
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father !—
The Heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married ?
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be

The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first :—
The odds for high and low 's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king ?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's speed,

Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty : and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up :
Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now : with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate ; at your request.

Leon. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together;
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone.

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you: but I could afflict you further.

Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: What fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;<sup>a</sup>

You 'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting: Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.

Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker-on.

Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel; or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I 'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you 'll think,
(Which I protest against,) I am assisted
By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 't is as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd
You do awake your faith: Then, all stand still:
On:<sup>b</sup> Those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed;
No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music; awake her: strike.—[Music.
'T is time; descend; be stone no more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I 'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you.—You perceive she stirs;

[HER. comes down from the pedestal.
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as,
You hear, my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again; for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your hand:
When she was young you woo'd her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor!

<sup>a</sup> It is clear from the context, although by statue a picture was sometimes meant, that the image of Paulina was a painted statue.

<sup>b</sup> On. We understand this as, let us go on. The king immediately adds "proceed."

Leon. O, she 's warm! [Embracing her
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck;
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Pol. Ay, and make 't manifest where she has liv'd,
Or, how stol'n from the dead!

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.—
Please you to interpose, fair madam; kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good lady;
Our Perdita is found.

[Presenting PER., who kneels to him

Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head!—Tell me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd? how found?
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear, that I,— Knowing by Paulina, that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being,—have preserv'd
Myself to see the issue.

Paul. There 's time enough for that Lest they desire, upon this push, to trouble
Your joys with like relation.—Go together,
You precious winners all; your exultation
Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My mate, that 's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O peace, Paulina;
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine, a wife: this is a match,
And made between 's by vows. Thou hast feur
mine;

But how, is to be question'd: for I saw her
As I thought, dead; and have, in vain, said many
A prayer upon her grave: I 'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband:—Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whose worth, and honesty,
Is richly noted; and here justified
By us, a pair of kings.—Let 's from this place.—
What?—Look upon my brother:—both your passions
That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion. This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, (whom Heavens directing)
Is troth-plight to your daughter.—Good Paulina, Lead us from hence; where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of time, since first
We were dissever'd: Hastily lead away. [Exeunt

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS comedy stands the first in the folio collection of 1623, in which edition it was originally printed. The original text is printed with singular correctness; and if, with the exception of one or two obvious typographical errors, it had continued to be reprinted without any change, the world would have possessed a copy with the mint-mark of the poet upon it, instead of the clipped and scoured impression that bears the name of Steevens.

So much has been written on 'The Tempest,' and so unnecessary is it for us to analyse the plot or dwell on the charms of the poetry, that we shall here content ourselves with presenting our readers with some of the peculiar and original views of Franz Horn, translated from his 'Shakspere's Schauspiele erläutert.' This very acute and lively critic sets out by observing that nothing was more common in the early romantic literature than the imagination of adventures in a desert island, in a far distant ocean. This consideration alone, we think, is sufficient to make us little solicitous to localize the scene of Prospero's island, or to seek for any particular incidents that may have suggested to Shakspere a story with a storm and a shipwreck. Horn then proceeds thus:—

"The beginning takes our fancy wholly a prisoner. We see a ship nearing the island, driving along in the greatest danger amid storm and tempest, and struggling as with a last effort against the fatal summons. Here, placed in immediate contact, are sovereigns and their heirs with rude boatswains, sailors, and jesters, the reverend old man with the blooming youth, affright with wit, desperation with prayer. Nevertheless, the effect of this scene is not entirely tragic: we are too much occupied with the passing events,—we see how they develop the unannounced characters,—and the lightnings of wit flash so strongly between the lightnings of heaven as to give us no time to bestow on any particular individual a directly tragical melancholy feeling; for no sooner have we had this glance than two noble beings immediately vouchsafe to speak to us, and quiet us as to the fate of the shipwrecked personages who have interested us so much.

"These are the lord of the island and his daughter. In Prospero we have a delineation of peculiar profundity. He was, once, not altogether a just prince, not thoroughly a just man; but he had the disposition to be both. His soul thirsted after knowledge; his mind, sincere in itself, after love; and his fancy, after the secrets of nature: but he forgot, what a prince should least of all forget, that, upon this moving earth, superior acquirements, in order to stand firmly, must be exercised carefully; that the world is full of enemies who can only be subdued by a watchful power and prudence, and that in certain situations the armour ought never to be put off. Thus it became easy for his nearest relation, his brother, with the help of a powerful neighbouring king who could not resist the offered but unjustifiable advantage, to depose him from his dukedom. But as the pure morals of the prince, although they were perhaps but lazily exercised in behalf of his subjects, had nevertheless acquired their love, and the usurper not daring to make an attack on the lives of the fallen, Prospero saved himself, his daughter, and a part of his magical books, upon a desert island. Here he becomes, what, in its highest sense, he had not as a father and prince. His knowledge extends, he listens to him, perhaps because he learned to know love her more inwardly. Zephyr-like spirits, tender frolicsome humour, and rude earth-born are compelled to serve him. The whole island wonders, but only such as the fancy willingly of sounds and songs, of merry helpers and commentators; and Prospero shows his great humanity particularly in the manner with which he, as a ritual centre, knows how to conduct his intercourse with friends and foes. First, with his daughter. This is his highest, his one, his all; nevertheless, there is visible a certain elevation, a solemnity, in his behaviour towards her,—peculiarities which, even with the love, the severely tried and aged man easily overlooks. Indeed, much as the pure sense of his daughter's love have long cheered him, he deems it good to show her now for the first time the history of his sufferings, when he has mastery over, and the power to punish, his adversaries.

"Towards Ariel, the airy spirit thirsting for freedom, Prospero is strict and friendly, praising and blaming at the proper time; for a moment angry, but on the next he thinks he perceives ingratitude. Towards Caliban he is a most complete Oriental despot; and, although that he has to do with a miscreated being, whose 'stripes may move, not kindness,' he treats him not unkindly.

"Caliban, who, in spite of his imperfect, and half-human nature, as the son of a witch, is a thing marvellously exciting, and as pretending to the sovereignty of the island something ridiculous and sublime, has been considered by every one as an individual of the most powerful poetic fancy; the more the character is investigated, the more is the attention rewarded. With all his brutish propensities our feelings towards him never rise to a thorough hatred. We find him only laughably horrible, and as a villainous though at bottom a feeble monster highly interesting, for we foresee from the first that none of his threats will be fulfilled.

"Opposed to him stands Ariel, by no means an ethereal, featureless angel, but as a real airy and some spirit, agreeable and open, but also capricious and roguish, and, with his other qualities, somewhat chievious. He is thankful to Prospero for his freedom from the most confined of all confined situations; his gratitude is not a natural virtue (we might add not an airy virtue); therefore he must (like Caliban) be sometimes reminded of his debt, and held in check. Only the promise of his freedom in two days restores him again to his amiability, and he then finds himself busy in executing the plans of his master with a devoted activity.

"The pure poetry of nature and genius inspire us, and when we hear Prospero recite his far too long epilogue, after laying down his enchanted wand, we have no wish to turn our minds to any other thoughts, for the magic we have experienced is so charming and too mighty not to be enduring."

The conclusion of Horn's critique will find its way into every reader or spectator of 'The Tempest.'

SCENE.—THE SEA, WITH A SHIP; AFTERWARDS AN ISLAND.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea. A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Boatswain,—

Here, master: What cheer?

Good: Speak to the mariners: fall to 't or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.
[Exit.]

Enter Mariners.

Heigh, my hearts; cheerly, cheerly, my hearts: Take in the topsail: Tend to the whistle.—Blow till thou burst thy wind, if with strength!

ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, FERDINAND,
GONZALO, and others.

Good boatswain, have care. Where 's the cable?

Play the men.

I pray now, keep below.

Where is the master, boson?<sup>b</sup>

Do you not hear him? You may our labour:

our cabins: You do assist the storm.

Nay, good, be patient.

When the sea is. Hence! What care these for the name of king? To cabin: silence;

and so.

Boatswain, the adverb of pure, quick, ready. Yare is used by Shakspere as a sea-term (which it was), but is not in the dictionary.

In the first edition (1623) Antonio here uses the sailor's term, instead of the more correct "boatswain," which is the name of the King of Naples.

Gon. Good; yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts.—Out of our way, I say. [Exit.]

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: he thinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged our case is miserable. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the topmast; yare; lower, lower;
bring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.]
A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.<sup>a</sup>—

Re-enter SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, and GONZALO.

Yet again? what do you here? Shall we give o'er and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat! you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

<sup>a</sup> Our office is here used in the sense of our business, which was essentially noisy.

Gon. I'll warrant him for<sup>a</sup> drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nut-shell, and as leaky as an unstanch'd wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold: set her two courses; off to sea again; lay her off.

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

[Exeunt.]

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers! let us assist them,
For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience.

Ant. We are merely<sup>b</sup> cheated of our lives by drunkards.—

This wide-chopp'd rascal;—'Would thou mightst lie drowning,

The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hang'd yet;
Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut<sup>c</sup> him.

[A confused noise within.]—Mercy on us!

We split, we split!—Farewell, my wife and children!
Farewell, brother! We split, we split, we split!—<sup>d</sup>

Ant. Let's all sink with the king.

[Exit.]

Seb. Let's take leave of him.

[Exit.]

Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze,<sup>e</sup> anything: The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Island: before the Cell of Prospero.

Enter PROSPERO and MIRANDA.

Mira. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them:
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd
With those that I saw suffer! a brave vessel,
Who had no doubt some noble creature<sup>f</sup> in her,
Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart! Poor souls! they perish'd.
Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er<sup>g</sup>
It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and
The traughting<sup>h</sup> souls within her.

Pro. Be collected;
No more amazement: tell your piteous heart,
There's no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day!

Pro. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee,
(Of thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter!) who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

<sup>a</sup> For drowning is on account of drowning.

<sup>d</sup> These various exclamations, which are given to Gonzalo, should be considered to be spoken by no determinate characters. They form part of the "confused noise within."

<sup>e</sup> In Harrison's "Description of Britain," prefixed to Hollushed, we find, "Brome, heath, firze, brakes, whinnes, ling."—all characteristics of "barren ground." But "long heath" and "brown furze" are quite intelligible, and are much more natural than an enumeration of many various wild plants.

<sup>f</sup> Creature. Miranda means to say that, in addition to those she saw suffer,—the "poor souls" that perished,—the common sailors,—there was no doubt some superior person on board,—some noble creature.

<sup>g</sup> Or e'er—before, sooner than.

<sup>h</sup> Fraughting—constituting the freight, or freight.

Mira. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. 'T is time
I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me.—So;

[Lays down his mantle.]

Lie there my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort.

The direful spectacle of the wrack, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,

I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order'd, that there is no soul—

No, not so much perdition as an hair,
Betid to any creature in the vessel

Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know farther.

Mira. You have often Begun to tell me what I am; but stopp'd
And left me to a bootless inquisition;
Concluding, "Stay, not yet!"—

Pro. The hour's now come;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear;
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember

A time before we came unto this cell?

I do not think thou canst; for then thou wast not

Out three years old.<sup>a</sup>

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pro. By what? by any other house, or person?

Of anything the image tell me that

Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'T is far off;

And rather like a dream than an assurance

That my remembrance warrants: Had I not

Four or five women once that tended me?

Pro. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda: But how is it

That this lives in thy mind? What see'st thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?

If thou remember'st aught ere thou cam'st here,

How thou cam'st here thou mayst.

Mira. But that I do not.

Pro. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since Thy father was the duke of Milan, and
A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father?

Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
Was duke of Milan; and his only heir

And princess no worse issued.

Mira. O, the heavens!

What foul play had we, that we came from thence!

Or blessed was't we did?

Pro. Both, both, my girl;

By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heav'd thence;
But blessedly help hither.

Mira. O, my heart bleeds

To think o' the teen<sup>b</sup> that I have turn'd you to,

Which is from my remembrance! Please you, further

Pro. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd Antonio—

I pray thee mark me that a brother should

Be so perfidious;—be whom, next thyself,

Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put

The manage of my state, as, at that time,

Through all the signories it was the first,

And Prospero the prime duke, being so reputed

In dignity; and for the liberal arts

Without a parallel: those being all my study,

The government I cast upon my brother,

And to my state grew stranger, being transported,

And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—

Dost thou attend me?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.

<sup>a</sup> Quite three years old.

<sup>b</sup> Teen—sorrow.

Being once perfected how to grant suits, to deny them; whom to advance, and whom to keep in check; new created reasons that were mine, I say, or chang'd them, their form'd them; having both the key of office, set all hearts i' th' state at ease pleas'd his ear; that now he was a man which had hid my princely trunk, and my verdure out on 't.—Thou attend'st not.
 O good sir, I do.

I pray thee, mark me.
 neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated to close attention, and the bettering of my mind that, which, but by being so retir'd, had all popular rate, in my false brother (an evil nature: and my trust, my good parent, did beget of him was, in its contrary as great trust was; which had, indeed, no limit, hence sans bound. He being thus lorded, with what my revenue yielded, that my power might else exact,—like one coming unto truth, by telling of it,
 such a sinner of his memory, that his own lie,—he did believe indeed the duke; out of the substitution, seeming the outward face of royalty,
 a prerogative:—Hence his ambition growing,— O hear!

Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
 To have no screen between this part he play'd,
 to be play'd it for, he needs will be Milan: Me, poor man! my library was almost large enough; of temporal royalties
 I was now incapable: confederates
 I was far away) with the king of Naples, his annual tribute, do him homage;
 his coronet to his crown, and bend my dukedom, yet unbow'd, (alas, poor Milan!)
 to such a stooping.

O the heavens!
 Mark his condition, and the event; then tell
 me,
 might be a brother.

I should sin
 but nobly of my grandmother:
 she have borne bad sons.

Now the condition of Naples, being an enemy to the duke, beakens my brother's suit;
 so that he, in lieu<sup>b</sup> of the premises
 I, and I know not how much tribute, presently extirpate me and mine
 dukedom; and confer fair Milan, with honours, on my brother: Whereon, my army levied, one midnight for purpose, did Antonio open of Milan; and, i' the dead of darkness, sent for the purpose hurried thence by crying self.

Alack, for pity!
 something how I criel out then,
 it o'er again: it is a hint,
 to give mine eyes to 't.

Hear a little further,
 I'll bring thee to the present business as 't upon us; without the which, this story is impertinent.

It is a term still in use among hunters, to denote a snare, a trap, or any other weight, fastened round of a dog, when his speed is superior to the rest of the pack, when he overtakes them, when he hunts too quick, without consideration of, in exchange for,
 the circumstances of homage, &c.—the circumstances of homage

Mira. Wherefore did they not
 That hour destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench;
 My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not (So dear the love my people bore me); nor set A mark so bloody on the business; but
 With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
 In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
 Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepar'd
 A rotten carcass of a butt,<sup>a</sup> not rigg'd,
 Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
 Instinctively have quit it: there they hoist us,
 To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh
 To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
 Did us but loving wrong.

Mira. Alack! what trouble
 Was I then to you!

Pro. O! a cherubim
 Thou wast that did preserve me! Thou didst smile,
 Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
 When I have deck'd<sup>b</sup> the sea with drops full salt;
 Under my burthen groan'd; which rais'd in me
 An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?

Pro. By Providence divine,
 Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
 A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
 Out of his charity (who being then appointed Master of this design) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries,
 Which since have steaded much; so, of his gentleness,
 Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
 From mine own library, with volumes that
 I prize above my dukedom.

Mira. 'Would I might
 But ever see that man!

Pro. Now I arise:—
 Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
 Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
 Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
 Than other princess can, that have more time
 For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for 't! And now, I pray you, sir,

(For still 't is beating in my mind,) your reason
 For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.
 By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune,
 Now my dear lady,<sup>c</sup> hath mine enemies
 Brought to this shore: and by my prescience
 I find my zenith doth depend upon
 A most auspicious star; whose influence
 If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
 Will ever after droop.—Here cease more questions;
 Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 't is a good dulness,
 And give it way;—I know thou canst not choose.

[MIRANDA sleeps
 Come away, servant, come: I am ready now;
 Approach, my Ariel; come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail! I come

To answer thy best pleasure; be 't to fly,
 To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride

<sup>a</sup> Butt is the reading of the original copies. Whether the idea of a wine-butt was literally meant to be conveyed may be questionable; but the word, as it stands in the original, gives us the notion of a vessel even more insecure than the most rotten boat.

<sup>b</sup> Deck'd. In the glossary of the Craven dialect we find that to deck is to sprinkle.

<sup>c</sup> Now my dear lady. The antecedent is Fortune, now Prospero's bountiful lady.

On the curl'd clouds ; to thy strong bidding task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee ?
Ari. To every article.

I boarded the king's ship : now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement : Sometime I 'd divide
And burn in many places ; on the topmast,
The yards, and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and join : Jove's lightnings, the precursors
O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-outrunning were not : The fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yea, his dread trident shake.

Pro. My brave spirit !
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason ?

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation : All but mariners Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a-fire with me : the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring, (then like reeds, not hair,)
Was the first man that leap'd ; cried, " Hell is empty,
And all the devils are here."

Pro. Why, that 's my spirit !
But was not this nigh shore ?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe ?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd ;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before : and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle :
The king's son have I landed by himself ;
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the king's ship,
The mariners, say, how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship ; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she 's hid :
The mariners all under hatches stow'd ;
Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep : and for the rest o' the fleet,
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again ;
And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples ;
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wrack'd,
And his great person perish.

Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd ; but there 's more work :
What is the time o' the day ?

Ari. Past the mid season.

Pro. At least two glasses : The time 'twixt six and
now

Must by us both be spent most precious.

Ari. Is there more toil ? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now ? moody ?

What is 't thou canst demand ?

Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out ? no more.<sup>a</sup>

Ari. I prithee
Remember, I have done thee worthy service ;
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumbings : thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.

<sup>a</sup> No more. We understand this,—say no more.

Pro. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee ?

Ari. No.

Pro. Thou dost ; and think'st it much to tread ooze
Of the salt deep ;

To run upon the sharp wind of the north ;
To do me business in the veins o' the earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir.

Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing ! Hast thou
The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and envy,
Was grown into a hoop ? hast thou forgot her ?

Ari. No, sir.

Pro. Thou hast : Where was she born ? speak ; tell

Ari. Sir, in Argier.

Pro. O, was she so ? I must,
Once in a month, recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forgett'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st, was banish'd ; for one thing she did
They would not take her life : Is not this true ?

Ari. Ay, sir.

Pro. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought child,

And here was left by the sailors : Thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant :
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine ; within which rift
Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years, within which space she died,
And left thee there ; where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as mill-wheels strike : Then was this island (Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with
A human shape.

Ari. Yes ; Caliban her son.

Pro. Dull thing, I say so ; he, that Caliban, Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in : thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears : it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo ; it was mine art,
When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gaps
The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.

Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will read an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master.

I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so ; and after two days

I will discharge thee.

Ari. That 's my noble master !

What shall I do ? say what : what shall I do ?

Pro. Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea ;
Be subject to no sight but thine and mine ; invisible
To every eyeball else. Go, take this shape,
And hither come in 't : go, hence, with diligence
[Exit Ariel]

Awake, dear heart, awake ! thou hast slept well ;

Awake !

Mira. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Pro. Shake it off : Come on ;

We 'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

'T is a villain, sir,
love to look on.
But, as 't is,
not miss him: he does make our fire,
our wood, and serves in offices fit us. What ho! slave! Caliban!
th, thou! speak.
Within.] There 's wood enough within.
Come forth, I say; there 's other business for thee:
ou tortoise! when!*

Re-enter ARIEL, like a water-nymph.

rition! My quaint Ariel, thine ear.
My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.
Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself
wicked dam, come forth!

Enter CALIBAN.

is wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd en's feather from unwholesome fen, you both! a south-west blow on ye,
er you all o'er.
er this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps, hes that shall pen thy breath up; urchins that vast of night that they may work, ise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
s that made them.

I must eat my dinner.
ad 's mine, by Sycorax my mother, ou tak'at from me. When thou camest first, sk'dat me, and mad'at much of me; wouldst give me
th berries in 't; and teach me how the bigger light, and how the less,
s by day and night: and then I lov'd thee,
d' thee all the qualities o' the isle, springs, brine-pits, barren place, and fertile;
s I that did so!—All the charms ax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you!
all the subjects that you have,
st was mine own king; and here you sty me nd rock, whiles you do keep from me of the island.

Thou most lying slave,
ripes may move, not kindness: I have us'd thee,
hou art, with human care; and lodg'd thee own cell, till thou didst seek to violate ur of my child.
ho, O ho!—would it had been done!
at prevent me; I had peopled else with Calibans.

Abhorred slave;
ny print of goodness will not take,
pable of all ill! I pitied thee, as to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
g or other: when thou didst not, savage, me own meaning, but wouldst gabble like most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes eds that made them known: But thy vile race, thou didst learn, had that in 't which good natures
not able to be with; therefore wast thou lly confin'd into this rock, didst dream'd more than a prison.
You taught me language; and my profit on 't now how to curse: the red plague rid you, arning me your language!

Ha, ha! hence!
s me in fuel; and be quick, thou wert best,
own other business. Slugg'at thou, malice!

* When—at expression of great impatience.

If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I 'll rack thee with old cramps;
Fill all thy bones with aches; make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee!—
I must obey: his art is of such power, [Aside.
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave; hence! [Exit CAL.
Re-enter ARIEL invisible, playing and singing; FER- DINAND following him.

ARIEL'S Song.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Courtsied when you have, and kiss'd,
The wild waves whistle,
Foot it feathly here and there:
And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.

Bur. Hark, hark! Bowgh, wowgh.
The watch-dogs bark:
Bowgh, wowgh. [disperedly.

Ari. Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer
Cry, cock-a-doodle-doo.

Fer. Where should this music be? i' the air, or the earth?

It sounds no more:—and sure it waits upon
Some god of the island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the king my father's wrack,
This music crept by me upon the waters;
Allaying both their fury, and my passion,
With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather:—But 't is gone.
No, it begins again.

ARIEL sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell.

[Burthen, ding-dong.
Hark! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd father:—
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes:—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,
And say, what thou seest yond'.

Mira. What is 't? a spirit?
Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form:—But 't is a spirit.

Pro. No, wench; it eats, and sleeps, and hath such senses

As we have, such: This gallant, which thou seest,
Was in the wrack; and but he 's something stain'd
With grief, that 's beauty's canker, thou mightst call
him

A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find them.

Mira. I might call him
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pro. It goes on, I see, [Aside.
As my soul prompts it:—Spirit, fine spirit! I 'll free
thee

Within two days for this.

Fer. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island;
And that you will some good instruction give,
How I may bear me here: My prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
If you be maid or no?

Mira. No wonder, sir;
But certainly a maid.

Fer. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 't is spoken.

Pro. How! the best?
What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples: He does hear me;
And that he does I weep: myself am Naples;
Who with mine eyes, never since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wrack'd.

Mira. Alack, for mercy!
Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the duke of Milan,
And his brave son, being twain.

Pro. The duke of Milan,
And his more braver daughter, could control thee,
If now 't were fit to do 't:—At the first sight [Aside.
They have chang'd eyes:—Delicate Ariel,
I 'll set thee free for this!—A word, good sir;
I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.

Mira. Why speaks my father so ungently? This Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sigh'd for: pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I 'll make you
The queen of Naples.

Pro. Soft, sir! one word more.—
They are both in either's powers; but this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning [Aside.
Make the prize light.—One word more; I charge thee,
That thou attend me: thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on 't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mira. There 's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple:
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

Pro. Follow me.—[To FERD.
Speak not you for him; he 's a traitor.—Come.
I 'll manacle thy neck and feet together:
Sea-water shalt thou drink, thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled: Follow.

Fer. No;
I will resist such entertainment, till
Mine enemy has more power.
[He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Mira. O dear father,
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He 's gentle,<sup>a</sup> and not fearful.

Pro. What, I say,
My foot my tutor! Put thy sword up, traitor;
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, try science
Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward;
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mira. Beseech you, father!
Pro. Hence; hang not on my garments.

Mira. Sir, have pit
I 'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What!
An advocate for an impostor! hush!
Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban: Foolish wench!
To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Mira. My affections
Are then most humble; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pro. Come on; obey: [To FERD.
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, or this man's threats,
To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pro. It works:—Come on.—
Thou hast done well, fine Ariel!—Follow me.—
[To FERD. and MIR.
Hark, what thou else shalt do me. [To ARIEL.
Mira. Be of comfort]
My father 's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech; this is unwonted,
Which now came from him.

Pro. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds: but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To the syllable.
Pro. Come, follow: speak not for him. [Exit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO,
ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

Gon. Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have cause
(So have we all) of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss: Our hint of woe
Is common; every day, some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant,<sup>a</sup> and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe: but for the miracle,
I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Prithce, peace.

<sup>a</sup> Merchant is here used for merchant-vessel—merchantman
The "masters of some merchant" signifies, therefore, the owners of some trading vessel; but in the second instance the "merchant" must mean the trader, whose goods are ventured in the merchantman.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.
Seb. Look, he 's winding up the watch of his wit
By and by it will strike.
Gon. Sir,—
Seb. One:—Tell.
Gon. When every grief is entertain'd that 's offer'd Comes to the entertainer—
Seb. A dollar.
Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed; you have speak
truer than you purpos'd.
Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant should.
Gon. Therefore, my lord,—
Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!
Alon. I prithee spare.
Gon. Well, I have done: But yet—fore courageous.

 Alon. You cram these words into mine ears, against

 The surge most swoln that met him; his bold head
 'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
 Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
 To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd,
 As stooping to relieve him; I not doubt,
 He came alive to land.
 Alon. No, no, he 's gone.
 Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
 That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
 But rather lose her to an African;
 Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye,
 Who hath cause to wet the grief on 't.
 Alon. Prithee, peace.
 Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwise,
 By all of us; and the fair soul herself
 Weigh'd, between lothness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she 'd bow. We have lost your son,
 I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have
 More widows in them of this business' making,
 Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault 's
 Your own.
 Alon. So is the dearest of the loss.
 Gon. My lord Sebastian,
 The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
 And time to speak it in; you rub the sore,
 When you should bring the plaster.
 Seb. Very well.
 Ant. And most chirurgeonly.
 Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
 When you are cloudy.
 Seb. Foul weather?
 Ant. Very foul.
 Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—
 Ant. He 'd sow 't with nettle-seed.
 Seb. Or docks, or mallows.
 Gon. And were the king of it, What would I do?
 Seb. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.
 Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries
 Execute all things; for no kind of traffic
 Would I admit; no name of magistrate;
 Letters should not be known: riches, poverty,
 And use of service, none; contract, succession,
 Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none
 No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil:
 No occupation; all men idle, all;
 And women too; but innocent and pure:
 No sovereignty:—
 Seb. Yet he would be king on 't.
 Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common nature should produce Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have; but nature should bring forth,
Of its own kind, all foison,* all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subjects?

Ant. None, man; all idle; whores and knaves.

Gon. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
To excel the golden age.

Seb. 'Save his majesty!

Ant. Long live Gonzalo!

Gon. And, do you mark me, sir?—

Alon. Prithee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to
me.

Gon. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'T was you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given!

Seb. An it had not fallen flat-long.

Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter ARIEL invisible, playing solemn music.

Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep but ALON., SEB., and ANT.]

Alon. What, all so soon asleep! I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts: I find
They are inclin'd to do so.

Seb. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it:
It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth,
It is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest,
And watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you: wondrous heavy.

[ALON. sleeps. Exit ARIEL.]

Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!

Ant. It is the quality o' the climate.

Seb. Why
Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.

Ant. Nor I; my spirits are nimble.
They fell together all, as by consent;
They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,
Worthy Sebastian?—O, what might?—No more:—
And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face,
What thou shouldst be: the occasion speaks thee; and
My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What, art thou waking?

Ant. Do you not hear me speak?

Seb. I do; and, surely,
It is a sleepy language; and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep: What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving,
And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou lett'st thy fortune sleep, die rather; wink'st
While thou art waking.

* Foison—plenty.

Seb. Thou dost snore distinctly
There 's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do
Trebles thee o'er.

Seb. Well, I am standing water.

Ant. I 'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so: to eld
Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O,

If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it! how, in stripping it,
You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed,
Most often do so near the bottom run,
By their own fear, or sloth.

Seb. Prithee say on:
The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir:
Although this lord of weak remembrance, this (Who shall be of as little memory,
When he is earth'd) hath here almost persuaded (For he 's a spirit of persuasion, only Professes to persuade) the king his son 's alive,—
'T is as impossible that he 's undrown'd,
As he that sleeps here, swims.

Seb. I have no hope
That he 's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high a hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubts discovery there. Will you grant with That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Seb. He 's gone.

Ant. Then, tell
Who 's the next heir of Naples?

Seb. Claribel.

Ant. She that is queen of Tunis: she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that from Naples
Can have no note, unless the sun were post,
(The man i' the moon 's too slow,) till new-born clouds
Be rough and razorable; she, from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again,
And by that destiny to perform an act,
Whereof what 's past is prologue; what to come,
In yours and my discharge.

Seb. What stuff is this?—How say'st
'T is true, my brother's daughter 's queen of Tunis:
So is she heir of Naples; 'twixt which regions
There is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit
Seems to cry out, "How shall that Claribel Measure us back to Naples?"—Keep in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake!—Say, this were death
That now hath seiz'd them; why, they were no more Than now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleeps; lords that can gratify
As amply and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo; I myself could make
A chough of as deep chat. O, that you bore
The mind that I do! what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand me?

Seb. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your constant Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember,
You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True:
And look how well my garments sit upon me;
Much feater than before: My brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Seb. But, for your conscience—

Y, sir; where lies that? if 't were a kybe, put me to my slipper: But I feel not in my bosom; twenty consciences, d' twist me and Milan, candied be they,
 ere they molest! Here lies your brother, than the earth he lies upon,
 that which now he 's like, that 's dead;
 with this obedient steel, three inches of it,
 a bed for ever: whiles you, doing thus, perpetual wink for aye might put out mousel, this sir Prudence, who t upbraid our course. For all the rest, ake suggestion, as a cat laps milk;
 ell the clock to any business that eds the hour.

Thy case, dear friend,
 ny precedent; as thou gott'st Milan,
 by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke thee from the tribute which thou pay'st;
 king shall love thee.

Draw together:
 I rear my hand, do you the like,
 on Gonzalo.

O, but one word. [They converse apart.]

Music. Re-enter ARIEL, invisible.

My master through his art foresees the danger his friend, are in; and sends me forth, his project dies,) to keep them living.

[Sings in GONZALO'S ear.]

While you here do snoring lie,
 Open-eyed Conspiracy
 His time doth take:
 If of life you keep a care,
 Shake off slumber, and beware:
 Awake! awake!

Then let us both be sudden.

Now, good angels, preserve the king!

[They awake.]

Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you drawn?
 e this ghastly looking?

What 's the matter?

Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
 t, we heard a hollow hurst of bellowing
 s, or rather lions; did it not wake you?
 mine ear most terribly.

I heard nothing.

It was a din to fright a monster's ear;
 an earthquake! sure it was the roar le herd of lions.

Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Open mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,
 a strange one too, which did awake me:
 you, sir, and cried; as mine eyes open'd,
 e weapons drawn:—there was a noise,
 nity: 'T is best we stand upon our guard;
 e quit this place: let 's draw our weapons.
 Lead off this ground; and let 's make further search on an.

Heavens keep him from these beasts!
 sure, 't the island.

Lead away.

Prospero my lord shall know what I have done:

go safely on to seek thy son. [Aside.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island.

Enter CALIBAN, with a burthen of wood.
 A noise of thunder heard.

All the infections that the sun sucks up in fens, fens, on Prosper fall, and make him ead a disease! His spirits hear me

And yet I needs must curse. But they 'll nor pinch,
 Fright me with urchin shows, pitch me i' the mire,
 Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
 Out of my way, unless he bid them; but
 For every trifle are they set upon me:
 Sometime like apes, that moe and chatter at me,
 And after, bite me; then like hedgehogs, which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
 Their pricks at my footfall; sometime am I
 All wound'd with adders, who, with cloven tongues,
 Do hiss me into madness:—Lo! now! lo!

Enter TRINCULO.

Here comes a spirit of his; and to torment me,
 For bringing wood in slowly: I 'll fall flat;
 Perchance, he will not mind me.

Trin. Here 's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' the wind: yond' same black cloud, yond' huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond' same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls.—What have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, (as once I was,) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legged like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again:
 my best way is to creep under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter hereabout: Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter STEPHANO, singing; a bottle in his hand.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea,
 Here shall I die ashore;—

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral:
 Well, here 's my comfort. [Drinks.]

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,
 The gunner, and his mate,
 Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
 But none of us car'd for Kate:
 For she had a tongue with a tang,
 Would ery to a sailor, "Go hang!"
 She lov'd not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
 Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch:
 Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too: But here 's my comfort.

[Drinks.]

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Ste. What 's the matter? Have we devils here?
 Do you put tricks upon us with salvages, and men of Inde? Ha! I have not 'scaped drowning, to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said, As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs;
 who hath got, as I take it, an ague: Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that: If I can recover him and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he 's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, prithee; I 'll bring my wood home faster.

Wood—twisted round.

Ste. He 's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that lath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways; open your mouth: here is that which will give language to you, cat; open your mouth: this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly; you cannot tell who 's your friend: open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: It should be—But he is drowned; and these are devils: O! defend me!—

Ste. Four legs, and two voices; a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague: Come—Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano,—

Ste. Dost thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me; for I am Trinculo;—be not afraid,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth; I 'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed: How camest thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke:—But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine, for fear of the storm: And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scaped!

Ste. Prithee, do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, an if they be not sprites. That 's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? How camest thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou camest hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved overboard, by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore.

Cal. I 'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy true subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear then how thou escapedst.

Trin. Swam ashore, man, like a duck; I can swim like a duck, I 'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book: Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole butt, man; my cellar is in the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How no calf? how does thine ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I'man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore My mistress show'd me thee, and thy dog and

Ste. Come, swear to that, kiss the book: I wish it anon with new contents: swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shalster:—I 'sfeard of him! a very weak monster man i' the moon!—a most poor credulous Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I 'll show thee every fertile inch o' the And I will kiss thy foot: I prithee, be my god

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at th' headed monster: a most scurvy monster! I e in my heart to beat him,—

Cal. I 'll show thee the best springs; I 'll p berries;

I 'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!

I 'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster! to make of a poor drunkard.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful; and their labour

Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness

Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters

Point to rich ends. This my mean task

Would be as heavy to me as odious; but

The mistress which I serve quickens what

And makes my labours pleasures: O, she is

Ten times more gentle than her father 's crab

And he 's compos'd of harshness. I must ren

Some thousands of these logs, and pile them

Upon a sore injunction: My sweet mistress

Weeps when she sees me work; and says

Had never like executor. I forget:

* Scamels. This is the word of the original; and as we find it. The word has been changed into scam

the commentators tell us is a species of gull. We b is no such word as sea-mell, or sea-mall, although U

saw. or sea-mete.

sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours;
less when I do it.

MIRANDA, and PROSPERO at a distance.

Alas, now I pray you,
so hard; I would the lightning had bowe logs that you are enjoin'd to pile!
down, and rest you: when this burns, up for having wearied you; My father study; pray now rest yourself;
for these three hours.

O most dear mistress,
I'll set before I shall discharge
at strive to do.

If you'll sit down
our logs the while: Pray give me that;
it to the pile.

No, precious creature:
er crack my sinews, break my back,
should such dishonour undergo,
lazy by.

It would become me
it does you: and I should do it more ease; for my good will is to it, it is against.

Poor worm! thou art infected;
tion shows it.

You look wearily.
noble mistress; 't is fresh morning with me,
are by at night. I do beseech you, at I might set it in my prayers,)
our name!

Miranda:—O my father,
be your best to say so!

Admir'd Miranda!
top of admiration; worth great to the world! Full many a lady
I with best regard; and many a time my of their tongues hath into bondage
y too diligent ear: for several virtues
I'd several women; never any
I soul, but some defect in her
I with the noblest grace she ow'd,
'ts the fail: But you, O you,
and so peerless, are created reature's best.

I do not know
sex; no woman's face remember, my glass, mine own; nor have I seen
I may call men, than you, good friend, our father: how features are abroad,
less of; but, by my modesty,
(in my dower,) I would not wish wisdom in the world but you;
imagination form a shape,
myself, to like of: But I prattle too wildly, and my father's precepts do forget.

I am, in my condition,
Miranda; I do think, a king;
let so!) and would no more endure in slavery, than to suffer
y blow my mouth.—Hear my soul speak:—
stant that I saw you, did ly to your service; there resides, me slave to it; and for your sake patient log-man.

Do you love me?
heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,
what I profess with kind event,
true; if hollowly, invert is loosed me, to mischief! I, limit of what else 't the world,
ing, honour you.

Mira. I am a fool,
To weep at what I am glad of.

Pro. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between them!

Fer. Wherefore weep you?

Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take
What I shall die to want: but this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself,
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.

Fer. My mistress, dearest,
And I thus humble ever.

Mira. My husband then?

Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here 's my hand.

Mira. And mine, with my heart in 't: And now farewell,

Till half an hour hence.

Fer. A thousand! thousand!

[Exeunt FER. and MIR.
Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surpris'd with all; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
For yet, ere supper-time, must I perform
Much business appertaining. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island.

Enter STEPHANO and TRINCULO; CALIBAN following with a bottle.

Ste. Tell not me;—when the butt is out we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em: Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster? the folly of this island!
They say there 's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee; thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me: I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on. By this light, thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he 's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs; and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe:
I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster; I am in case to justle a constable: why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I prithee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head; if you prove a mutineer, the next tree—The poor monster 's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd
To hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant;
A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me
Of the island.

Ari. Thou liest.

Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou;
I would my valiant master would destroy thee:
I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more.—[To CALIBAN.] Proceed.

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle;
From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him—for, I know, thou dar'st;
But this thing dare not.

Ste. That 's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I 'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my lord; I 'll yield him thee asleep,
Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest, thou canst not.

Cal. What a pied ninny 's this! Thou scurvy patch!—
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows,
And take his bottle from him: when that 's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine; for I 'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I 'll turn my mercy out of doors, and make a stockfish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing; I 'll go further off.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that. [Strikes him.] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie:—Out o' your wits, and hearing too?—A pox o' your bottle! this can sack and drinking do.—A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Cal. Ha, ha, ha!

Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Prithee stand
further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time,
I 'll beat him too.

Ste. Stand further.—Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 't is a custom with him
I' the afternoon to sleep: there thou mayst brain him,
Having first seiz'd his books; or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife: Remember,
First to possess his books; for without them
He 's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not
One spirit to command: They all do hate him,
As rootedly as I: Burn but his books;
He has brave utensils, (for so he calls them,)
Which, when he has a house, he 'll deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beauty of his daughter; he himself
Calls her a nonpareil: I ne'er saw woman
But only Sycorax my dam, and she;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax,
As greatest does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a lass?

Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant,
d bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter
I will be king and queen; (save our graces!) an-culo and thyself shall be viceroys:—Dost thou plot, Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand; I am sorry I be-but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy

Cal. Within this half-hour will he be asleep;
Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste.

Ay, on mine hono-

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pl-
Let us be jocund: Will you troll the catch
You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reas-
reason:

Come on, Trinculo, let us sing.

Flout 'em, and cout 'em; and skout 'em, and flout
Thought is free.

Cal. That 's not the tune.

[ARIEL plays the tune on a tabor and

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played picture of Nobody.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in th-ness: if thou beest a devil, take 't as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins!

Ste. He that dies pays all debts: I defy t-Mercy upon us!

Cal. Art thou afraid?

Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afraid; the isle is full of noises, Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight and Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments

Will hum about mine ears; and sometime voice
That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,

Will make me sleep again: and then, in dream
The clouds, methought, would open and show m-

Ready to drop upon me; that when I wak'd
I cried to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me,
shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember th-

Trin. The sound is going away: let 's follow after do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster; we 'll follow.—I would see this taborer: he lays it on.

Trin. Wilt come? I 'll follow Stephano. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Island

*Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO,
ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.*

Gon. By 'r lakin, I can go no further, sir;
My old bones ache: here 's a maze trod, indent
Through forth-rights and meanders! by your pa-
I needs must rest me.

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame
Who am myself attach'd with weariness,
To the dulling of my spirits: sit down and rest
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to find; and the sea mock
Our frustrate search on land: Well, let him go

Ant. I am right glad that he 's so out of hope
[Aside]

Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
That you resolv'd to effect.

Seb. The next advantage
Will we take thoroughly.

Ant. Let it be to-night;
For now they are oppress'd with travel, they cannot, use such vigilance, are flesh.

I say, to-night: no more.

*Strange music; and PROSPERO above, inter several strange Shapes, bringing in they are of monstrous shape, yet, note, they are more gentle, kind, than of Honest lord,

I well; for some of you there present are devils.

I cannot too much muse

Praise in departing. [Aside.]

They vanish'd strangely.

No matter, since

These three men of sin, whom destiny

end.

And what is in 't) the never-surfeited sea
Hath caus'd to belch up you, and on this island
Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;

[Seeing ALON., SEN., &c., draw their swords]

And even with such-like valour, men hang and drown

Their proper selves. You fools! I and my fellows

Are ministers of fate; the elements,

Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well

Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs

Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish

One dowl<sup>a</sup> that 's in my plume; my fellow-ministers

Are like invulnerable: if you could hurt,

Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,

And will not be uplifted: But, remember,

(For that 's my business to you,) that you three

From Milan did supplant good Prospero:

Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,

Him and his innocent child: for which foul deed

The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have

Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,

Against your peace: Thee, of thy son, Alonso,

They have bereft; and do pronounce, by me,

Ling'ring perdition (worse than any death

Can be at once) shall step by step attend

You, and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from (Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls

Upon your heads) is nothing, but heart's sorrow,

And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music, enter the

Shapes again, and dance with mops and moives, and carry out the table.

Pro. Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou

Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring:

Of my instruction hast thou nothing 'bated,

In what thou hadst to say: so, with good life,<sup>b</sup>

And observation strange, my meaner ministers

Their several kinds have done: my high charms work.

And these, mine enemies, are all knit up

In their distractions: they now are in my power;

And in these fits I leave them, while I visit

Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is drown'd,)

And his and my lov'd darling. [Exit Pros. from above.]

Gon. 'T' the name of something holy, sir, why stand you

In this strange stare?

Alon. O, it is monstrous! monstrous!

Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it;

The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder,

That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd

The name of Prosper; it did bass my trespass.

Therefore my son 't' the ooze is bedded; and

I 'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,

And with him there lie mudded. [Exit.]

Seb. But one fiend at a time,

I 'll fight their legions o'er.

Ant.

I 'll be thy second.

[Exeunt SEN. and ANR.]

Gon. All three of them are desperate; their great guilt,

Like poison given to work a great time after,

Now 'gins to bite the spirits: — I do beseech you,

That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,

And hinder them from what this ecstasy

May now provoke them to.

Adr. Follow, I pray you. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Dowlc—a feather, a particle of down.

<sup>b</sup> Good life—alacrity, energy, spirit.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter PROSPERO, FERDINAND, and MIRANDA.

Pro. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends; for I
Have given you here a thread of mine own life,
Or that for which I live; whom once again
I tender to thy hand: all thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it,
Against an oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: But If thou dost break her virgin knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion<sup>a</sup> shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow: but barren hate,
Sour-ey'd disdain, and discord, shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly,
That you shall hate it both: therefore take heed,
As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 't is now, the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion
Our worse genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust; to take away
The edge of that day's celebration,
When I shall think, or Phœbus' steeds are founder'd,
Or night kept chain'd below.

Pro. Fairly spoke:
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own.—
What, Ariel; my industrious servant, Ariel!

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am.

Pro. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
Did worthily perform; and I must use you
In such another trick: go, bring the rabble,
O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place:
Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art; it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say, Come, and Go,
And breathe twice; and cry, So, so;
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mowe:
Do you love me, master? no.

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel: Do not approach
Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well, I conceive. [Exit.]

Pro. Look thou be true: do not give dalliance
Too much the rein: the strongest oaths are straw
To the fire of the blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow!

Fer. I warrant you, sir.
The white cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver.

<sup>a</sup> Aspersion—sprinkling.

Pro.

Well.—

Now come, my Ariel: bring a corollary,<sup>a</sup>
Rather than want a spirit: appear, and perty.—
No tongue; all eyes; be silent. [Softly]

A Masque. Enter IRIS.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich less
Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease;
Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims,<sup>b</sup>
Which spongy April at thy best betrimms,
To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn; thy pole-clipp'd vineyard;
And thy sea-marge, sterile, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air: The queen o' the sky
Whose watery arch, and messenger, am I,
Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign grass
Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport: her peacocks fly amain:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

Cer. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth: Why hath thy queen
Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate;
And some donation freely to estate
On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus, or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen? Since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company
I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid; I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos; and her son Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have
Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are that no bed-rite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted: but in vain;
Mars's hot minion is return'd again;
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with spam
And be a boy right out.

Cer. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes: I know her by her gait.

Enter JUNO.

Jun. How does my bounteous sister! Go
me,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue.

<sup>a</sup> Corollary—a surplus number.

<sup>b</sup> Pioned and twilled. What banks does April betrim, best of Ceres? pioned banks,—that is, banks dug, then A pioneer, or pioner, is a digger. The brims of the bank especially pioned. Henley says, "Twilled is derived from the participle of the French verb twiller, which interprets 'illicitly to mix or mingle; confound or shew together; bedirt; beguine; besmo'."

SONG.

Honour, riches, marriage blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.
Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barne and garner never empty;
Vines, with clust'ring bunches growing;
Plants whose goodly burthen bowing;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

This is a most majestic vision, and thus charmingly: May I be hold these spirits?

Spirits, which by mine art and their confines call'd to enact my fancies.

Lest me live here ever;
wonder'd father, and a wife,
in place Paradise.

[Juno and CERES whisper, and send IRIS on employment.

Sweet now, silence;
Ceres whisper seriously;
something else to do: hush, and be mute,
or spell is marr'd.
The nymphs call'd Naiads, of the winking
brooks,
The sedg'd crowns, and ever harmless looks,
The crisp channels, and on this green land
our summons: Juno does command:
operate nymphs, and help to celebrate it of true love; be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

Among sicklemen, of August weary,
er from the furrow, and be merry,
day: your rye-straw hats put on,
fresh nymphs encounter every one floating.

tain Reapers, properly habited; they join Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the roof PROSPERO starts suddenly, and speaks; hich, to a strange, hollow, and confused
by heavily vanish.

aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy at Caliban, and his confederates, y life: the minute of their plot comes.—[To the Spirits.] Well done;—
void;—no more,
is it strange: your father's in some passion
him strongly.

Never till this day,
touch'd with anger so distemper'd,
in the look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
were dimm'd: be cheerful, sir:
now are ended: these our actors,
if you, were all spirits, and into air, into thin air:
the baseless fabric of this vision,
capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
temples, the great globe itself,
rich it inherit, shall dissolve;
his insubstantial pageant faded, rack'd behind: We are such stuff are made on, and our little life with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex'd;

g. The epithet, of course, has the meaning of like rack in the sense of the smallest feathery cloud of modern science.

is used in the sense of encompassed. The "insub-stantial" had been presented; its actors had "melted
" it was an aerially. In the same way, life dreams. It is surrounded with the sleep which is dreams.

Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled.
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity:
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose; a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Fer., Mira. We wish your peace. [Exeunt.

Pro. Come with a thought:—I thank thee:—Ariel,
come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to: What's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander; when I presented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear'd
Lest I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drink ing:

So full of valour that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet; yet always bending
Towards their project: Then I beat my tabor,
At which, like upback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,
Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music; so I charm'd their ears,
That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Tooth'd briars, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns,
Which enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them
I' the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake
O'erstunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird;
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, go, bring it hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.

Ari. I go, I go. [Exit

Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost:
And as, with age, his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers: I will plague them all,

Re-enter ARIEL, laden with glistening apparel, &c.
Even to roaring:—Come, hang them on this line.

PROSPERO and ARIEL remain invisible. Enter CALI-
BAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not

Hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you; look you,—

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still:

Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hoodwink this mischance: therefore speak softly,
All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Prithee, my king, be quiet: See'st thou here,
This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter.
Do that good mischief which may make this island

Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand : I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is for thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster; we know what belongs to a frippery :—O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by this hand, I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it.

Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean, To dote thus on such luggage? Let 's alone, And do the murther first : if he awake, From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches; Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line : now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do : We steal by line and level, an 't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest : here 's a garment for 't : wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country : Steal by line and level is an excellent pass of pate; there 's another garment for 't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on 't : we shall lose our heads, And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes With foreheads villainous low.

Ste. Monster, lay-to your fingers; help to get away where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turn out of my kingdom : go to, carry this.

Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Shapes of hounds, and hunt them about. Prospero and ARIEL setting them on.

Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! ha ha ha! Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews With aged cramps; and more pinch-spotted make Than pard or cat o' mountain.

Ari. Hark, they roar.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly : At this Lie at my mercy all mine enemies : Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the air of freedom : for a little, Follow, and do me service.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before the Cell of Prospero.

Enter PROSPERO in his magic robes; and ARIEL.

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head : My charms crack not; my spirits obey; and Time Goes upright with his carriage. How 's the day?

Ari. On the sixth hour; at which time, my lord, You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so, When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit, How fares the king and 's followers?

Ari. Confin'd together In the same fashion as you gave in charge; Just as you left them; all prisoners, sir, In the line-grove which weather-fends your cell; They cannot budge till your release. The king, His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted; And the remainder mourning over them, Brimfull of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly Him that you term'd, sir, "The good old lord, Gonzalo;" His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops From eaves of reeds : your charm so strongly works them,

That if you now beheld them your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pro. And mine shall. Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions? and shall not myself, One of their kind, that relish all as sharply, Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am strook to the quick,

Yet, with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury Do I take part : the rarer action is In virtue than in vengeance : they being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frown further : Go, release them, Ariel; My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir.

Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves;

And ye that on the sands with printless foot Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him, When he comes back; you demi-puppets that By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereof the ewe not bites; and you, whose pastime Is to make midnight-mushrooms; that rejoice To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid (Weak masters though ye be) I have bedimm'd the noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds, And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault Set roaring war : to the dread rattling thunder Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak With his own bolt : the strong-bas'd promontory Have I made shake; and by the spurs pluck'd The pine and cedar : graves, at my command, Have wak'd their sleepers; op'd, and let them By my so potent art : But this rough magic I here abjure : and, when I have requir'd Some heavenly music, (which even now I do,) To work mine end upon their senses that This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff, Bury it certain fathoms in the earth, And, deeper than did ever plummet sound, I'll drown my book. [Solemn music.]

Re-enter ARIEL : after him, ALONSO, with Sebastian, Gonzalo, ANTONIO in like manner, attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO : they all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand charmed. PROSPERO observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains, Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There's for you are spell-stopp'd. Holy Gonzalo, honourable man, Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine, Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves apace, the morning steals upon the night,

 the darkness, so their rising senses chase the ignorant fumes that mantle their reason.—O good Gonzalo, preserver, and a loyal sir thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces both in word and deed.—Most cruelly thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
 there was a furtherer in the act;—
 I pinch'd for 't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood, their mine, that entertain'd ambition,
 remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian, (inward pinches therefore are most strong,) here have kill'd your king; I do forgive thee, and though thou art!—Their understanding to swell; and the approaching tide shortly fill the reasonable shores, as be foul and muddy. Not one of them looks on me, or would know me:—Ariel, take the hat and rapier in my cell; [Exit ARIEL.] excuse me, and myself present, as sometime Milan:—quickly, spirit;
 halt ere long be free.

re-enters, singing, and helps to attire PROSPERO.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I;
 In a cowslip's bell I lie:
 There I couch when owls do cry,
 On the bat's back I do fly
 As the sunsets merrily:
 Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
 Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

Why, that 's my dainty Ariel: I shall miss
 thee;

thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so.—
 King's ship, invisible as thou art:
 halt thou find the mariners asleep
 at the hatches; the master, and the boatswain, awake, enforce them to this place;
 merrily, I prithee.

I drink the air before me, and return
 my pulse twice beat. [Exit ARIEL.]
 All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement hence: Some heavenly power guide us to our fearful country!

Behold, sir king,
 aged duke of Milan, Prospero:
 assurance that a living prince speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
 here, and thy company, I bid
 welcome.

Who'r thou beest he, or no,
 enchanted trifle to abuse me,
 I have been, I not know: thy pulse of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee, reason of my mind amends, with which,
 madness held me: this must crave
 as be at all) a most strange story.
 when I resign; and do entreat pardon me my wrongs:—But how should Prospero be here?

First, noble friend, embrace thine age; whose honour cannot be sold, or confin'd.

Whether this be,
 I'll not swear.

You do yet taste
 the illies o' the isle, that will not let you things certain:—Welcome, my friends all:— my brace of lords, were I so minded,
 I should have pluck'd his highness' frown upon you,
 as you traitors; at this time
 no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him. [Aside.]
Pro. No:—

For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
 Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
 Thy rankst fault; all of them; and require
 My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know
 Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou beest Prospero,
 Give us particulars of thy preservation:
 How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
 Were wrack'd upon this shore; where I have lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!)
 My dear son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for 't, sir.
Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and patience
 Says it is past her cure.

Pro. I rather think,
 You have not sought her help; of whose soft grace
 For the like loss, I have her sovereign aid,
 And rest myself content.

Alon. You the like loss?
Pro. As great to me, as late; and supportable
 To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker
 Than you may call to comfort you; for I
 Have lost my daughter.

Alon. A daughter?
 O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
 The king and queen there! that they were, I wish Myself were mudded in that oozy bed
 Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this last tempest. I perceive these lords
 At this encounter do so much admire,
 That they devour their reason; and scarce think
 Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
 Are natural breath: but, howsoe'er you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain
 That I am Prospero, and that very duke
 Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely
 Upon this shore, where you were wrack'd, was landed,
 To be the lord on 't. No more yet of this;
 For 't is a chronicle of day by day,
 Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
 This cell 's my court: here have I few attendants,
 And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in.
 My dukedom since you have given me again,
 I will requite you with as good a thing;
 At least, bring forth a wonder to content ye,
 As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the Cell opens, and discovers FERDINAND and MIRANDA playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love,
 I would not for the world.

Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
 And I would call it fair play.

Alon. If this prove
 A vision of the island, one dear son
 Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle!
Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful:
 I have curs'd them without cause. [Fer. kneels to ALON.]

Alon. Now all the blessings
 Of a glad father compass thee about!
 Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mira. O! wonder!
 How many goodly creatures are there here!
 How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world,
 That has such people in 't!

Pro. 'T is new to thee.
Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?

Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours :
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
And brought us thus together ?

Fer. Sir, she is mortal ;
But, by immortal providence, she 's mine ;
I chose her, when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one : she
Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before ; of whom I have Receiv'd a second life, and second father
This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers :
But O, how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness !

Pro. There, sir, stop ;
Let us not burthen our remembrances with
A heaviness that 's gone.

Gon. I have inly wept,
Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown ;
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither !

Alon. I say, amen, Gonzalo !
Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue Should become kings of Naples ? O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy ; and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars : In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis ;
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife
Where he himself was lost ; Prospero, his dukedom,
In a poor isle ; and all of us, ourselves,
When no man was his own.

Alon. Give me your hands :
[To FER. and MIR.]
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy !

Gon. Be 't so ! Amen !

Re-enter ARIEL, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir, look, sir ; here are more of us !
I prophesied if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown : now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore ?
Hast thou no mouth by land ? What is the news ?

Boats. The best news is that we have safely found
Our king, and company : the next our ship,—
Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split,—
Is tight, and yare, and bravely rigg'd, as when We first put out to sea

Ari. Sir, all this service }
Have I done since I went. } Aside.

Pro. My tricky spirit ! }
Alon. These are not natural events ; they strengthen,
From strange to stranger :—Say, how came you hither ?

Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I 'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
And (how, we know not) all clapp'd under hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, ginglyng chains,
And more diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd ; straightway, at liberty :
Where we, in all our trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship ; our master
Capering to eye her : on a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.

Ari. Was 't well done ? }
Pro. Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt } Aside. be free.

Alon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod :
And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of ' some oracle

Must rectify our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my liege,
Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business : at pick'd leisure,
Which shall be shortly, single I 'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable) of every
These happen'd accidents : till when, be cheerful,
And think of each thing well.—Come hither, spirit ;
[Aside]

Set Caliban and his companions free :
Untie the spell. [Exit ARIEL.] How fares my gracious
sir ?

There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads that you remember not.

Re-enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, in their stolen Apparel.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself ; for all is but fortune :—Corrag bully-monster, Corragio !

Trin. If these be true spies which I wear in head, here 's a goodly sigat.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits, indeed !
How fine my master is ! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha !
What things are these, my lord Antonio ?
Will money buy them ?

Ant. Very like ; one of them
Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable.

Pro. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true : this mis-shapen knave,—
His mother was a witch, and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebb,
And deal in her command, without her power :
These three have robb'd me : and this demi-devil
(For he 's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life : two of these fellows you Must know, and own ; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler ?

Seb. He is drunk now : where had he wine ?

Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe : Where shall they

Find this grand liquor that hath gilded them ?—
How cam'st thou in this pickle ?

Trin. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones :
I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano ?

Ste. O, touch me not ; I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pro. You 'd be king o' the isle, sirrah ?

Ste. I should have been a sore one then.

Alon. This is as strange thing as e'er I look'd on.

Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape :—Go, sirrah, to my cell ;
Take with you your companions ; as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. Ay, that I will ; and I 'll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace : What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool !

Pro. Go to ; away !

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Seb. 'T stole it, rather.

[Exit CAL., STE., and TRIN.]

Pro. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train,
To my poor cell : where you shall take your rest
For this one night ; which (part of it) I 'll waste With such discourse, as, I net doubt, shall make

t away : the story of my life, particular accidents gone by,
 came to this isle : And in the morn
 g you to your ship, and so to Naples, have hope to see the nuptial or dear-belov'd solemnized ;
 ce retire me to my Milan, where rd thought shall be my grave.

I long

To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Pro. I'll deliver all ;
 And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
 And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
 Your royal fleet far off.—My Ariel ;—chick,—
 That is thy charge ; then to the elements
 Be free, and fare thou well !—[aside.] Please you, draw near. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

Spoken by PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
 And what strength I have 's mine own ;
 Which is most faint : now 't is true,
 I must be here confin'd by you,
 Or sent to Naples : Let me not,
 Since I have my dukedom got,
 And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
 In this bare island, by your spell ;
 But release me from my bands,
 With the help of your good hands.
 Gentle breath of yours my sails
 Must fill, or else my project fails,
 Which was to please : Now I want
 Spirits to enforce, art to enchant ;
 And my ending is despair,
 Unless I be reliev'd by prayer ;
 Which pierces so, that it assaults
 Mercy itself, and frees all faults.
 As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
 Let your indulgence set me free.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE 'King John' of Shakspeare was first printed in the folio collection of his plays, in 1623. We have followed the text of this edition almost literally. 'King John' is one of the plays of Shakspeare enumerated by Francis Meres, in 1598.

Dr. Johnson, in his preface to Shakspeare, speaking of the division, by the players, of our author's works into comedies, histories, and tragedies, thus defines what, he says, was the notion of a dramatic history in those times: "History was a series of actions, with no other than chronological succession, independent on each other, and without any tendency to introduce and regulate the conclusion." Again, speaking of the unities of the critics, he says of Shakspeare—"His histories, being neither tragedies nor comedies, are not subject to any of their laws; nothing more is necessary to all the praise which they expect, than that the changes of action be so prepared as to be understood, that the incidents be various and affecting, and the characters consistent, natural, and distinct. No other unity is intended, and, therefore, none is to be sought. In his other works he has well enough preserved the unity of action." Taking these observations together, as a general definition of the character of Shakspeare's histories, we are constrained to say that no opinion can be farther removed from the truth. So far from the "unity of action" not being regarded in Shakspeare's histories, and being subservient to the "chronological succession," it rides over that succession whenever the demands of the scene require "a unity of a higher order, which connects the events by reference to the workers, gives a reason for them in the motives, and presents men in their causative character."*

The great connecting link that binds together all the series of actions in the 'King John' of Shakspeare,—which does not hold any actions, or series of actions, which arise out of other causes,—is the fate of Arthur. From the first to the last scene, the hard struggles and the cruel end of the young Duke of Brittany either lead to the action, or form a portion of it, or are the direct causes of an ulterior consequence.

As an historical picture the 'King John' is wonderfully true. What a Gothic grandeur runs through the whole of these scenes! We see the men of six centuries ago, as they played the game of their personal ambition—now swearing hollow friendships, now breathing stern denunciations;—now affecting compassion for the weak and the suffering, now breaking faith with the orphan and the mother;—now

"Gone to be married, gone to swear a peace;"—now keeping the feast "with slaughtered men;"—now trembling at, and now braving, the denunciations of spiritual power;—and agreeing in nothing but to bend "their sharpest deeds of malice" on unoffending and peaceful citizens, unless the citizens have some "commodity" to offer which shall draw them

"To a most base and vile-concluded peace."

* Coleridge's Literary Remains.

With what skill has Shakspeare, whilst he thus painted the spirit of the chivalrous times,—lofty in words, but sordid in acts,—given us a running commentary which interprets the whole in the sarcasms of the Bastard! But amidst all the clatter of conventional dignity which we find in the speeches of John, and Philip, and Lewis, and Austria, the real dignity of strong natural affection rises over the pomp and circumstance of regal ambition with a force of contrast which is little less than sublime. The maternal terror and anguish of Constance soon become the prominent objects; and the rival kings, the haughty prelate, the fierce knights, the yielding citizens, appear but as puppets moved by destiny to force on the most bitter sorrows of that broken-hearted mother. Matchless as is the art of the poet in these scenes;—matchless as an exhibition of maternal sorrow only, apart from the whirlwind of conflicting passions that are mixed up with that sorrow;—are we to believe that Shakspeare intended that our hearts should sustain the laceration, and that the effects should pass away when Constance quits the stage? Are we to believe that he was satisfied that his "incidents should be various and affecting," but "independent on each other, and without any tendency to produce and regulate the conclusion?" Was there to be no "unity of feeling" to sustain and elevate the action to the end? Was his tragedy to be a mere dance of Fantoccini? No, no. The remembrance of Constance can never be separated from the after-scenes in which Arthur appears; and at the very last, when the poison has done its work upon the gullible king, we can scarcely help believing that the spirit of Constance hovers over him, and that the echo of the mother's cries is even more insupportable than the "burn'd bosom" and the "parched lips," which neither his "kingdom's rivers" nor the "bleak winds" of the north can "comfort with cold." By the magic of the poet, the interval of fourteen years between the death of Arthur and the death of John is annihilated. Causes and consequences, separated in the proper history by long digressions and tedious episodes, are brought together. The attributed murder of Arthur lost John all the inheritances of the house of Anjou, and allowed the house of Capet to triumph in his overthrow. Out of this grew a larger ambition, and England was invaded. The death of Arthur and the events which marked the last days of John were separated in their cause and effect by time only, over which the poet leaps. It is said that a man who was on the point of drowning saw, in an instant, all the events of his life in connexion with his approaching end. So sees the poet. It is his to bring the beginnings and the ends of events into that real union and dependence which even the philosophical historian may overlook in tracing their course. It is the poet's office to preserve a unity of action; it is the historian's to show a consistency of progress. In the chronicles we have manifold changes of fortune in the life of John after Arthur of Brittany has fallen. In Shakspeare, Arthur of Brittany is at once revenged.

SCENE.—SOMETIMES IN ENGLAND; SOMETIMES IN FRANCE.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.

KING JOHN, QUEEN ELINOR, PEMBROKE, ESSEX, ALBEMURTY, and others, with CHATILLON.

John. Now say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

*Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France, charitably,* to the majesty, and majesty of England here.*

A strange beginning;—borrow'd majesty!

Alm. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.

Philip of France, in right and true behalf deceased brother Geoffrey's son, Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim fair island, and the territories; and, Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine; and these to lay aside the sword, always usurpingly these several titles; and of the same into young Arthur's hand, and give and right royal sovereign.

John. What follows if we disallow of this?

Alm. The proud control of fierce and bloody war, and these rights so forcibly withheld.

John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood.

Alm. Harshness, behaviour, is the manner of having, and thus.

Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth, The farthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace:

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;

For ere thou canst report I will be there,

The thunder of my cannon shall be heard:

So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,

And sullen presage of your own decay.

An honourable conduct let him have:—

Pembroke, look to't: Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exeunt CHAT. and PEM.]

Eli. What now, my son? have I not ever said,

How that ambitious Constance would not cease,

Till she had kindled France, and all the world,

Upon the right and party of her son?

This might have been prevented, and made whole,

With very easy arguments of love;

Which now the manage<sup>a</sup> of two kingdoms must

With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right, for us.

Eli. Your strong possession much more than your right;

Or else it must go wrong with you and me:

<sup>a</sup> Manage has, in Shakspeare the same meaning as management and managery,—which, applied to a state, is equivalent to government.

So much my conscience whispers in your ear ;
Which none but Heaven, and you, and I shall hear

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
That e'er I heard : Shall I produce the men ?

K. John. Let them approach. [Exit Sheriff.]
Our abbeyes, and our priories, shall pay

Re-enter Sheriff, with ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, and PHILIP, his bastard Brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you ?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman,
Born in Northamptonshire ; and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge ;
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou ?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir ?
You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king,
That is well known : and, as I think, one father :
But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o'er to Heaven, and to my mother,
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man ! thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour, with this diffidence.

Bast. I, madam ? no, I have no reason for it,
That is my brother's plea, and none of mine ;
The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a-year :
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land !

K. John. A good blunt fellow :—Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance ?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander'd me with bastardy :
But wher<sup>a</sup> I be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head ;
But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me !)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son, like him ;—
O old sir Robert, father, on my knee,
I give Heaven thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath Heaven lent us
here !

Eli. He hath a trick<sup>b</sup> of Cœur-de-lion's face ;
The accent of his tongue affecteth him :
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man ?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard. Sirrah, speak,
What doth move you to claim your brother's land ?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father ;
With that half-face would he have all my land :
A half-face'd groat five hundred pound a-year !

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much :—

Bast. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my land :
Your tale must be how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time :

<sup>a</sup> Wher has the meaning of whether, but does not appear to have been written as a contraction either by Shakspeare or his contemporaries.

<sup>b</sup> Trick, here and elsewhere in Shakspeare, means peculiarity.

Th' advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's ;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak :
But truth is truth ; large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,—
As I have heard my father speak himself,—
When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me ; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his ;
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate ;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him :
And, if she did play false, the fault was hers ;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his ?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world ;
In sooth, he might : then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him ; nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him : This concludes :
My mother's son did get your father's heir ;
Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force,
To dispossess that child which is not his ?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land ;
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence,<sup>a</sup> and no land beside ?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, sir Robert his,<sup>b</sup> like him ;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods ;
My arms such eel-skins stuff'd ; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, Look, where three-farthings grow
And, to his shape,<sup>c</sup> were heir to all this land,
'Would I might never stir from off this place,
I would give it every foot to have this face ;
I would not be sir Nob<sup>d</sup> in any case.

Eli. I like thee well : Wilt thou forsake thy father,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me ?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my
chance :

Your face hath got five hundred pound a-year ;
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 't is dear.
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name ?

Bast. Philip, my liege ; so is my name begun ;
Philip, good old sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose face thou bearest :

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great ;
Arise sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother, by the mother's side, give me your hand ;

My father gave me honour, yours gave land :

<sup>a</sup> Presence may here mean "priority of place," position. We are inclined to receive it in the sense of the man's whole carriage and appearance—"a goodly presence."

<sup>b</sup> Sir Robert his. This is the old form of the pronoun. Faulconbridge says, "If I had his shape—sir Robert's shape—so I had."

<sup>d</sup> Nob is now, and was in Shakspeare's time, a cant word for the head.

blessed be the hour, by night or day,
I was got, sir Robert was away.
The very spirit of Plantagenet!
thy grandsire, Richard; call me so.
Madam, by chance, but not by truth: What
though?
ling about, a little from the right,
d the window,* or else o'er the hatch;
lives not stir by day must walk by night;
I have is have, however men do catch:
e far off, well won is still well shot;
an I, howe'er I was begot.
Madam, Go, Faulconbridge; now hast thou thy desire,
Best knight makes thee a landed squire.—
madam, and come, Richard; we must speed
ance, for France; for it is more than need.
I brother, adieu; Good fortune come to thee!
as wast got i' the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.] of honour better than I was;
my a many foot of land the worse.
now can I make any Joan a lady.
madam, sir Richard,—God-a-mercy, fellow;
his name be George, I'll call him Peter:
made honour doth forget men's names;
s respective, and too sociable,
s conversation.<sup>c</sup> Now your traveller,
his toothpick at my worship's mess,
on my knightly stomach is suffic'd,
on I suck my teeth, and catechise led man of countries:<sup>d</sup>—My dear sir, leaning on my elbow, I begin,
beseech you.—That is question now;
as comes answer like an Absey<sup>e</sup> book:
says answer, at your best command;
employment; at your service, sir:
says question, I, sweet sir, at yours:
ere answer knows what question would,
in dialogue of compliment;
king of the Alps and Apennines,
mean, and the river Po,
s toward supper in conclusion so.
is worshipful society,
the mounting spirit like myself:
s but a bastard to the time,

can I, whether I smack, or no;)
t alone in habit and device,
t farm, outward accoutrement;
in the inward motion to deliver sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:
though I will not practise to deceive, void deceit I mean to learn;
hall strew the footsteps of my rising.—
s comes in such haste, in riding robes?
woman-post is this? hath she no husband,
ill take pains to blow a horn before her?

at the window, &c. These were proverbial expressions,
g analogy with irregular modes of entering a house,
ence in cases such as that of Faulconbridge's.
at day—good evening, good e'en.
ermin. The Bastard, whose "new-made honour" is a can,—a change of condition,—would say that to rememer's names (opposed, by implication, to forget) is too er (punctilious, discriminating) and too sociable for one er) attained rank.
led man of countries. "To pick" is the same as "to er-lead, the common name for the first, or A, B, C, book, cluded the Catechism.

Enter LADY FAULCONBRIDGE and JAMES GURNEY.

O me! it is my mother:—How now, good lady?
What brings you here to court so hastily?
Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he?
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
Bast. My brother Robert? old sir Robert's son?
Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it sir Robert's son that you seek so?
Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unreverend boy,
Sir Robert's son: Why scorn'st thou at sir Robert?
He is sir Robert's son; and so art thou.
Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a while?
Gur. Good leave, good Philip.
Bast. Philip?—sparrow!<sup>a</sup>—James,
There 's toys abroad; anon I'll tell thee more.
[Exit GURNEY]

Madam, I was not old sir Robert's son;
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well; Marry—to confess—
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handiwork:—Therefore, good mother,
To whom am I beholden for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.
Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?
Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Basilisco-like:<sup>b</sup>
What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.
But, mother, I am not sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation, name, and all is gone:
Then, good my mother, let me know my father;
Some proper man, I hope; Who was it, mother?
Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.
Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father:
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed.
Heaven! lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.
Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not wish a better father.
Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault was not your folly:
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,— Subjected tribute to commanding love,—
Against whose fury and unmatched force
The awless<sup>c</sup> lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.
He that perforce robs lions of their hearts,
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives and dares but say, thou didst not well
When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;
And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:
Who says it was, he lies; I say, 't was not. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Philip?—sparrow! The sparrow was called Philip,—perhaps from his note, out of which Catullus, in his elegy on Lesbia's sparrow, formed a verb, pipilabat.
<sup>b</sup> Basilisco-like. Basilisco is a character in a play of Shakspere's time, 'Solimaa and Perseda.'
<sup>c</sup> Awless—the opposite of awful; not inspiring awe.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter on one side, the ARCHDUKE OF AUSTRIA, and Forces; on the other, PHILIP, King of France, and Forces; LEWIS, CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and Attendants.

Leic. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.

Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart,
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave:
And, for amends to his posterity,
At our importance<sup>a</sup> hither is he come,
To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf;
And to rebuke the usurpation

Of thy unnatural uncle, English John;
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death,
The rather, that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of war:
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of unstained love:
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Leic. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
As seal to this indenture of my love;
That to my home I will no more return,
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides,
And coops from other lands her islanders,
Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes,
Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O, take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords
In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work; our cannon shall be bent
Against the brows of this resisting town.
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best advantages:
We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood:
My lord Chatillon may from England bring
That right in peace, which here we urge in war,
And then we shall repent each drop of blood
That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady!—lo, upon thy wish,
Our messenger Chatillon is arriv'd.—
What England says, say briefly, gentle lord,
We coldly pause for thee; Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stir them up against a mightier task.
England, impatient of your just demands,
Hath put himself in arms; the adverse winds,
Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him time

<sup>a</sup> Importance—impertunity.

To land his legions all as soon as I:

His marches are expedient<sup>a</sup> to this town,
His forces strong, his soldiers confident.
With him along is come the mother-queen,
An Até, stirring him to blood and strife;
With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain;
With them a bastard of the king's decess'd:
And all the unsettled humours of the land,—
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spleens,—
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here.
In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and scath in Christendom.
The interruption of their churlish drums [Drums
Cuts off more circumstance: they are at hand
To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd-for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence;
For courage mounteth with occasion:
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter KING JOHN, ELINOR, BLANCH, the Bastard PEMBROKE, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France; if France in peace permit

Our just and lineal entrance to our own!
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven!
Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
Their proud contempt that beat his peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England; if that war return

From France to England, there to live in peace!
England we love; and, for that England's sake,
With burthen of our armour here we sweat:
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Outfaced infant state, and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face;—
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his:
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Geoffrey; and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right,
And this is Geoffrey's,<sup>b</sup> in the name of God.
How comes it, then, that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission
France,

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phi. From that supernal judge that stirs thoughts

In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right.
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy:

<sup>a</sup> Expedient. The word properly means, "that which is expedient to set at liberty the fast which was held fast is expedient."

<sup>b</sup> And this is Geoffrey's. We have restored the punctuation the original. King Philip makes a solemn asseveration that (Arthur) is Geoffrey's son and successor, in the name of God, asserting the principle of legitimacy, by divine ordinance.

no warrant, I impeach thy wrong ;
 Give me help, I mean to chastise it.
K. Phi. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.
 Excuse ; it is to beat usurping down.
 So is it thou dost call usurper, France ?
 Let me make answer ;—thy usurping son,
 Insolent ! thy bastard shall be king ;
 He mayst be a queen, and check the world !
 My bed was ever to thy son as true,
 As to thy husband : and this boy
 Ature to his father Geoffrey,
 And John, in manners being as like Water, or devil to his dam.
 Bastard ! By my soul, I think,
 Never was so true begot ;
 He is, an if thou wert his mother.
 There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.
 There's a good grandame, boy, that would Not blot thee.

Hear the crier.

What the devil art thou ?
 He that will play the devil, sir, with you,
 Catch your hide and you alone.
 He bare of whom the proverb goes,
 He plucks dead lions by the beard.
 Your skin-coat, an I catch you right ;
 To 't ; i' faith, I will, i' faith.
 O, well did he become that lion's robe,
 Who stole the lion of that robe !
 He lies as sightly on the back of him,
 As ciders' shoes upon an ass :—
 He take that burthen from your back ;
 But shall make your shoulders crack.
 That cracker is this same, that deafs our ears
 With his abundance of superfluous breath ?
 He is, determine what we shall do straight.
 He men and fools, break off your conference.
 This is the very sum of all,—
 I'd Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
 Arthur do I claim of thee :
 Assign them, and lay down thy arms ?
 My life as soon :—I do defy thee, France.
 Retaigne, yield thee to my hand ;
 My dear love, I 'll give thee more
 Than a coward hand of France can win :
 I lay.

Come to thy grandame, child.
 O, child, go to i' grandame, child ;
 One kingdom, and i' grandame will Give you a cherry, and a fig :
 So, grandame.

Good my mother, peace !
 As I were low laid in my grave ;
 For 't is this coil that 's made for me.
 My mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.
 He shames upon you, when she does, or no !
 He's wrong'd, and not his mother's shames,
 Heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
 Heaven shall take in nature of a fee ;
 As crystal beads Heaven shall be brib'd
 With justice, and revenge on you.
 He monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth !
 He monstrous injurer of heaven and earth !
 He slanderer ; thou, and thine, usurp
 His crown, royalties, and rights
 From his poor boy : This is thy eldest son's son,
 He is nothing but in thee ;
 He is visited in this poor child ;
 He is the law is laid on him,
 He is the second generation
 Born on thy sin-conceiving womb.
 He, Bellam, have done.

I have but this to say,—

That he's not only plagued for her sin,
 But God hath made her sin and her the plague
 On this removed issue, plagued for her,
 And with her plague, her sin ; his injury
 Her injury,—the beadle to her sin ;
 All punish'd in the person of this child,
 And all for her ; A plague upon her !

Eli. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
 A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that ? a will ! a wicked will ;
 A woman's will ; a canker'd grandame's will !

K. Phi. Peace, lady ; pause, or be more temperate :
 It ill beseems this presence, to cry aim
 To these ill-tuned repetitions.

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
 These men of Angiers ; let us hear them speak,
 Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpet sounds. Enter Citizens upon the Walls.

Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls ?

K. Phi. 'T is France for England.

K. John. England, for itself ;
 You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects !

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,
 Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle—

K. John. For our advantage ;—Therefore, hear us first.

These flags of France, that are advanced here
 Before the eye and prospect of your town,
 Have hither march'd to your endamagement ;
 The cannons have their bowels full of wrath ;
 And ready-mounted are they, to spit forth
 Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls :
 All preparation for a bloody siege
 And merciless proceeding, by these French,
 Confronts your city's eyes, your winking gates ;
 And but for our approach, those sleeping stones,
 That as a waste do girdle you about,
 By the compulsion of their ordnance
 By this time from their fixed beds of lime
 Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made
 For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
 But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,
 Who painfully, with much expedient march,
 Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
 To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,—
 Behold, the French, amaz'd, vouchsafe a parle :
 And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
 To make a shaking fever in your walls,
 They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,
 To make a faithless error in your ears :
 Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
 And let us in. Your King,<sup>a</sup> whose labour'd spirits
 Forewearied<sup>b</sup> in this action of swift speed,
 Craves harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both.
 Lo, in this right hand, whose protection
 Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
 Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
 Son to the elder brother of this man,
 And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys :
 For this down-trodden equity, we tread
 In warlike march these greens before your town ;
 Being no further enemy to you,
 Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,
 In the relief of this oppressed child,
 Religiously provokes. Be pleas'd then
 To pay that duty which you truly owe,
 To him that owes<sup>c</sup> it,—namely, this young prince :
 And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,

<sup>a</sup> Your king, &c. We have here restored the old reading, in which "your king" is the nominative to "craves."

<sup>b</sup> It is to be observed that "foreweary" and "weary" are the same ; and that "forewearied" may be used, not as a participle requiring an auxiliary verb, but as a verb neuter.

In such a love, so vile a lout as he.

Blanch. My uncle's will, in this respect, is mine.
If he see aught in you, that makes him like,
That anything he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or, if you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this,—that nothing do I see in you, Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your
judge,
That I can find should merit any hate.

K. John. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin; can you love this lady?

Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love;
For I do love her most unfeignedly.

K. John. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Maine, Poitiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

K. Phi. It likes us well. Young princes, close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for I am well assur'd
That I did so, when I was first assur'd.<sup>a</sup>

K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at saint Mary's chapel, presently,
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd.
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?
I know she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much:
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

Lew. She is sad and passionate<sup>b</sup> at your highness' tent.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.—I retire from the walls.

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad com-
John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part:
And France, whose armour conscience buckl'd
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field
As God's own soldier, rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly de-
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith
That daily break-vow; he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, and
Who having no external thing to lose
But the word maid, cheats the poor maid of
That smooth-fac'd gentleman, tickling com-
Commodity, the bias of the world;<sup>b</sup>
The world, who of itself is peis'd<sup>c</sup> well,
Made to run even; upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency.
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing war-
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aim
From a resolv'd and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.—
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not woo'd me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hare
When his fair angels would salute my palms
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raieth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—there is no sin but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—there is no vice but beggary:
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord! for I will worship thee!

ACT III.

sick, and capable of fears;
 with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
 husbandless, subject to fears;
 naturally born to fears;
 If thou now confess thou didst but jest
 vex'd spirits, I cannot take a truce, will quake and tremble all this day.
 What thou mean by shaking of thy head?
 How thou look so sadly on my son?
 What hand upon that breast of thine?
 What thine eye that lamentable rheum,
 What river peering o'er his bounds?
 What signs confirmers of thy words?
 What again; not all thy former tale,
 Be word, whether thy tale be true.
 True, as, I believe, you think them false
 you cause to prove my saying true.
 O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
 What this sorrow how to make me die;
 Relief and life encounter so,
 The fury of two desperate men,
 The very meeting, fall, and die.—
 My boy Blanch! O, boy, then where art thou?
 What with England! what becomes of me?—
 My gaze: I cannot brook thy sight;
 What hath made thee a most ugly man.
 What other harm have I, good lady, done,
 The harm that is by others done?
 Which harm within itself so heinous is,
 So harmful all that speak of it.
 Do beseech you, madam, be content.
 If thou, that bidd'st me be content, wert grim,
 What standard rous'd to thy mother's womb,
 Pleasing blots and sightless* stains,
 What, crooked, swart, prodigious,<sup>b</sup>
 With foul moles and eye-offending marks,
 If I care, I then would be content;
 I should not love thee; no, nor thou
 Thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
 What art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
 What Fortune join'd to make thee great:
 What gifts thou mayst with lilies boast,
 The half-blown rose: but Fortune, O!
 What upst, chang'd, and won from thee;
 What rates hourly with thy uncle John;
 What her golden hand hath pluck'd on France
 What own fair respect of sovereignty,
 What his majesty the bawd to theirs.
 What bawd to Fortune, and king John;
 What what Fortune, that usurping John:—
 What thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
 What kin with words; or get thee gone,
 What those woes alone, which I alone
 What to under-bear.

Pardon me, madam,
 I go without you to the kings.
 What thou mayst, thou shalt, I will not go with thee.
 What meet my sorrows to be proud:
 What proud, and makes his owner stoop.<sup>a</sup>
 What led to the state of my great grief,
 What assemble; for my grief 's so great
 What supporter but the huge firm earth
 What it up: here I and sorrows sit;
 What thy thence, hid kings come bow to it.

[She throws herself on the ground.]

King JOHN, King PHILIP, Lewis, BLANCH,
 OR, BASTARD, AUSTRIA, and Attendants.

'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed day
 Is—the opposite of slightly.

<sup>a</sup>—pretentious.
<sup>b</sup>—Constantine refuses to go with Salisbury to the kings without her sorrows to be proud; for grief is proud in while it bows down the body of its owner; or,
 its owner stoop to it.

Ever in France shall be kept festival:
 To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
 Stays in his course, and plays the alchemist;
 Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
 The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
 The yearly course that brings this day about
 Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holyday!—[Rising.]

What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
 That it in golden letters should be set,
 Among the high tides, in the kalendar?
 Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week;
 This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
 Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child
 Pray that their burthens may not fall this day,
 Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd:
 But on<sup>a</sup> this day let seamen fear no wrack;
 No bargains break, that are not this day made:
 This day, all things begun come to ill end;
 Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
 To curse the fair proceedings of this day.

Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,
 Resembling majesty; which, being touch'd, and tried,
 Proves valueless: You are forsworn, forsworn;
 You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
 But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
 The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
 Is cold, in amity and painted peace,
 And our oppression hath made up this league:—
 Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjurd kings!
 A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
 Let not the hours of this ungodly day
 Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
 Set armed discord 'twixt these perjurd kings!
 Hear me, O, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.

Const. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.
 O Lymoges! O Austria! thou dost shame
 That bloody spoil: Thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward;

Thou little valiant, great in villainy!
 Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
 Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight
 But when her humorous ladyship is by
 To teach thee safety! thou art perjurd too,
 And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
 A ramping fool; to brag, and stamp, and swear,
 Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
 Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
 Been sworn my soldier? Bidding me depend Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
 And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
 Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
 And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me!

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

K. John. We like not this; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.
 Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven!—

To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
 I, Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
 And from pope Innocent the legate here,
 Do, in his name, religiously demand,
 Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
 So wilfully dost spurn; and, force perforce,
 Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
 Of Canterbury, from that holy see?

<sup>a</sup> But in—except on.

This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatories
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of England
Add thus much more,—That no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions;
But as we under heaven are supreme head,
So, under him, that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart,
To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blasphemè in this.

K. John. Though you, and all the kings of Christendom,

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out;
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself;
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish;
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate:
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretic;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized, and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O, lawful let it be,
That I have room with Rome* to curse a while!
Good father cardinal, cry thou, amen,
To my keen curses: for, without my wrong,
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There 's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

Const. And for mine too; when law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong;
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here;
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic;
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand.

Const. Look to that, devil! lest that France repent,
And, by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, Because—

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference
Is, purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forego the easier.

Blanch. That 's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast; the devil tempts thee here,

In likeness of a new untrimmed bride.

* Room with Rome. Rome was formerly pronounced room.—and Shakspeare indulges in a play upon words, even when the utterer is strongly moved.

Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her faith
But from her need.

Const. O, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,—
That faith would live again by death of need;
O, then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up;
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to thee.

Const. O, be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, king Philip; hang no more in dumb.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most reverend.

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more,

If thou stand excommunicate, and curs'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person just.

And tell me how you would bestow yourself.

This royal hand and mine are newly knit:

And the conjunction of our inward souls

Married in league, coupled and link'd together

With all religious strength of sacred vows.

The latest breath that gave the sound of words

Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,

Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;

And even before this truce, but new before,—

No longer than we well could wash our hands,

To clap this royal bargain up of peace,—

Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and overstain'd

With slaughter's pencil; where revenge did paint

The fearful difference of incensed kings:

And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,

So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,

Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?

Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with Heaven,

Make such unconstant children of ourselves,

As now again to snatch our palm from palm;

Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage-bed

Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,

And make a riot on the gentle brow

Of true sincerity? O, holy sir,

My reverend father, let it not be so:

Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose

Some gentle order; and then we shall be bless'd

To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,

Save what is opposite to England's love.

Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church!

Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,

A mother's curse, on her revolting son.

France, thou mayst hold a serpent by the tongue,

A chased lion<sup>a</sup> by the mortal paw,

A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,

Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;

And, like a civil war, sett'st oath to oath,

Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, let thy vow

First made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd;

That is, to be the champion of our church!

What since thou swor'st is sworn against thyself,

And may not be performed by thyself:

For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss,

Is not amiss when it is truly done;

And being not done, where doing tends to ill,

The truth is then most done not doing it:

The better act of purposes mistook

Is, to mistake again; though indirect,

<sup>a</sup> A chased lion. We have ventured here upon a slight change. The original reads, "a caged lion," which is supposed to mean a lion in a cage. The image is, strictly taken, ended, if not destroyed, by this epithet. The very poor insertion of an h presents us a noble picture of a hunted bay.

on thereby grows direct,
 As falsehood cures; as fire cools fire,
 Scorched veins of one new burn'd.
 That doth make vows kept;
 That sworn against religion
 Is swear'd against the thing thou swear'st;
 An oath the surety for thy truth
 Hath: The truth thou art unsure
 Swears only * not to be forsworn;
 Mockery should it be to swear!
 That swear only to be forsworn;
 Sworn, to keep what thou dost swear.
 Of later vows, against thy first,
 Rebellion to thyself:
 Request never canst thou make,
 For constant and thy nobler parts
 Gildy loose suggestions:
 Better part our prayers come in,
 To save them: but, if not, then know,
 Our curses light on thee
 Than thou shalt not shake them off,
 Or, die under their black weight.
 Fellicon, flat rebellion!

Will 't not be?
 If's-skin stop that mouth of thine?
 Or, to arms!

Upon thy wedding-day?
 Blood that thou hast married?
 Our feast be kept with slaughter'd men?
 Of trumpets, and loud churlish drums,
 Bell, be measures <sup>b</sup> to our pomp?
 Hear me!—ah, alack, how new
 To my mouth!—even for that name,
 At this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,
 As I beg, go not to arms
 To uncle.

O, upon my knee,
 With kneeling, I do pray to thee,
 As Dauphin, alter not the doom
 By heaven.
 How shall I see thy love. What motive
 For with thee than the name of wife?
 At which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
 O, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour!
 See your majesty doth seem so cold,
 And round respects do pull you on.
 Will pronounce a curse upon his head.
 Thou shalt not need:—England, I will fall
 As thee.

For fair return of banish'd majesty!
 For a revolt of French inconstancy!
 France, thou shalt rue this hour within this
 As.

Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton,
 See,
 If I well then, France shall rue.
 The sun's o'ercast with blood: Fair day
 As!

Side that I must go withal?
 That each army hath a hand;
 For rage, I having hold of both,
 Murder, and dismember me.
 Cannot pray that thou mayst win;
 As must pray that thou mayst lose;
 For not wish the fortune thine;
 Will not wish thy wishes thrive:
 As, on that side shall I lose;
 Before the match be play'd.
 For, with me; with me thy fortune lies.

By. The entire speech of Pandolph is full of it, which under the intricate reasoning more tobett imperceptibly meant to produce this effect.
 solemn dance.

Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life
 dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.—
 [Exit Bastard.]

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
 A rage whose heat hath this condition,
 That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
 The blood, and dearest-valued blood, of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
 Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.

K. John. No more than he that threatens.—To arms let 's hie!
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. Plains near Angiers.

Alarums; Excursions. Enter the Bastard, with AUSTRIA'S Head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;
 Some airy devil hovers in the sky,
 And pours down mischief. Austria's head, lie there;
 While Philip breathes.

Enter KING JOHN, ARTHUR, and HUBERT.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy:—Philip, make up:
 My mother is assailed in our tent,
 And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescued her;
 Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
 But on, my liege; for very little pains
 Will bring this labour to a happy end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Alarums; Excursions; Retreat. Enter KING JOHN,
 ELINOR, ARTHUR, the Bastard, HUBERT, and Lords.

K. John. So shall it be; your graces shall stay behind,
 [To ELI.]
 So strongly guarded.—Cousin, look not sad: [To ARTH.]
 Thy grandame loves thee; and thy uncle will
 As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arth. O, this will make my mother die with grief.

K. John. Cousin, [to the Bastard] away for England;
 haste before:

And, ere our coming, see thou shake the hags
 Of boarding abbots; imprisoned angels
 Set thou at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
 Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
 Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back.
 When gold and silver beck me to come on.
 I leave your highness:—Grandame, I will pray
 (If ever I remember to be holy)

For your fair safety; so I kiss your hand.

Eli. Farewell, gentle cousin.

K. John. Coz, farewell. [Exit Bastard.]

Eli. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.

[She takes ARTH. aside.]

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
 We owe thee much; within this wall of flesh
 There is a soul counts thee her creditor,
 And with advantage means to pay thy love:
 And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
 Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
 Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,—
 But I will fit it with some better tune.
 By heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd
 To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty.

K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet!
 But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow,
 Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.
 I had a thing to say,—But let it go:

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
 Attended with the pleasures of the world,
 Is all too wanton and too full of gawds,
 To give me audience:—If the midnight bell
 Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
 Sound on<sup>a</sup> into the drowsy race of night;
 If this same were a churchyard where we stand,
 And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;
 Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
 Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick,
 (Which, else, runs tickling up and down the veins,
 Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes,
 And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
 A passion hateful to my purposes;) ;
 Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
 Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
 Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
 Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words;
 Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,
 I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
 But ah, I will not:—Yet I love thee well;
 And, by my troth, I think thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
 Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
 By heaven, I would do it.

K. John. Do not I know thou wouldst?
 Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
 On my young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,
 He is a very serpent in my way,
 And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread
 He lies before me: Dost thou understand me?
 Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I'll keep him so,
 That he shall not offend your majesty.

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.

I could be merry now: Hubert, I love thee.
 Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:
 Remember.—Madam, fare you well:
 I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.

Eli. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin, go:
 Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
 With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. The French King's Tent.

Enter KING PHILIP, LEWIS, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
 A whole armado of convicted<sup>b</sup> sail
 Is scatter'd and disjoin'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have run so ill?
 Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
 Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?
 And bloody England into England gone,
 O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won that hath he fortified:
 So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
 Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,

<sup>a</sup> Sound on. So the original. But on and one were often spell'd alike; and therefore the passage must be determined by other principles than that of fidelity to the text. Which is the more poetical.

"Sound on into the drowsy race of night," or "sound one!"—Shakspeare, it appears to us, has made the idea of time precise enough by the "midnight bell;" and the addition of "one," is either a contradiction or a pleonasm. But was the "midnight bell" the bell of a clock? Was it not rather the bell which called the monks to their "morning lauds?"
<sup>b</sup> Convicted—overpowered.

Doth want example: Who hath read, or heard,
 Of any kindred action like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had praise,
 So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul;
 Holding the eternal spirit, against her will,
 In the vile prison of afflicted breath:—
 I prithee, lady, go away with me

Const. Lo, now! now see the issue of your peace

K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort, good Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
 But that which ends all counsel, true redress.
 Death, death, O amiable lovely death!
 Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!
 Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
 Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
 And I will kiss thy detestable bones;
 And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty brows;
 And ring these fingers with thy household worms;
 And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
 And be a carrion monster like thyself:
 Come, grin on me; and I will think thou smil'st,
 And buss thee as thy wife! Misery's love,
 O, come to me!

K. Phi. O fair affliction, peace!

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
 O, that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth!
 Then with a passion would I shake the world;
 And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
 Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
 Which scorns a modern<sup>c</sup> invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow

Const. Thou art not holy to belie me so;
 I am not mad: this hair I tear is mine;
 My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey's wife;
 Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost:
 I am not mad:—I would to heaven I were!
 For then, 't is like I should forget myself:
 O, if I could, what grief should I forget!—
 Preach some philosophy to make me mad,
 And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal;
 For, being not mad but sensible of grief,
 My reasonable part produces reason
 How I may be deliver'd of these woes,
 And teaches me to kill or hang myself:
 If I were mad, I should forget my son;
 Or madly think a babe of clouts were he:
 I am not mad; too well, too well I feel
 The different plague of each calamity.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses: O, what love!
 In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
 Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
 Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends
 Do glue themselves in sociable grief;
 Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
 Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. Phi. Bind up your

Const. Yes, that I will; And wherefore will I do
 I tore them from their bonds; and criest aloud,
 O that these hands could so redeem my son,
 As they have given these hairs their liberty!
 But now I envy at their liberty,
 And will again commit them to their bonds
 Because my poor child is a prisoner.

<sup>c</sup> Modern—trite, common. Thus, in "As You Like It"
 "Full of wise saws and modern instances"
 We may read "a mother's invocation" with little value
 the text: moder's (the old spelling) might have been easily taken for modern.

Thy foot to England's throne ; and, therefore, mark.
 John hath seiz'd Arthur ; and it cannot be,
 That, whiles warm life plays in that infant's veins,
 The misplac'd John should entertain an hour,
 One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest :
 A sceptre, snatch'd with an unruly hand,
 Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd ;
 And he that stands upon a slippery place
 Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up :
 That John may stand then Arthur needs must fall ;
 So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall ?

Pand. You, in the right of lady Blanch your wife,
 May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world !

John lays you plots ; the times conspire with you :

For he that steeps his safety in true blood

Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts

Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,

That none so small advantage shall step forth

To check his reign, but they will cherish it ;

No natural exhalation in the sky,

No scope of nature,<sup>a</sup> no distemper'd day,

No common wind, no custom'd event,

But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,

Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,

Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,

But hold himself safe in his prisonment.

Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,

Even at that news he dies : and then the hearts

Of all his people shall revolt from him,

And kiss the lips of unacquainted change ;

And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,

Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

Methinks, I see this hurly all on foot ;

And, O, what better matter breeds for you,

Than I have nam'd !—The bastard Faulconbridge

Is now in England, ransacking the church,

Offending charity : If but a dozen French

Were there in arms, they would be as a call<sup>b</sup>

To train ten thousand English to their side ;

Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,

Anon becomes a mountain. O noble dauphin,

Go with me to the king : 'T is wonderful

What may be wrought out of their discontent,

Now that their souls are topfull of offence.

For England go ; I will whet on the king.

come forth ; I have to say with you.

Enter ARTHUR.

good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince (having so great a title

To be more prince) as may be.—You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me !

Methinks, nobody should be sad but I :

Yet, I remember, when I was in France,

Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,

<sup>a</sup> Scope of nature—the ordinary course of nature. A scope is what is seen—according to its derivation—as a phenomenon is what appears.

<sup>b</sup> A call. The caged birds which lure the wild ones to the net are termed by fowlers "call-birds."

<sup>c</sup> Strange. Strong reasons make—that is, justify—a large deviation from common courses.

Only for wantonness. By my christendom,<sup>a</sup>
So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I should be as merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?
No, indeed, is 't not; And I would to heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden, and despatch. [Aside.]

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day:
In sooth, I would you were a little sick,
That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
I warrant I love you more than you do me.

Hub. His words do take possession of my bosom.— Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.] How now, foolish rheum! [Aside.]

Turning spiteous torture out of door!
I must be brief; lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish tears.
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:
Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my hand-kercher about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,)
And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head;
And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;
Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your grief?
Or, What good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
But you at your sick service had a prince.
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning; do, an if you will:
If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine eyes?
These eyes, that never did, nor never shall,
So much as frown on you?

Hub. I have sworn to do it;
And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah, none, but in this iron age, would do it!
The iron of itself, though heat<sup>b</sup> red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes, would drink my tears,
And quench his fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence;
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye.
Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
An if an angel should have come to me,
And told me, Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not have believ'd him.<sup>c</sup> No tongue but Hubert's—

Hub. Come forth. [Stamps.]

Re-enter Attendants, with Cords, Irons, &c.

Do as I bid you do.

Arth. O, save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out,
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.

Arth. Alas, what need you be so boist'rous-rough?

<sup>a</sup> Christendom. Arthur prettily asseverates by the baptismal office—by his christening.

<sup>b</sup> Heat, used as a participle.

<sup>c</sup> I would not have believ'd him. As we have pointed the passage, Arthur begins a fresh sentence, which is interrupted by Hubert stamping. He is about to say, "No tongue but Hubert's" would have made me believe it.

I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still.
For heaven sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
Nay, hear me, Hubert! drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angrily:
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.
I attend. I am best pleas'd to be from such a de-[Exeunt Attendants.]

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend;
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart:—
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven!—that there were but a mote in your
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense!
Then, feeling what small things are boist'rous then,
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue!

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert!
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes. O, spare mine eyes!
Though to no use, but still to look on you!
Lo, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeserv'd extremes: See else yourself;
There is no malice in this burning coal;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Arth. And if you do, you will but make it blood
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert!
Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
And, like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre<sup>a</sup> him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong Deny their office: only you do lack

That mercy which fierce fire and iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all this while
You were disguised.

Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu;
Your uncle must not know but you are dead:
I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports.

And, pretty child, sleep doubtless, and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence; no more: Go closely in with me,
Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter KING JOHN, crowned; PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and other Lords. The King takes his State.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again cry
And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

<sup>a</sup> Tarre. Tooke derives this from a Saxon word, cræst, exasperate. Others think that it has only reference to the tom of exciting terriers—arrivers.

This once again, but that your highness
 pleas'd,
 superfluous: you were crown'd before,
 high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off;
 of men ne'er stained with revolt;
 station troubled not the land,
 long'd-for change, or better state.
 erefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
 a title* that was rich before,
 lined gold, to paint the lily,
 perfume on the violet,
 the ice, or add another hue rainbow, or with taper-light a beauteous eye of heaven to garnish, and ridiculous excess.

 Men workmen strive to do better than well,

Note. The guard is the border or edging of a garment, the defence against injury. We take it here employed to mean a fixed position. For examples given by Reed in his edition of Ed. Mar., we find the same expression constantly used of Primero, in which game, as far as we may see, seems to imply that the player, at a particular time, makes a decided stand upon the chances he is engaged.

Enter HUBERT.

To your direction.—Hubert, what news with you?

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed;
 He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine:
 The image of a wicked heinous fault
 Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his
 Does show the mood of a much-troubled breast;
 And I do fearfully believe 't is done
 What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the king doth come and go Between his purpose and his conscience,
 Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set:
 His passion is so ripe it needs must break.

Pem. And, when it breaks, I fear will issue thence
 The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand:—
 Good lords, although my will to give is living
 The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
 He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.

Sal. Indeed we fear'd his sickness was past cure.

Pem. Indeed we heard how near his death he was,
 Before the child himself felt he was sick:
 This must be answer'd, either here, or hence.

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on
 me?

Think you I bear the shears of destiny?
 Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul-play; and 't is shame
 That greatness should so grossly offer it:
 So thrive it in your game! and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet, lord Salisbury; I'll go with thee,
 And find the inheritance of this poor child,
 His little kingdom of a forced grave.
 That blood, which ow'd the breadth of all this isle,
 Three foot of it doth hold. Bad world the while!
 This must not be thus borne: this will break out
 To all our sorrows, and ere long, I doubt. [Ex. Lords.]

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repent.
 There is no sure foundation set on blood;
 No certain life achiev'd by others' death.

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood,
 That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
 So foul a sky clears not without a storm:
 Pour down thy weather:—How goes all in France?

Mess. From France to England.—Never such a power,

For any foreign preparation,
 Was levied in the body of a land!
 The copy of your speed is learn'd by them;
 For, when you should be told they do prepare,
 The tidings come, that they are all arriv'd.

K. John. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk?
 Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care,
 That such an army could be drawn in France,
 And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear
 Is stopp'd with dust; the first of April, died
 Your noble mother: And, as I hear, my lord,
 The lady Constance in a frenzy died
 Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue
 I idly heard; if true, or false, I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion!
 O, make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
 My discontented peers!—What! mother dead?
 How wildly then walks my estate in France!—
 Under whose conduct came those powers of France,
 That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Mess. Under the dauphin.

Enter the Bastard and PETER of Pomfret.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy

With these ill tidings.—Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.

Bast. But, if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin; for I was amaz'd
Under the tide: but now I breathe again
Aloft the flood; and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express.
But, as I travell'd hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied;
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams;
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear:
And here 's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels;
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.

K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with him; imprison him;
And on that day at noon, whereon, he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd:
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee.—O my gentle cousin,
[Exit HUBERT, with PETER.]

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full
of it:

Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury,
(With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire,)
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies:
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.

K. John. Nay, but make haste: the better foot
before.

O, let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels;
And fly like thought, from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. [Ex.]

K. John. Spoke like a spritful noble gentleman.
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege. [Exit.]

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say five moons were seen to-night:
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four, in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beldams, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously:
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths:
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks doth gripe the hearer's wrist;
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action,
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,

Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,)

Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embatteled and rank'd in Kent:
Another lean unwash'd artificer

Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with fears?

Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

Hub. None had, my lord! why, did you not
me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life;
And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humour than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven
earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation!
How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds Makes ill deeds done! Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind:
But, taking note of thy abhor'd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainy,
Apt, liable, to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head, or pause,

When I spake darkly what I purposed,
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid<sup>a</sup> me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me here
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in
But thou didst understand me by my signs,
And didst in signs again parley with sin;
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And, consequently, thy rude hand to act
The deed, which both our tongues held vile to name
Out of my sight, and never see me more!

My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought;
And you have slander'd nature in my form,
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O, haste thee to tell Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience!
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood

<sup>a</sup> As bid—elliptically for as to bid.

more hideous than thou art.
; but to my closet bring da, with all expedient haste :
heat slowly ; run more fast. [Exeunt.

III.—The same. Before the Castle.

Enter ARTHUR, on the Walls.

Wall is high ; and yet will I leap down :—
be pitiful, and hurt me not !— name, do know me ; if they did, semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
and yet I'll venture it.
and do not break my limbs,

and go, as die and stay. [Leaps down.
ele's spirit is in these stones :—
ny soul, and England keep my bones !
[Dies.

EMBROKE, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

I will meet him at Saint Edmund's-
; and we must embrace
er of the perilous time.
brought that letter from the cardinal ?
unt Melun, a noble lord of France ;
with me, of the dauphin's love,

er then set forward : for 't will be

Enter the Bastard.

<sup>a</sup>—before we meet.
<sup>b</sup>—You see—or have you only read, or must be so startled that you may doubt
it."

To the yet-unbegotten sin of times,
And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,
Exampl'd by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work :
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand ?—
We had a kind of light what would ensue :
It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand ;
The practice, and the purpose, of the king :—
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of revenge.

Pem., Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter HUBERT.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you :
Arthur doth live ; the king hath sent for you.

Sal. O, he is bold, and blushes not at death :—
Avaunt, thou hateful villain, get thee gone !

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law ? [Drawing his sword.

Bast. Your sword is bright, sir ; put it up again.

Sal. Not till I sheathe it in a murderer's skin.

Hub. Stand back, lord Salisbury, stand back, I say ;
By heaven, I think, my sword 's as sharp as yours :
I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence ;
Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your worth, your greatness, and nobility.

Big. Out, dunghill ! dar'st thou brave a nobleman ?

Hub. Not for my life : but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so ;
Yet, I am none : Whose tongue soe'er speaks false,
Not truly speaks ; who speaks not truly, lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury :

If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime ;
Or I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron,
That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge ?
Second a villain and a murderer ?

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this prince ?

Hub. 'T is not an hour since I left him well ;
I honour'd him, I lov'd him ; and will weep
My date of life out, for his sweet life's loss.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villainy is not without such rheum ;
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocency.
Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor
Th' uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house ;
For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Big. Away, toward Bury, to the dauphin there !

Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.

[Exeunt Lords.

Bast. Here 's a good world !—Knew you of this fair work ?

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,
Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.
Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what;
 Thou'rt damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so black,
 Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer:
 There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
 As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.
Hub. Upon my soul,—
Bast. If thou didst but consent
 To this most cruel act, do but despair,
 And, if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread
 That ever spider twisted from her womb
 Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be
 A beam to hang thee on; or, wouldst thou drown thyself,
 Put but a little water in a spoon,
 And it shall be, as all the ocean,
 Enough to stifle such a villain up.—
 I do suspect thee very grievously.
Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
 Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
 Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
 Let hell want pains enough to torture me!
 I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms.—
 I am amaz'd, methinks; and lose my way
 Among the thorns and dangers of this world.—
 How easy dost thou take all England up!
 From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
 The life, the right, and truth of all this realm
 Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
 To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth
 The unow'd interest of proud-swelling state.
 Now, for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
 Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
 And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
 Now powers from home, and discontents at home,
 Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
 As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
 The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
 Now happy he whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
 And follow me with speed; I'll to the king:
 A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
 And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exit

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in the Palace.Enter KING JOHN, PANDULPH, with the Crown, and Attendants.K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.Pand. Take again [Giving JOHN the crown.]
From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;And from his holiness use all your power
To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.
Our discontented counties<sup>a</sup> do revolt;
Our people quarrel with obedience;
Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
This inundation of mistemper'd humour
Rests by you only to be qualified.
Then pause not; for the present time 's so sick,
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
But, since you are a gentle convertite,<sup>b</sup>
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blustering land
On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms. [Exit.]K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet Say, that before Ascension-day at noon,
My crown I should give off? Even so I have:
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.Enter the Bastard.Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out
But Dover castle; London hath receiv'd,
Like a kind host, the dauphin and his powers:
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;<sup>a</sup> Counties—nobles.<sup>b</sup> Convertite—convert; reclaimed to the authority of "holy church."And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.K. John. Would not my lords return to me again After they heard young Arthur was alive?Bast. They found him dead, and cast into streets;An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did kill
Arthur.Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he know
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threat'ner, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.Away; and glister like the god of war,
When he intendeth to become the field:
Show boldness and aspiring confidence.What, shall they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
O, let it not be said!—Forage, and run
To meet displeasure further from the doors;
And grapple with him, ere he come so high.K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with me, and I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the dauphin.Bast. O inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present way then, with good courage; yet I know,

may well meet a prouder foe. [Exeunt.

II.—A Plain, near St. Edmund's-Bury.

ARMS, LEWIS, SALISBURY, MELUN, PREM-BROKE, BIGOT, and Soldiers.

Lord Melun, let this be copied out,
safe for our remembrance:
precedent to these lords again;
our fair order written down,
and we, perusing o'er these notes,
wherefore we took the sacrament,
our faiths firm and inviolable.
our sides it never shall be broken.
dauphin, albeit we swear
our seal, and unurg'd faith, our credings; yet, believe me, prince,
that that such a sore of time
a plaster by contemn'd revolt, an inveterate canker of one wound many. O, it grieves my soul,
I draw this metal from my side
our-maker; O, and there,
our noble rescue, and defence,
our name of Salisbury:
the infection of the time,
our health and physic of our right,
deal but with the very hand
our justice and confused wrong.—
our pity, O my grieved friends, our sons and children of this isle,
our so sad an hour as this:
our step after a stranger, march our noble bosom, and fill up our ranks, (I must withdraw and weep our out of this enforced cause.)
our gentry of a land remote,
our unacquainted colours here?
—O nation, that thou couldst remove!
our men's arms, who clippeth thee about,
our thee from the knowledge of thyself,
our thee unto a pagan shore;
our two Christian armies might combine our malice in a vein of league,
our spend* it so unneighbourly!
our while temper dost thou show in this;
our factions, wrestling in thy bosom,
our earthquake of nobility.
our while combat hast thou fought our expulsion and a brave respect!
our off this honourable dew,
our doth progress on thy cheeks:
our its melted at a lady's tears,
our binary foundation;
our vision of such manly drops,
our blown up by tempest of the soul,
our eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
our when the vaulty top of heaven our is o'er with burning meteors.
our know, renowned Salisbury,
our great heart heave away this storm:
our these waters to those baby eyes
our now the giant world enrag'd;
our is fortune other than at feasts,
our of blood, of mirth, of gossiping.
our is for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep our as of rich prosperity
our myself—so, nobles, shall you all,
our our sinews to the strength of mine.

* Spends is a prefix, in combination with spend; as in Lines of Windsor,— fair-like, to pinch the unclean knight.

Enter PANDULPH, attended.

And even there, methinks, an angel spake:
Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven;
And on our actions set the name of right,
With holy breath.

Pand. Hail, noble prince of France!
The next is this,—king John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy church,
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore thy threat'ning colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war;
That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not back.
I am too high-born to be propertied,
To be a secondary at control,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
To any sovereign state throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars
Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 't is far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this enterprise into my heart;
And come you now to tell me, John hath made
His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me?
I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And, now it is half-conquer'd, must I back
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne
What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action? is 't not I
That undergo this charge? who else but I,
And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business, and maintain this war?
Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
Vive le roy! as I have bank'd their towns?
Have I not here the best cards for the game,
To win this easy match play'd for a crown?
And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
No, no, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside, or inside, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified
As to my ample hope was promised
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest, and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.—

[Trumpet sounds

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
Let me have audience. I am sent to speak:
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The dauphin is too wilful opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties;
He flatly says he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth says well:—Now hear our English king,
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar'd; and reason too, he should:

* Bank'd their towns.—Probably sail'd along their banks.

This apish and unmannerly approach,
 This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
 This unhair'd<sup>a</sup> sauciness, and boyish troops,
 The king doth smile at; and is well prepar'd
 To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
 From out the circle of his territories.
 That hand, which had the strength, even at your door,
 To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;
 To dive, like buckets, in concealed wells;
 To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
 To lie, like pawns, lock'd up in chests and trunks;
 To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
 In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shake,
 Even at the crying of your nation's crow,
 Thinking this voice an armed Englishman;—
 Shall that victorious hand be feebled here,
 That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
 No: Know, the gallant monarch is in arms;
 And like an eagle o'er his airy towers,
 To souse annoyance that comes near his nest.—
 And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
 You bloody Neros, ripping up the womb
 Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
 For your own ladies, and pale-visag'd maids,
 Like Amazons, come tripping after drums;
 Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
 Their needs to lances, and their gentle hearts
 To fierce and bloody inclination.

Leo. There end thy brave,<sup>b</sup> and turn thy face in peace;

We grant thou canst outscold us: fare thee well;
 We hold our time too precious to be spent
 With such a brabblor.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Leo. We will attend to neither:—
 Strike up the drums; and let the tongue of war
 Plead for our interest, and our being here.

Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
 And so shall you, being beaten: Do but start
 An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
 And even at hand a drum is ready brae'd,
 That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
 Sound but another, and another shall,
 As loud as thine, rattle the welkin's ear,
 And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at hand
 (Not trusting to this halting legate here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
 Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
 A bare-ribb'd death, whose office is this day
 To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Leo. Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, dauphin, do not doubt.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter KING JOHN and HUBERT.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear: How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
 Lies heavy on me; O, my heart is sick!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge, Desires your majesty to leave the field,
 And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply,
 That was expected by the dauphin here,

<sup>a</sup> Unhair'd—unberried.      <sup>b</sup> Braze—bravado.

Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
 This news was brought to Richard but even now:
 The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
 And will not let me welcome this good news.
 Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight;
 Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. Another part of the war.

Enter SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French.
 If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
 In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, king John, sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter MELUN, wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English, you are bought and sold,
 Unthread the rude eye of rebellion,

And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet;

For, if the French be lords of this loud day,

He means to recompense the pains you take

By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworn,

And I with him, and many more with me,

Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's-Bury;

Even on that altar where we swore to you

Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,

Retaining but a quantity of life

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax

Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?

What in the world should make me now deceive,

Since I must lose the use of all deceit?

Why should I then be false; since it is true

That I must die here, and live hence by truth?

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,

He is forsworn if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east:

But even this night,—whose black contagious breath

Already smokes about the burning crest

Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,—

Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire;

Paying the fine of rated treachery,

Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,

If Lewis by your assistance win the day.

Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;

The love of him,—and this respect besides,

For that my grandsire was an Englishman,—

Awakes my conscience to confess all this.

In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence

From forth the noise and rumour of the field;

Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts

In peace, and part this body and my soul

With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee,—And beswore my word

But I do love the favour and the form

Of this most fair occasion, by the which

We will untread the steps of damned flight;

And, like a bated and retired flood,

Leaving our rankness and irregular course,

Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd,

And calmly run on in obedience.

Even to our ocean, to our great king John.

My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence.

For I do see the cruel pangs of death thine eye.—Away, my friends! New flight;

my weakness, that intends old right.

[Exeunt, leading off MELUN.]

ENE V.—The same. The French Camp.

Enter Lewis and his Train.

The sun of heaven, methought, was loth to set,
And made the western welkin blush,
The English measur'd backward their own ground,

retire: O, bravely came we off
With a volley of our needless shot,
With bloody toil, we bid good night;
And our tottering colours clearly up
The field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a Messenger.

Where is my prince, the dauphin?

Here:—What news?

The count Melun is slain; the English
lords,

emission, are again fallen off:
The supply, which you have wish'd so long,
Is away, and sunk on Goodwin sands.

Ah, foul shrewd news!—Beslurew thy very heart!

I think to be so sad to-night
Hath made me.—Who was he that said,
That he did fly an hour or two before
The doing night did part our weary powers?

Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.
Well; keep good quarter and good care tonight;

I shall not be up so soon as I,
In a fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.]

VI.—An open Place in the Neighbourhood of Swinstead Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and HUBERT, meeting.

Who 's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.

A friend.—What art thou?

Of the part of England.

Whither dost thou go?

What 's that to thee?

I demand of thine affairs,
As thou of mine!

Hubert, I think.

Thou hast a perfect thought:
On all hazards, well believe
My friend, that know'st my tongue so well:
Thou?

Who thou wilt: an if thou please,
I'll befriend me so much as to think
The way of the Plantagenets.

Unkind remembrance! thou, and eyeless
night,

Do me shame:—Brave soldier, pardon me,
I'll accent, breaking from thy tongue,
Escape the true acquaintance of mine ear.
Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?

Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night,
And out.

Brief, then; and what 's the news?

O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,
Sweet, comfortless, and horrible.

Show me the very wound of this ill news;
If woman, I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:
I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil; that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king
Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.

Bast. Who didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back,

And brought prince Henry in their company;
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power!

I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats, are taken by the tide,
These Lincoln washes have devoured them;
Myself, well mounted, hardly have escap'd.

Away, before! conduct me to the king;
I doubt he will be dead, or e'er I come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Orchard of Swinstead Abbey

Enter PRINCE HENRY, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

P. Hen. It is too late; the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house)
Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter PEMBROKE.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief,
That being brought into the open air
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.—
Doth he still rage? [Exit BIGOT.]

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! fierce extremes,
In their continuance, will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
Leaves them invisible;* and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies;
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves. 'T is strange, that death should sing.

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death;
And, from the organ-pipe of frailty, sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born
To set a form upon that indigest,<sup>b</sup>
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

*Re-enter BIGOT and Attendants, who bring in KING
JOHN in a Chair.*

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;

It would not out at windows, nor at doors.

There is so hot a summer in my bosom,

That all my bowels crumble up to dust:

I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen

Upon a parchment; and against this fire

Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd,—ill fare;—dead, forsook, cast off:

* Invisible—untook at, disregarded.

<sup>b</sup> Indigest—disordered, indigested, state of affairs.

And none of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you much,
I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my tears,
That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is hot.
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confined to tyrannize
On unreprieveable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scalded with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burnt;
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,
Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered;
And then all this thou seest is but a clod,
And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The dauphin is preparing hitherward;
Where, Heaven he knows how we shall answer him:
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood. [The KING dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.—

My liege! my lord!—But now a king,—now thus.

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay!

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind
To do the office for thee of revenge:
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powers? Show now your mended faiths;

And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land:
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought;
The dauphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems you know not then so much as we:
The cardinal Pandolph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the dauphin;
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal,
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.

Bast. Let it be so:—And you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be inter'd;
For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state and glory of the land!
To whom, with all submission, on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful services
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul, that would give thanks,

And knows not how to do it, but with tears.

Bast. O, let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.—

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself.
Now these her princes are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them: Nought shall make us
If England to itself do rest but true. [Exeunt]

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE first edition was published in 1597, under the title of 'The Tragedy of King Richard the Second.' Four editions in quarto appeared before the folio of 1623. But all that part of the fourth act in which Richard is introduced to make the surrender of his crown, comprising one hundred and fifty-four lines, was never printed in the age of Elizabeth. The quarto of 1608 first gives this scene. That quarto is, with very few exceptions, the text of the play as it now stands.

We scarcely know how to approach this drama, even for the purpose of a few remarks upon its characteristics. We are almost afraid to trust our own admiration when we turn to the cold criticism by which opinion in this country has been wont to be governed. We have been told that it cannot "be said much to affect the passions or enlarge the understanding." * It may be so. And yet, we think, it might somewhat "affect the passions,"—for "gorgeous tragedy" hath here put on her "scepter'd pall," and if she bring not Terror in her train, Pity, at least, claims the sad story for her own. And yet it may somewhat "enlarge the understanding,"—for, though it abound not in those sententious moralities which may fitly adorn "a theme at school," it lays bare more than one human bosom with a most searching anatomy; and, in the moral and intellectual strength and weakness of humanity, which it discloses with as much precision as the scalpel reveals to the student of our physical nature the symptoms of health or disease, may we read the proximate and final causes of this world's success or loss, safety or danger, honour or disgrace, elevation or ruin. And then, moreover, the profound truths which, half-hidden to the careless reader, are to be drawn out from this drama, are contained in such a splendid frame-work of the picturesque and the poetical, that the setting of the jewel almost distracts our attention from the jewel itself. We are here plunged into the midst of the fierce passions and the gorgeous pageantries of the antique time. We not only enter the halls and galleries, where is hung "Armoury of the invincible knights of old,"

but we see the beaver closed, and the spear in rest;—under those cuirasses are hearts knocking against the steel with almost more than mortal rage;—the banners wave, the trumpet sounds—heralds and marshals are ready to salute the victor—but the absolute king casts down his warder, and the anticipated triumph of one proud champion must end in the unmerited disgrace of both. The transition is easy from the tourney to the battle-field. A nation must bleed that a subject may be avenged. A crown is to be played for, though

" Tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin and kind with kind confound."
The luxurious lord

" That every day under his household roof Did keep ten thousand men," perishes in a dungeon;—the crafty usurper sits upon his throne, but it is undermined by the hatreds even those who placed him on it. Here is, indeed, "a kingdom for a stage." And has the greatest of poets dealt with such a subject without affecting the passions, enlarging the understanding? Away with this. We will trust our own admiration.

It is the wonderful subjection of the poetical power to the higher law of truth—to the poetical truth, which is the highest truth, comprehending and expounding the historical truth—which must furnish the clue to the proper understanding of the drama of 'Richard II.' appears to us that, when the poet first undertook

" to open
The purple testament of bleeding war,"— to unfold the roll of the causes and consequences that usurpation of the house of Lancaster which plunged three or four generations of Englishmen in blood and misery—he approaches the subject with an inflexible purpose as totally removed as it was possible to be from the levity of a partisan. There was to be weighed in one scale the follies, the weaknesses, the crimes of Richard—the injuries of Bolingbroke—the insults which the capricious despotism of the king had heaped upon his nobles—the exactions under which the people groaned—the real merits and the popular attributes of him who came to redress and to repair. The other scale were to be placed the afflictions of false greatness—the revenge and treachery by which the crown was produced—the heartburnings and suspicious which accompany every great revolution—the struggles of power which ensue when the established and legitimate authority is thrust from its seat.—All these phases, personal and political, of a deposition and an usurpation, Shakspeare has exhibited with marvellous impartiality.

It is in the same lofty spirit of impartiality which governs the general sentiments of this drama that Shakspeare has conceived the mixed character of Richard II. If we compare every account, we must say that Richard II. of Shakspeare is rigidly the true Richard II. The poet is the truest historian in all that belongs to the higher attributes of history. But with this surprising dramatic truth in the 'Richard II.,' perhaps, after all, the most wonderful thing in the whole play—is that which makes it so exclusively and entirely Shakspearean—is the evolvment of the truth under the poet's form. The character of Richard, especially, is almost subordinated to the poetical conception of it—to something higher than the historical propriety, yet including all that historical propriety, and calling it forth with the most striking aspects. All the vacillations and weaknesses of the king, in the hands of an artist like Shakspeare, are reproduced with the most natural and vivid colours; so as to display their own characteristic effects, in combination with the principle of poetic beauty, which carries them into a higher region than the perfect command over the elements of strong individualization could alone produce.

SCENE,—DISPERSEDLY IN ENGLAND AND WALES.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

RICHARD, attended; JOHN OF GAUNT, and other Nobles, with him.

A. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,

According to thy oath and band,<sup>a</sup>
Father Henry Hereford,<sup>b</sup> thy bold son;
To make good the boisterous late appeal,
Whom our leisure would not let us hear,
The Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
I have, my liege.

K. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him,
To seal the duke on ancient malice;
Or, as a good subject should,
To show the known ground of treachery in him?

A. As near as I could sift him on that argument,

<sup>a</sup> Band and bond are each the past participle passive of bind; and hence the band, that by which a thing is bound, and the bond, that by which one is constrained, are of the same thing.

<sup>b</sup> In the old copies this title is invariably spelt Herdford. In Hardyng's 'Chronicle' the word occurs Herford or Harford. It is constantly Herford, as in Daniel's 'Civile Warres.'

On some apparent danger seen in him,
Aim'd at your highness,—no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence; face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
The accuser, and the accused, freely speak:—

[Exeunt some Attendants
High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants, with BOLINGBROKE and NORFOLK.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Nor. Each day still better other's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,

As well appeareth by the cause you come:<sup>a</sup>
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.—

Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

<sup>a</sup> You come. On which you come; or you come on.

Boling. First, (Heaven be the record to my speech!)

In the devotion of a subject's love,
Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appellat to this princely presence.
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.
Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant;
Too good to be so, and too bad to live;
Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish (so please my sovereign), ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal:
'T is not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say:
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech;
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds;
And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable.<sup>a</sup>
Wherever Englishman durst set his foot.
Meantime, let this defend my loyalty,—
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my
gage,

Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;
And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop;
By that, and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.

Nor. I take it up; and by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And, when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?

It must be great, that can inherit us<sup>b</sup>
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Boling. Look, what I said my life shall prove it true;—
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles,
In name of lendings, for your highness' soldiers;
The which he hath detain'd for lewd<sup>c</sup> employments,
Like a false traitor and injurious villain.
Besides I say, and will in battle prove,—
Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge

<sup>a</sup> Inhabitable—uninhabitable, uninhabitable. Jonson also uses the word in this sense, strictly according to its Latin derivation.

<sup>b</sup> Inherit us. To inherit was not only used in the sense of to inherit as an heir, but in that of to receive generally. It is here used for to cause to receive.

<sup>c</sup> Lewd, in its early signification, means misled, deluded; and thence it came to stand, as here, for wicked.

That ever was survey'd by English eye,—
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this land,
Fetch'd from false Mowbray their first head and Further I say,—and further will maintain
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,—
That he did plot the duke of Gloster's death;
Suggest<sup>a</sup> his soon-believing adversaries;
And, consequently, like a traitor coward, Sluc'd out his innocent soul through streams of Whica blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, bate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and Were he my brother, nay, our kingdom's heir,
(As he is but my father's brother's son,)
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul:
He is our subject, Mowbray; so art thou;
Free speech, and fearless, I to thee allow.

Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais
Disbur's'd I duly to his highness' soldiers:
The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen:
Now swallow down that lie.—For Gloster's death,
I slew him not; but to my own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.

For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul:
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it; and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: As for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor:
Which in myself I boldly will defend;
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom:
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be rid
me;

Let's purge this cholera without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say, this is no month to bleed.
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, you your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my son
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his

Gaunt. When, Harry, I shall

<sup>a</sup> Suggest—prompt.

<sup>b</sup> Wher, so used, is an expression of impatience.

Norfolk, throw down, we bid; there is no shalt command, but not my shame:

luty owes; but my fair name,
sath,) that lives upon my grave, mour's use thou shalt not have.
d, impeach'd, and baffled here;
soul with slander's venom'd spear;
balm can cure, but his heart-blood
'd this poison.

Rage must be withstood:
age:—Lions make leopards tame.<sup>b</sup> but not change his spots: take but my ne,
my gage. My dear dear lord, asure mortal times afford
ntation; that away,
ided loam, or painted clay,
en-times-harr'd-up chest
t in a loyal breast.

is my life; both grow in one;
from me, and my life is done:
y liege, mine honour let me try;
and for that will I die.
kain, throw down your gage; do you rest-fallen in my father's sight?

nize honour with such feeble wrong,

GAUNT and DUCHESS OF GLOSTER.

is! the part I had in Gloster's blood
icid me than your exclains, to the old copies. According to the custom in e of changing from the singular to the plural the plural to the singular, the alteration to copies was scarcely called for. But in this case the very text of Scripture—Jer. xlii. 23.

make you in concord—cause you to be at one.
gaunt—point out—exhibit—show by a token.
ed, &c. My consanguinity to Gloster.

Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,—
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all vaded,<sup>a</sup>
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ab, Gaunt! his blood was thine; that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man; and though thou liv'st and breath'st,
Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men we entitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to 'venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt. Heaven's is the quarrel; for heaven's substitute,

His deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death: the which if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?<sup>b</sup>

Gaunt. To heaven, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight:
O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast!

Or, if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A caitiff<sup>c</sup> recreant to my cousin Hereford!
Farewell, old Gaunt; thy sometimes brother's wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell: I must to Coventry:
As much good stay with thee, as go with me!

Duch. Yet one word more;—Grief boundeth where it falls,

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun;
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo, this is all:—Nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him—O, what?—
With all good speed at Plashy visit me.
Alack, and what shall good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones?
And what cheer there for welcome but my groans?
Therefore commend me; let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwells everywhere:
Desolate, desolate, will I hence, and die;
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Faded. Fade seems to have a stronger sense than to fade, although fade was often written vade.

<sup>c</sup> Caitiff. The original meaning of this word was, a prisoner. As the captive anciently became a slave, the word gradually came to indicate a man in a servile condition—a mean creature—a dishonest person.

SCENE III.—Open Space near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Heralds, &c., attending.

Enter the LORD MARSHAL and AUWERLE.

Mar. My lord Auwerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?

Aum. Yea, at all points; and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

Aum. Why, then the champions are prepar'd, and stay

For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish of trumpets. Enter KING RICHARD, who takes his seat on his throne; GAUNT, and several Noblemen, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Then enter NORFOLK, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion

The cause of his arrival here in arms:

Ask him his name; and orderly proceed

To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name and the king's, say who thou art,

And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms:

Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrel:

Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thine oath;

As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk;

Who hither come engaged by my oath,

(Which heaven defend a knight should violate!)

Both to defend my loyalty and truth

To God, my king, and his succeeding issue,

Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me;

And, by the grace of God, and this mine arm,

To prove him, in defending of myself,

A traitor to my God, my king, and me:

And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

[He takes his seat.]

Trumpet sounds. Enter BOLINGBROKE, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,

Both who he is, and why he cometh hither

Thus plated in habiliments of war;

And formally according to our law

Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore com'st thou hither,

Before king Richard, in his royal lists?

Against whom comest thou? and what's thy quarrel?

Speak like a true knight, so defend thee heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,

Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,

To prove, by heaven's grace, and my body's valour,

In lists, on Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk,

That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,

To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me;

And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold,

Or daring-hardy, as to touch the lists,

Except the marshal, and such officers

Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's hand,

And bow my knee before his majesty:

For Mowbray and myself are like two men

That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;

Then let us take a ceremonious leave,

And loving farewell, of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.

Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,

So be thy fortune in this royal fight!

Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed,

Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O, let no noble eye profane a tear

For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear;

As confident as is the falcon's flight

Against a bird do I with Mowbray fight.—

My loving lord, [to LORD MARSHAL] I take my leave of you;

Of you, my noble cousin, lord Auwerle:—

Not sick, although I have to do with death;

But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.

Lo, as at English feasts, so I regret

The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet:

O thou, the earthly author of my blood,— [To GAUNT]

Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,

Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up

To reach at victory above my head,—

And proof unto mine armour with thy prayers;

And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,

That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,<sup>a</sup>

And furnish new the name of John of Gaunt,

Even in the lusty 'haviour of his son.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosper

Be swift like lightning in the execution;

And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,

Fall like amazing thunder on the casque

Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:

Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.

Boling. Mine innocency, and saint George to thee
[He takes his seat.]

Nor. [Rising.] However heaven, or fortune, cast lot,

There lives, or dies, true to king Richard's throne,

A loyal, just, and upright gentleman:

Never did captive with a freer heart

Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace

His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement,

More than my dancing soul doth celebrate

This feast of battle with mine adversary.

Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,

Take from my mouth the wish of happy years:

As gentle and as jocund, as to jest,<sup>b</sup>

Go I to fight; Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I espy

Virtue with valour couched in thine eye.

Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

[The KING and the Lords return to their seats.]

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, Receive thy lance; and God defend thy right!

Boling. [Rising.] Strong as a tower in hope, I cry
amen.

Mar. Go bear this lance [to an Officer] to Thomas duke of Norfolk.

1 Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby

Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,

On pain to be found false and recreant,

To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,

A traitor to his God, his king, and him,

And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2 Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke
Norfolk,

On pain to be found false and recreant,

Both to defend himself, and to approve

Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,

To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;

Courageously, and with a free desire,

Attending but the signal to begin.

<sup>a</sup> Waxen coat. Mowbray's waxen coat, into which Bolingbroke's lance's point may enter, is his frail and penetrable coat or armour.

<sup>b</sup> To jest, in the sense in which Mowbray here uses it, to play a part in a mask.

Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combatants.

[A charge sounded.

king hath thrown his warder<sup>a</sup> down.

Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,
return back to their chairs again:

with us: and let the trumpets sound, return these dukes what we decree.—

Your will be done: This must my comfort be,

that warms you here, shall shine on me;

—the truncheon, or staff of command.

the manner in which Shakspeare uses the word presents a difficulty to the modern reader. Twenty-three times we have the "dear blood" of the kingdom of blood. We have now the "dear exile" of Norfolk's exile. To dear, the old English verb, from

dear-ian, is to hurt,—to do mischief; and thence meaning, which hurteth, deareth, or maketh dear. In our dear exile we have the primitive meaning of to hurt in the other expression, dear blood, we have the meaning. One of the most painful consequences of

on a large scale, such as the mischief of a bad season,

What was spared was thence called dear—precious most coveted—highly prized.

<sup>c</sup>—in the sense of complaining.

Nor. Then thus I turn me from my country's
light,

To dwell in solemn shades of endless night. [Retiring.

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;

Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven,

(Our part therein we banish with yourselves,)

To keep the oath that we administer:—

You never shall (so help you truth and heaven!)

Embrace each other's love in banishment;

Nor ever look upon each other's face;

Nor ever write, regret, or reconcile

This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;

Nor ever by advised purpose meet

To plot, contrive, or complot any ill

'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk,—so far as to mine enemy;—

By this time, had the king permitted us,

One of our souls had wander'd in the air,

Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,

As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:

Confess thy treasons ere thou fly this realm;

Since thou hast far to go, bear not along

The clogging burthen of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor

My name be blotted from the book of life,

And I from heaven banish'd as from hence!

But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know;

And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.

Farewell, my liege;—Now no way can I stray;

Save back to England; all the world's my way. [Exit.

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes

I see thy griev'd heart; thy sad aspect

Hath from the number of his banish'd years

Pluck'd four away:—Six frozen winters spent,

Return [to Boling.] with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!

Four lagging winters, and four wanton springs

End in a word: Such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that, in regard of me,

He shortens four years of my son's exile;

But little vantage shall I reap thereby;

For ere the six years that he hath to spend

Can change their moons, and bring their times about,

My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,

Shall be extinct with age and endless night;

My inch of taper will be burnt and done,

And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give:

Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,

And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:

Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,

But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;

Thy word is current with him for my death:

But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,

Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave;

Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lower?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour

You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather

You would have bid me argue like a father:

[O, had it been a stranger, not my child,

To smooth his fault I should have been more mild:

A partial slander sought I to avoid,

And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.]

Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,

I was too strict, to make mine own away;

But you gave leave to mine unwilling tongue,

Against my will, to do myself this wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell :—and, uncle, bid him so ;
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exeunt K. RICHARD and Train.

Aum. Cousin, farewell : what presence must not know,
From where you do remain, let paper show.

Mar. My lord, no leave take I ; for I will rife
As far as land will let me by your side.

Gaunt. O, to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends ?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters ? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy ; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps

Esteem a foil,<sup>a</sup> wherein thou art to set

The precious jewel of thy home-return.

[Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make

Will but remember me, what a deal of world

I wander from the jewels that I love.

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship

To foreign passages ; and in the end,

Having my freedom, boast of nothing else

But that I was a journeyman to grief ?

Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits

Are to a wise man ports and happy havens :

Teach thy necessity to reason thus ;

There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not, the king did banish thee ;

But thou the king : Woe doth the heavier sit,

Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.

Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,

And not, the king exil'd thee : or suppose,

Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,

And thou art flying to a fresher clime.

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it

To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st.

Suppose the singing birds, musicians ;

The grass whereon thou tread'st, the presence strew'd ;

The flowers, fair ladies ; and thy steps, no more

Than a delightful measure or a dance :

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite

The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.]

Boling. O, who can hold a fire in his hand,

By thinking on the frosty Caucasus ?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,

By bare imagination of a feast ?

Or wallow naked in December snow,

By thinking on fantastic summer's heat ?

O, no ! the apprehension of the good

Gives but the greater feeling to the worse :

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more,

Than when it bites but lanceth not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I 'll bring thee on thy way :

Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell ; sweet soil, adieu ;

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet !

Where'er I wander, boast of this I can,

Though banish'd, yet a true-born Englishman. [Ex.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter KING RICHARD, BAGOT, and GREEN ;

AUMERLE following.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle,

How far brought you high Hereford on his way ?

<sup>a</sup> Foil or foyle, the thin plate or leaf of metal used in setting jewellery.

Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him
But to the next highway, and there I left him.

K. Rich. And, say, what store of parting tears shed ?

Aum. Faith, none for me,<sup>a</sup> except the north wind,

Which then blew bitterly against our face,

Awak'd the sleepy rheum ; and so, by chance,

Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

K. Rich. What said our cousin when you part with him ?

Aum. Farewell :

And, for my heart disdain'd that my tongue

Should so profane the word, that taught me craft

To counterfeit oppression of such grief,

That word seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave.

Marry, would the word farewell have lengthen'd his

And added years to his short banishment,

He should have had a volume of farewells ;

But, since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin ; but 't is do

When time shall call him home from banishment,

Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.

Ourselves and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,

Observ'd his courtship to the common people :—

How he did seem to dive into their hearts,

With humble and familiar courtesy ;

What reverence he did throw away on slaves ;

Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles,

And patient underhearing of his fortune,

As 't were to banish their affects with him.

Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench ;

A brace of draymen bid—God speed him well,

And had the tribute of his supple knee,

With—Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends

As were our England in reversion his,

And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone ; and with him go thoughts.

Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland ;

Expedient<sup>b</sup> manage must be made, my liege,

Ere further leisure yield them further means,

For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourselves in person to this war.

And, for our coffers, with too great a court,

And liberal largess, are grown somewhat light,

We are enforc'd to farm our royal realm ;

The revenue whereof shall furnish us

For our affairs in hand : If that come short,

Our substitute at home shall have blank charters :

Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich

They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,

And send them after to supply our wants ;

For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter BUSHY.

Bushy, what news ?

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick,
lord ;

Suddenly taken ; and hath sent post haste,

To entreat your majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he ?

Bushy. At Ely-house.

K. Rich. Now put it, heaven, in his physician's mind,

To help him to his grave immediately !

The lining of his coffers shall make coats

To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.

Come, gentlemen, let 's all go visit him :

Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late !

[Exit]

<sup>a</sup> None for me—none on my part.

<sup>b</sup> Expedient—prompt—suitable—disengaged from engagements.

ACT II.

E. L.—Lanlon. A Room in Ely House.

On a couch; the Duke of York, and others standing by him.

Will the king come? that I may breathe my last and counsel to his unsta'd youth.

Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath;

vain comes counsel to his ear.

O, but they say, the tongues of dying men

Attention, like deep harmony;

words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain;

they breathe truth, that breathe their words in pain.

So more must say, is listen'd more of whom youth and ease have taught to glose;

men's ends mark'd, than their lives before;

the singing sun, and music at the close,

(the taste of sweets is sweetest,) last,

membrance, more than things long past;

Richard my life's counsel would not hear,

and a sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

So; it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds, of his state: then, there are found metres; to whose venom sound of youth doth always listen:

fashions in proud Italy;

honours still our tardy apish nation

draw in base imitation.

And the world thrust forth a vanity,

and now, there 's no respect how vile,

is quickly buzz'd into his ears?

So late comes counsel to be heard,

and doth mutiny with wit's regard.

And him, whose way himself will choose;

and thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

methinks I am a prophet new inspir'd;

and expiring, do foretell of him:

and cease blaze of riot cannot last;

and fires soon burn out themselves;

and ceases last long, but sudden storms are short;

and times, that spurs too fast betimes;

and feeding food doth choke the feeder:

and ty, insatiate cormorant,

and means, soon preys upon itself.

and throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,

and of majesty, this seat of Mars,

and Eden, demi-paradise;

and is, built by nature for herself,

and bastion* and the band of war;

and breed of men, this little world;

and as stone set in the silver sea,

and as it in the office of a wall,

and as defensive to a house,

and as envy of less happier lands;

and did plot, this earth, this realm, this England,

and this reeking womb of royal kings,

and their breed, and famous for their birth,

and for their deeds as far from home,

and (in service, and true chivalry,) and sepulchre in stubborn Jewry is.

* All the ancient copies read infestation. Farmer on substitution of infestation, an abbreviation of infestation which appears to have designated those violent incur-and sion—those annoying, joy-depriving (infestus)

and which an unprotected frontier is peculiarly exposed.

and, being a word of which there can be no doubt of and its to be preferred, if we can be content to receive and a limited sense—that the sea in some sort kept out and though not absolutely.

Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's son:

This land of such dear souls, this dear dear land,

Dear for her reputation through the world,

Is now leas'd out, (I die pronouncing it,)

Like to a tenement, or pelting* a farm:

England, bound in with the triumphant sea,

Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege

Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,

With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds;

That England, that was wont to conquer others,

Hath made a shameful conquest of itself:

Ah, would the scandal vanish with my life,

How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter KING RICHARD and QUEEN; AUMERLE, BUSHY, GREEN, BAGOT, ROSS, and WILLOUGHBY.

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;

For young hot colts, being rag'd, do rage the more.

Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?

K. Rich. What comfort, man? How is't with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. O, how that name befits my composition!

Old Gaunt, indeed; and gaunt in being old:

Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;

And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?

For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;

Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:

The pleasure that some fathers feed upon

Is my strict fast,—I mean my children's looks;

And, therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt;

Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,

Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt. No, misery makes sport to mock itself:

Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,

I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.

K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those that live?

Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.

K. Rich. Thou, now a dying, say'st thou flatterest me.

Gaunt. Oh! no; thou diest, though I the sicker be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt. Now, He that made me knows I see thee ill;

Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.

Thy death-bed is no lesser than the land

Wherein thou liest in reputation sick:

And thou, too careless patient as thou art,

Committ'st thy anointed body to the cure

Of those physicians that first wounded thee.

A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,

Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;

And yet, incaged in so small a verge,

The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.

O, had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,

Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,

From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,

Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,

Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,

It were a shame to let this land by lease:

But, for thy world, enjoying but this land,

Is it not more than shame to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou, and not king:

Thy state of law is bondsman to the law;

And—

* Pelting invariably means something petty—of little worth.

K. Rich. And thou a lunatic lean-witted fool, Presuming on an ague's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek; chasing the royal blood,
With fury, from his native residence.
Now by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue, that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy unreverend shoulders.

Gaunt. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
For that I was his father Edward's son;
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd:
My brother Gloster, plain well-meaning soul,
(Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls!)
May be a precedent and witness good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood:
Join with the present sickness that I have;
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long wither'd flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee!—
These words hereafter thy tormentors be!—
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
Love they to live, that love and honour have.

[Exit, borne out by his Attendants.]

K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sullens have;
For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

York. I do beseech your majesty, impute his words
To wayward sickness and age in him:
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry duke of Hereford, were he here.

K. Rich. Right; you say true: as Hereford's love, so his:
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.

K. Rich. What says he?

North. Nay, nothing; all is said:
His tongue is now a stringless instrument;
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he;
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be:
So much for that. Now for our Irish wars:
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom, where no venom else,
But only they, hath privilege to live.
And, for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance, we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.

York. How long shall I be patient? Ah, how long Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloster's death, nor Hereford's banishment,
Nor Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first;
In war, was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace, was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman:
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours;
But when he frown'd it was against the French,
And not against his friends; his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred's blood,

But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O, Richard, York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
York. O, my liege,

Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
His charters, and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
Be not thyself, for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's right,
Call in his letters-patents that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will; we seize into hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

York. I'll not be by the while: My liege,
well:

What will ensue hereof there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire straight Bid him repair to us to Ely-house
To see this business: To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 't is time, I trow;
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England.
For he is just, and always lov'd us well.
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

[Exit KING, QUEEN, BUSHY, and GREEN, and BAGOT.]

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.
Willo. Barely in title, not in revenue.

North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.
Ross. My heart is great; but it must break silence,

Ere 't be disburthen'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him speak more

That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Willo. Tends that thou 'dst speak to the duke Hereford?

If it be so, out with it boldly, man;
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him;
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

North. Now, afore heaven, 't is shame such are borne,

In him a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The commons hath he pull'd with great taxes,

lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin'd quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
 And daily new exactions are devis'd—benevolences, and I wot not what;
 ' God's name, doth become of this?
 Wars have not wasted it, for warr'd he hath
 it,

yielded upon compromise
 his ancestors achiev'd with blows:
 he spent in peace than they in wars.
 he earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.
 he king's gown bankrupt, like a broken man.
 leproach and dissolution hangeth over him.
 hath not money for these Irish wars,
 ous taxations notwithstanding,
 robbing of the banish'd duke.

II.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN, BUSHY, and BAGOT.

Madam, your majesty is too much sad:
 'd, when you parted with the king,
 e life-harming heaviness,
 in a cheerful disposition.
 To please the king, I did; to please myself,
 e it; yet I know no cause
 old welcome such a guest as grief,

et. To strike sail is to lower sail.
 To limp a hawk was artificially to supply such as were dropped or forced out by accident. To appear—to insert.

Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
 As my sweet Richard: Yet, again, methinks,
 Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb,
 Is coming towards me; and my inward soul
 With nothing trembles: at something it grieves
 More than with parting from my lord the king.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,

Which show like grief itself, but are not so:
 For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears,
 Divides one thing entire to many objects,
 Like perspectives, which, rightly gaz'd upon,
 Show nothing but confusion,—ey'd awry,
 Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,
 Looking awry upon your lord's departure,
 Finds shapes of griefs more than himself to wail;
 Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows
 Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious queen,
 More than your lord's departure weep not; more 's not seen:

Or if it be, 't is with false sorrow's eye,
 Which, for things true, weeps things imaginary.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
 Persuades me it is otherwise: Howe'er it be,
 I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad,
 As—though, in thinking, on no thought I think—
 Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'T is nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen. 'T is nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd
 From some forefather grief; mine is not so;
 For nothing hath begot my something grief;
 Or something hath the nothing that I grieve;
 'T is in reversion that I do possess;
 But what it is, that is not yet known; what
 I cannot name; 't is nameless woe, I wot.

Enter GREEN.

Green. Heaven save your majesty!—and well met,
 gentlemen,

I hope the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hop'st thou so? 't is better hope he is;
 For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope;
 Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipp'd?

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power,

And driven into despair an enemy's hope,
 Who strongly hath set footing in this land:
 The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself,
 And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd
 At Ravenspurge.

Queen. Now God in heaven forbid!

Green. O, madam, 't is too true; and that is worse,—
 The lord Northumberland, his young son Henry Percy
 The lords of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
 With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland

And the rest of the revolting faction traitors?

Green. We have: whereupon the earl of Worcester
 Hath broke his staff, resign'd his stewardship,
 And all the household servants fled with him
 To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife of my woe,
 And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir:
 Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy;
 And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother,
 Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow, join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me!

I will despair, and be at enmity
 With cozening hope; he is a flatterer,
 A parasite, a keeper-back of death,
 Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
 Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter YORK.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck;
O, full of careful business are his looks!
Uncle,

For heaven's sake, speak comfortable words.

YORK. [Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:]
Comfort 's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives, but crosses, care, and grief.
Your husband he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:
Here am I left to underprop his land;
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself:
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.

YORK. He was?—Why, so!—go all which way it will!
The nobles they are fled, the commons they are cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—
Sirrah, get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster;—
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound:
Hold, take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:
To-day, I came by, and called there;—
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

YORK. What is it, knave?

Serv. An hour before I came, the duchess died.

YORK. Heaven for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!
I know not what to do:—I would to heaven,
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it,)
The king had cut off my head with my brother's.
What, are there posts despatch'd for Ireland?—
How shall we do for money for these wars?—
Come, sister,—cousin, I would say: pray, pardon me.— Go, fellow, [to the Servant] get thee home, provide some carts,

And bring away the armour that is there.— [Exit Serv.
Gentlemen, will you go muster men? if I know
How, or which way, to order these affairs,
Thus disorderly thrust into my hands,
Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen;—
The one is my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend; the other again
Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.
Well, somewhat we must do.—Come, cousin, I'll Dispose of you:—Gentlemen, go muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Berkley castle.
I should to Plashy too;—
But time will not permit:—All is uneven,
And everything is left at six and seven.

[Exit YORK and QUEEN.]

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,
But none returns. For us to levy power,
Proportionable to the enemy,
Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love,
Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that 's the wavering commons; for their love

Lies in their purses; and whose empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,
Because we have been ever near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle;

The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you: for little office
Will the hateful commons perform for us;

Except, like curs, to tear us all in pieces.—
Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No; I will to Ireland to his majesty
Farewell: if heart's presages be not vain,
We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That 's as York thrives to beat he broke.

Green. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbring sands, and drinking oceans dry
Where one on his side fights, thousands will

Bushy. Farewell at once; for once, for all

Green. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never.

SCENE III.—The Wilds in Gloster

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBERLAND
Forecs.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley
North. Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in Glostershire.

These high wild hills, and rough uneven way
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome
And yet our fair discourse hath been as sugary
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

But, I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspur to Cotswold will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company
Which, I protest, hath very much beguiled
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess:
And hope to joy, is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short; as mine here
By sight of what I have, your noble company

Boling. Of much less value is my company
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter HARRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever
Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?
Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsook
Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd
The household of the king.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd when we last spake together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspur,
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me over by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there
Then with direction to repair to Ravenspur.

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford?

Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not
Which ne'er I did remember: to my knowledge
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now;
duke.

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembring my good friends;
And as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart this covenant makes, my hand this

* To joy is here used as a verb.

far is it to Berkley? And what stir York there, with his men of war?
stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees,
see hundred men, as I have heard:
the lords of York, Berkley, and Seyme and noble estimate.

Enter ROSS and WILLOUGHBY.

come the lords of Ross and Willoughby, erring, fiery-red with haste.
come, my lords: I wot your love puror; all my treasury

t thanks, which, more enrich'd, ve and labour's recompense.
presence makes us rich, most noble lord.
far surmounts our labour to attain it.
more thanks, th' exchequer of the poor;
infant fortune comes to years,
society. But who comes here?

Enter BERKLEY.

my lord of Berkley, as I guess.
rd of Hereford, my message is to you.
lord, my answer is—to Lancaster:<sup>a</sup>
e to seek that name in England:
d that title in your tongue,
reply to aught you say.
ke me not, my lord; 't is not my meaning e of your honour out:—
d, I come, (what lord you will,) gracious regent of this land, sk; to know what pricks you on age of the absent time, native peace with self-born arms.

Enter YORK, attended.

all not need transport my words by you;
grace in person.—My noble uncle!

[Kneels. me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
deceivable and false.
gracious uncle!
ut!

face, nor uncle me no uncle,
's uncle; and that word, grace,
as mouth, is but profane.
e banish'd and forbidden legs
such a dust of England's ground?

why, why have they dar'd to march upon her peaceful bosom,
a-fac'd villages with war,
of despised arms?<sup>b</sup> cause the anointed king is hence?

ry, the king is left behind,
al bosom lies his power.
e the lord of such hot youth
Gaunt, thy father, and myself, lack Prince, that young Mars of men,
ranks of many thousand French,
sickly should this arm of mine,
o the palsy, chastise thee,
correction to thy fault!

gracious uncle, let me know my fault;
tices stands it, and wherein?
s in condition of the worst degree,—
tion, and detested treason:
nish'd man, and here art come,
servation of thy time,
ms against thy sovereign.

Enter. I do not answer to the name of Hereford—
in the name of Lancaster.
Exeunt. The ornament of arms which we despise.

Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford;
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.

And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my father, for methinks in you
I see old Gaunt alive: O, then, my father!
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wand'ring vagabond; my rights and royalties
Pluck'd from my arms perforce, and given away
To upstart unthrifths? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be king of England,
It must be granted I am duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman;
Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am denied to sue my livery here,
And yet my letters-patents give me leave:
My father's goods are all distrain'd, and sold;
And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law: Attorneys are denied me;
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent.

North. The noble duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your grace upon, to do him right.

Will. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you this,—
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right:
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver, and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrongs,—it may not be;
And you that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.

North. The noble duke hath sworn his coming is
But for his own: and, for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms;
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left:
But, if I could, by Him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But, since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well;—
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept,
But we must win your grace to go with us
To Bristol castle; which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed, and pluck away.

York. It may be I will go with you:—but yet I'll
pause;

For I am loth to break our country's laws.
Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress are now with me past care. [Ex.

SCENE IV.—A Camp in Wales.

Enter SALISBURY and a Captain.

Cap. My lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
Therefore we will disperse ourselves: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman;
The king reposeth all his confidence
In thee.

Cap. 'T is thought the king is dead; we will not stay.
The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd,

And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven ;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd propheta whisper fearful change ;
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,—
The one, in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other, to enjoy by rage and war :
These signs forerun the death [or fall] of kings.—
Farewell ; our countrymen are gone and fled,

As well assur'd Richard their king is dead.
[
Sal. Ah, Richard ! with the eyes of heavy mist
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament !
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest ;
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes ;
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bolingbroke's Camp at Bristol.

Enter BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND,
PERCY, WILLOUGHBY, ROSS : Officers behind, with BUSHY and GREEN, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.—
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls,
(Since presently your souls must part your bodies,)
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 't were no charity : yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here, in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigur'd clean.
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him ;
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself—a prince, by fortune of my birth ;
Near to the king in blood ; and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,—
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment :
While you have fed upon my seignories,
Dispark'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods ;
From mine own windows torn my household coat,
Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign—
Save men's opinions, and my living blood—
To show the world I am a gentleman.
This, and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemns you to the death :—See them deliver'd over
To execution and the hand of death.

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
Than Bolingbroke to England. [Lords, farewell.]

Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,

And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them despatch'd.

[Ex. NORTHUMBERLAND and others, with Prisoners.
Uncle, you say, the queen is at your house :
For heaven's sake, fairly let her be entreated ;
Tell her, I send to her my kind commends ;
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have despatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large.

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle.—Come, lords, away ;
To fight with Glendower and his complices :
Awile to work, and, after, holiday. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Coast of Wales. A Castle in View.

Flourish : Drums and Trumpets. Enter KING RICHARD, BISHOP OF CARLISLE, AUMERLE, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call you this at hand ?

Aum. Yea, my lord. How brooks your grace air,

After your late tossing on the breaking seas ?

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well ; I weep for
To stand upon my kingdom once again.
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs.
As a long-parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles, in meeting
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,<sup>a</sup>
And do thee favour with my royal hands.
Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense :
But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their way ;
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies :
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords ;
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.

Bishop. Fear not, my lord ; that Power that you king

Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.

[The means that heaven yields must be embraced,
And not neglected ; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse ;
The proffer'd means of succour and redress.]

Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too weak
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great, in substance, and in spirit.

K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin ! know'st thou that
That, when the searching eye of heaven is hid Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseem,
In murders, and in outrage, bloody here ;
But when, from under this terrestrial ball,
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves !
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,—
Who all this while hath revell'd in the night,
Whilst we were wand'ring with the antipodes,—
Shall see us rising in our throne the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king :

<sup>a</sup> The repeated use, by Richard, of the word earth, seem to indicate that Shakspeare employs the word meaning of inheritance,—possession,—"my kingdom,"—"earth,"—"my earth,"—"my gentle earth."

ordly men cannot depose
ted by the Lord :
hat Bolingbroke hath press'd,
eel against our golden crown,
Richard hath in heavenly pay
l : then, if angels fight,
t fall ; for heaven still guards the right.

Enter SALISBURY.

ord ; How far off lies your power ?
r, nor farther off, my gracious lord,
arm : Discomfort guides my tongue,
eak of nothing but despair.
e, I fear, my noble lord,
ll thy happy days on earth :
esterday, bid time return,
have twelve thousand fighting men :
unhappy day, too late,
joys, friends, fortune, and thy state ;
shmen, hearing thou wert dead,
lingbroke, dispers'd, and fled,
rt, my liege : why looks your grace so

t now, the blood of twenty thousand men in my face, and they are fled ;
ch blood thither come again,
eason to look pale and dead ?
ill be safe fly from my side ;
et a blot upon my pride.
rt, my liege ; remember who you are.
ad forgot myself : Am I not king ?
ggard majesty ! thou sleepest.
s name forty thousand names ?
name ! a puny subject strikes
ry.—Look not to the ground,
f a king. Are we not high ?

ugh to serve our turn. But who

Enter SCROOP.

e health and happiness betide my liege,
are-tun'd tongue deliver him.
ne ear is open, and my heart prepar'd ;
ridly loss thou canst unfold.
plem lost ? why, 't was my care ;
as it to be rid of care ?
roke to be as great as we ?
l not be ; if he serve God,
m too, and be his fellow so.
ects ? that we cannot mend ;
ir faith to God, as well as us :
action, ruin, loss, decay ;
ath, and death will have his day.
I am I that your highness is so arm'd rags of calamity.
nsable stormy day
he silver rivers drown their shores ;
were all dissolv'd to tears,
is limits swells the rage
, covering your fearful land at steel, and hearts harder than steel.
ave arm'd their thin and hairless scalps
jesty ; and boys, with women's voices, big, and clap their female joints
by arms against thy crown :
men learn to bend their bows
l yew against thy state ;
men manage rusty bills
at : both young and old rebel, orse than I have power to tell.
oo well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so ill.
arl of Wiltshire ? where is Bagot ?
ne of Bushy ? where is Green ?
ve let the dangerous enemy

Measure our confines with such peaceful steps ?

If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.

I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord.

K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption !

Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man !

Snakes, in my heart-blood warn'd, that sting my heart !

Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas !

Would they make peace ? terrible hell make war

Upon their spotted souls for this offence !

Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,

Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate :

Again uncurse their souls ; their peace is made

With heads, and not with hands : those whom you curse

Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,

And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire, dead ?

Scroop. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the duke my father with his power ?

K. Rich. No matter where. Of comfort no man speak ;

Let 's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs ;

Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes

Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.

Let 's choose executors, and talk of wills :

And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath,

Save our deposed bodies to the ground ?

Our lands, our lives, and all, are Bolingbroke's,

And nothing can we call our own but death ;

And that small model* of the barren earth,

Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.

For heaven's sake, let us sit upon the ground,

And tell sad stories of the death of kings :—

How some have been depos'd, some slain in war,

Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd :<sup>b</sup>

Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd ;

All murder'd :—For within the hollow crown

That rounds the mortal temples of a king,

Keeps Death his court ; and there the antic sits,

Scorning his state, and grinning at his pomp,—

Allowing him a breath, a little scene

To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks ;

Infusing him with self and vain conceit,—

As if this flesh, which walls about our life,

Were brass impregnable,—and humour'd thus,

Comes at the last, and with a little pin

Bores through his castle walls, and—farewell king !

Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood

With solemn reverence ; throw away respect,

Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,

For you have but mistook me all this while :

I live with bread like you, feel want, taste grief,

Need friends :—Subjected thus,

How can you say to me—I am a king ?

Car. My lord, wise men ne'er wail their present woes,

But presently prevent the ways to wail.

To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,

Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,

[And so your follies fight against yourself.]

Fear, and be slain ; no worse can come, to fight :

And fight and die, is death destroying death ;

Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a power, inquire of him ;

And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well :—Proud Bolingbroke,

I come

To change blows with thee for our day of doom.

* Model. The word is, probably, here used for something formed or fashioned. The earth assumes the shape of the body which it covers.

<sup>b</sup> Ghosts they have depos'd. Ghosts of those whom they have deposed.

This ague-fit of fear is over-blown;
An easy task it is to win our own.
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day:
So may you by my dull and heavy eye;
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer, by small and small,
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken:—
Your uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yielded up,
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his faction.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough.—
Beshrew thee, cousin, which didst lead me forth [To Aux.

Of that sweet way I was in to despair!
What say you now? What comfort have we now?
By heaven, I'll bate him everlastingly
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint castle; there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To ear the land<sup>a</sup> that hath some hope to draw,
For I have none:—Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aux. My liege, one word.
K. Rich. He does me double wrong
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers, let them hence.—Away,
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day. [Ex.

SCENE III.—Wales. Before Flint Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, BOLINGBROKE and Forces; YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, and others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn,
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed,
With some few private friends, upon this coast.
North. The news is very fair and good, my lord;
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.

York. It would besem the lord Northumberland
To say, king Richard: Alack the heavy day,
When such a sacred king should hide his head!
North. Your grace mistakes; only to be brief, Left I his title out.

York. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head,<sup>b</sup> your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, farther than you should.
York. Take not, good cousin, farther than you should,
Lest you mis-take: The heavens are o'er your head.

Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself
Against their will.—But who comes here?

Enter PERCY.

Welcome, Harry: what, will not this castle yield?

Percy. The castle royally is mann'd, my lord,
Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally?
Why, it contains no king?

Percy. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king; king Richard lies
Within the limits of yon lime and stone:
And with him the lord Aumerle, lord Salisbury,

<sup>a</sup> Ear the land—plough the land. Ear is the same as the Latin avere, to plough, to till. Arable is ear-able.

<sup>b</sup> Taking so the head. Johnson thinks that to take the head is to take undue liberties. We incline to Douce's opinion, that the expression means to take away the sovereign's chief title.

Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergyman
Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.

North. Oh! belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.
Boling. Noble lord, [To N.

Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle:
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of music
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver.

Henry Bolingbroke

Upon his knees doth kiss king Richard's hand;
And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person: hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power;

Provided that, my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again, be freely granted:
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen

The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke

It is such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair king Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.

Go, signify as much; while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.

[NORTH. advances to the castle with a trumpet

Let's march without the noise of threating drums
That from this castle's totter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.

Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements

Of fire and water, when their thund'ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.

Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.

March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A parle sounded, and answered by another within. Flourish. Enter on the walls KING RICHARD II, the BISHOP OF CARLISLE, AUWERLE, SCROOP SALISBURY.

York. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear
As doth the blushing discontented sun,
From out the fiery portal of the east;

When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.

Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty; Alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!

K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long stood

To watch the fearful bending of thy knee, [To N.

Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?

If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.

And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of friends;

Yet know,—my master, God omnipotent,
Is mustering in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious crown.

Tell Bolingbroke, (for yond', methinks, he is,
That every stride he makes upon my land

<sup>a</sup> Totter'd, for tottering; the passive for the active ciple.

as treason : He is come to ope testament of bleeding war ;
 crown he looks for live in peace,
 and bloody crowns of mothers' sons become the flower of England's face ; complexion of her maid-pale peace indignation, and bedew grass with faithful English blood.
 The king of heaven forbid, our lord the king with civil and uncivil arms upon ! Thy thrice-noble cousin, Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand ;
 the honourable tomb he swears,
 is upon your royal grandsire's bones ;
 the royalties of both your bloods,
 that spring from one most gracious head ;
 the buried hand of warlike Gaunt ;
 the worth and honour of himself,
 all that may be sworn or said,—
 he hath no further scope, his lineal royalties, and to beg cement immediate on his knees ;
 thy royal party granted once,
 thy arms he will commend to rust,
 he steels to stables, and his heart
 in service of your majesty.
 he is, as he is a prince, is just ;
 am a gentleman, I credit him.
 Northumberland, say,—thus the king returns :—
 cousin is right welcome hither ;
 the number of his fair demands accomplish'd without contradiction :
 he gracious utterance thou hast,
 a gentle hearing kind commends.—
 we myself, cousin, do we not, [To Aumerle.
 poorly, and to speak so fair ?
 all back Northumberland, and send the traitor, and so die ?
 O, good my lord ; let's fight with gentle
 swords,
 and friends, and friends their helpful swords.
 O God ! O God ! that e'er this tongue of
 mine,
 the sentence of dread banishment and man, should take it off again of south ! O, that I were as great grief, or lesser than my name !
 could forget what I have been !
 remember what I must be now !
 O, good heart ! I'll give thee scope to beat,
 have scope to beat both thee and me.
 Northumberland comes back from Boling-
 broke.
 What must the king do now ? Must he damn it ?
 will do it. Must he be depos'd ?
 will be contented : Must he lose of king ! O' God's name, let it go :
 jewels, for a set of beads ;
 a palace, for a hermitage ;
 apparel, for an alms-man's gown ;
 goblets, for a dish of wood ;
 for a palmer's walking-staff ;
 for a pair of carved saints ;
 the kingdome, for a little grave,
 the grave, an obscure grave :—
 buried in the king's highway, of common trade, where subjects' feet
 trample on their sovereign's head :
 heart they tread, now whilst I live ;

North—words of assent—assuaging, soothing words.
 of common trade. The original meaning of trade path trodden or trodden continuously.

And, buried once, why not upon my head ?
 Aumerle, thou weep'st ; My tender-hearted cousin !—
 We'll make foul weather with despised tears ;
 Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the summer corn,
 And make a dearth in this revolting land.
 Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
 And make some pretty match with shedding tears ?
 As thus ;—To drop them still upon one place,
 Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
 Within the earth ; and, therein laid,—“ There lies
 Two kinsmen, digg'd their graves with weeping eyes ?”
 Would not this ill do well ?—Well, well, I see
 I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
 Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
 What says king Bolingbroke ? will his majesty
 Give Richard leave to live till Richard die ?
 You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says—ay.

North. My lord, in the base court* he doth attend
 To speak with you ; may 't please you to come down ?

K. Rich. Down, down, I come ; like glistering
 Phaeton,
 Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

[NORTH. retires to BOLING.
 In the base court ? Base court, where kings grow base,
 To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
 In the base court ? Come down ? Down court ! down
 king !

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing. [Exeunt from above.

Boling. What says his majesty ?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
 Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man :
 Yet he is come.

Enter KING RICHARD, and his Attendants below.

Boling. Stand all apart,
 And show fair duty to his majesty.—
 My gracious lord,— [Kneeling.

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee,
 To make the base earth proud with kissing it ;
 Me rather had my heart might feel your love,
 Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.
 Up, cousin, up : your heart is up, I know, Thus high at least [touching his own head] although your knee be low.

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.
 K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
 As my true service shall deserve your love.
 K. Rich. Well you deserve :—They well deserve to have

That know the strong'st and surest way to get.
 Uncle, give me your hand : nay, dry your eyes ;
 Tears show their love, but want their remedies.—
 Cousin, I am too young to be your father,
 Though you are old enough to be my heir.
 What you will have, I'll give, and willing too ;
 For do we must what force will have us do.—
 Set on towards London :—Cousin, is it so ?

Boling. Yea, my good lord.
 K. Rich. Then I must not say no.
 [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Langley. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter the QUEEN and two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this garden,

To drive away the heavy thought of care ?

1 Lady. Madam, we'll play at bowls.

* Base court—lower court—bas court.

Queen. 'T will make me think the world is full of rubs,

And that my fortune runs 'gainst the bias.

1 Lady. Madam, we 'll dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:
Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

1 Lady. Madam, we 'll tell tales.

Queen. Of sorrow, or of joy?

1 Lady. Of either, madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl:

For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
Or if of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy:
For what I have, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boots not to complain.

1 Lady. Madam, I 'll sing.

Queen. 'T is well that thou hast cause;
But thou shouldst please me better wouldst thou weep.

1 Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing,<sup>a</sup> would weeping do me good,

And never borrow any tear of thee.

But stay, here come the gardeners:

Let 's step into the shadow of these trees.—

Enter a Gardener and two Servants.

My wretchedness unto a row of pins,
They 'll talk of state: for every one doth so
Against a change: Woe is forerun with woe.

[QUEEN and Ladies retire.]

Gard. Go, bind thou up yon' dangling apricocks,
Which, like unruly children, make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:
Give some supportance to the bending twigs.
Go thou, and, like an executioner,
Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth:
All must be even in our government.
You thus employ'd, I will go root away
The noisome weeds, that without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

1 Serv. Why should we, in the compass of a pale,
Keep law, and form, and due proportion,
Showing, as in a model, our firm estate?
When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers chok'd up,
Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd,
Her knots disorder'd,<sup>b</sup> and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars?

Gard. Hold thy peace:—
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:
The weeds, that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,
That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,

<sup>a</sup> And I could sing. If my griefs were removed by weeping,— if my tears could take away my sorrow,—I should be ready to sing,—I could sing, and then, my sorrows being past, I would "never borrow any tear of thee,"—not ask thee to weep, as I did just now.

<sup>b</sup> Knots disorder'd. The symmetrical beds of a garden were the knots.

Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;
I mean the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

1 Serv. What, are they dead?

Gard. They are;
And Bolingbroke hath seiz'd the wasteful king—
Oh! what pity is it,

That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land,
As we this garden! We at time of year
Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees;
Lest, being over-proud with sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself:
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste,
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste and idle hours hath quite thrown down.

1 Serv. What, think you then, the king shall be pos'd?

Gard. Depress'd he is already; and depos'd,
'T is doubt, he will be: Letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good duke of York's,
That tell black tidings.

Queen. O, I am press'd to death through want speaking!—

Thou, old Adam's likeness, [coming from her chamber
ment] set to dress this garden,

How dares thy harsh-rude tongue sound this unpleasant
news?

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee
To make a second fall of cursed man?

Why dost thou say king Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall? Say where, when, and how Cam'st thou by these ill-tidings? speak, thou wretch!

Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I
To breathe these news: yet what I say is true.
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peees,
And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.
Post you to London, and you 'll find it so:
I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassy belong to me,
And am I last that knows it? O, thou think'st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. Come, ladies, go,
To meet at London London's king in woe.
What, was I born to this! that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke!
Gardener, for telling me this news of woe,
I would the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

[Exit QUEEN and Ladies]
Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be worse,

I would my skill were subject to thy curse.—
Here did she drop a tear; here, in this place,
I 'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exit]

ACT IV.

orden. Westminster Hall. The Lords the right side of the throne; the Lords the left; the Commons below.

BROKE, AUERLE, SURREY, NORTH-
PERCY, FITZWATER, another Lord,
CARLISLE, ABBOT OF WESTMINSTER,
&c. Officers behind with BAGOT.

I forth Bagot.
eely speak thy mind;
I know of noble Gloster's death;
t with the king, and who perform'd
ce of his timeless* end.
I set before my face the lord Aumerle.
sin, stand forth, and look upon that man.
rd Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
what it hath once deliver'd.
ne when Gloster's death was plotted,
—Is not my arm of length,
rom the restful English court to my uncle's head?—
other talk, that very time, that you had rather refuse hundred thousand crowns, like's return to England;
how bless'd this land would be asin's death.

Princes, and noble lords,
all I make to this base man?
dishonour my fair stars,
to give him chastisement?
or have mine honour soil'd
der of his slanderous lips.
e, the manual seal of death,
e out for hell: I say, thou liest,
ain what thou hast said is false, od, though being all too base
pper of my knightly sword,
st, forbear, thou shalt not take it up.
ing one, I would he were the best ace, that hath mov'd me so.
thy valour stand on sympathies,
e, Aumerle, in gage to thine:
that shows me where thou stand'st,
and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
cause of noble Gloster's death.
t. twenty times thou liest;
thy falsehood to thy heart,
ged, with my rapier's point.
lar'st not, coward, live to see the day.
y my soul, I would it were this hour.
ter, thou art damn'd to hell for this.
e, thou liest; his honour is as true,
s thou art all unjust:
art so, there I throw my gage,
see to the extremest point ing; seize it, if thou dar'st.
I do not, may my hands rot off,
ish more revengeful steel
ng helmet of my foe!
t the earth* to the like, forsworn Aus with full as many lies d in thy treacherous ear

uely.

sympathy is, passion with,—mutual passion.
When the lord threw down his gage, he in the same way that Percy had done by gage.

From sun to sun* there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all:
I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.]

Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fitz. 'T is very true: you were in presence then;
And you can witness with me, this is true.

Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.

Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.

Surrey. Dishonourable boy!

That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull.
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!

If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say, he lies,
And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.

As I intend to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble duke at Calais.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage,
That Norfolk lies: here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd to try his honour.

Boling. These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his land and seignories; when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.

Car. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.

Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ; in glorious Christian field
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross,
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And, toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy; and there, at Venice, gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?

Car. As sure as I live, my lord.

Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom

Of good old Abraham!—Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter YORK, attended.

York. Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluck'd Richard; who with willing soul
Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand:
Ascend his throne, descending now from him,—
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne.

Car. Marry, heaven forbid!—

Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeching me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this noble presence

* From sun to sun. The time appointed for the combats of chivalry was betwixt the rising and the setting sun.

Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard; then true nobleness would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judg'd but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them:
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,
And he himself not present? O, forfend it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refin'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by heaven thus boldly for his king.
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king:
And if you crown him, let me prophesy,—
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act;
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And, in this seat of peace, tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
O, if you rear this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove
That ever fell upon this cursed earth:
Prevent it, resist it, and let it not be so,
Lest child, child's children, cry against you—woe!

North. Well have you argued, sir; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here:
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.
May't please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit?

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender; so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.

York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.]
Boling. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer:
Little are we beholden to your love, [To CARLISLE.]
And little look'd for at your helping hands.

Re-enter YORK, with KING RICHARD, and Officers bearing the crown, &c.

K. Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee:—
Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I will remember
The favours* of these men: Were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, all hail! to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the king!—Will no man say, amen?
Am I both priest and clerk? well then, amen.
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me.—
To do what service am I sent for hither?

York. To do that office, of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer,—
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Henry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown:—Here, cousin, seize the crown;
Here, cousin, on this side my hand; on that side thine.
Now is this golden crown like a deep well,
That owes two buckets filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,

* Favours—features—countenances.

The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign.
K. Rich. My crown I am, but still my griefs are You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs; still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with crown.

K. Rich. Your cares set up do not pluck my down.

My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give I have, though given away;
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?
K. Rich. Ay, no;—no, ay; for I must nothing
Therefore no, no, for I resign to thee.

Now mark me how I will undo myself:—
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all detestable oaths:
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd.
Long mayst thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!
God save King Henry unking'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!
What more remains?

North. No more, but that you read [Offering a paper.]
These accusations, and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person, and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weav'd-up follies! Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,
There shouldst thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven.
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

North. My lord, despatch; read o'er these articles.

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort* of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest:
For I have given here my soul's consent
To undeck the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base; a sovereignty a slave;
Proud majesty a subject; state a peasant.

North. My lord,—

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haughtiest
man,

* A sort—a company.

an's lord; I have no name, no title,— name was given me at the font,— p'd:—Alack the heavy day,
 worn so many winters out,
 t now what name to call myself!
 e a mockery king of snow,
 ee the sun of Bolingbroke,
 lf away in water-drops!—
 great king,—(and yet not greatly good,) d be sterling yet in England,
 nd a mirror hither straight,

 akrupt of his majesty.

ome of you, and fetch a looking-glass.

[Exit an Attendant.
 ad o'er this paper, while the glass doth ge it no more, my lord Northumberland.

 e commons will not then be satisfied.

hey shall be satisfied: I'll read enough,
 e the very book indeed
 sins are writ, and that's myself.

Enter Attendant, with a glass.

glass, and therein will I read.
 inkles yet? Hath sorrow struck es upon this face of mine, deeper wounds?—O, flattering glass,
 llowers in prosperity,
 uile me! Was this face the face
 y under his household roof thousand men? Was this the face sum, did make beholders wink?
 e which fac'd so many follies,
 ast outfac'd by Bolingbroke?
 y shineth in this face:
 he glory is the face;

[Dashes the glass against the ground.
 , crack'd in an hundred shivers.
 ing, the moral of this sport,— t sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
 e shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
 f your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.
 The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
 'T is very true, my grief lies all within;
 And these external manners of laments
 Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
 That swells with silence in the tortur'd soul;
 There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
 For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
 Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way
 How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
 And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
 Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.

K. Rich. Fair cousin? I am greater than a king:

For when I was a king my flatterers
 Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
 I have a king here to my flatterer.

Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.

K. Rich. And shall I have?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

Boling. Go, some of you, convey him to the Tower.

K. Rich. O, good! Convey?—Conveyers<sup>a</sup> are you all,
 That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

[Ex. K. RICHARD, some Lords, and a Guard.

Boling. On Wednesday next, we solemnly set down
 Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.

[Ex. all but the ABBOT, BISHOP OF CARL., and AUM.

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

Car. The woe's to come; the children yet unborn Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy clergymen, is there no plot

To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,

You shall not only take the sacrament

To bury mine intents, but to effect

Whatever I shall happen to devise:—

I see your brows are full of discontent,

Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears;

Come home with me to supper; I will lay

A plot shall show us all a merry day.

[Exeunt

ACT V.

London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter QUEEN and Ladies.

is way the king will come; this is the way
 ear's ill-erected tower,
 t bosom my condemned lord
 risoner by proud Bolingbroke:
 st, if this rebellious earth
 ting for her true king's queen.

Enter KING RICHARD and Guards.

see, or rather do not see,
 wither: Yet look up; behold;
 pity may dissolve to dew,
 a fresh again with true-love tears.
 model where old Troy did stand;

 Richard; thou most beautiful inn,<sup>a</sup>

in was originally a dwelling—a place of cover
 When the queen opposes the term alehouse to t mean to discriminate between two classes of statement, but between a public-house and a sion."

Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
 When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

K. Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
 To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
 To think our former state a happy dream;
 From which awak'd, the truth of what we are Shows us but this: I am sworn brother,<sup>b</sup> sweet,
 To grim necessity; and he and I
 Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France,
 And cloister thee in some religious house:
 Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
 Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
 Transform'd and weaken'd? Hath Bolingbroke Depos'd thine intellect? Hath he been in thy heart?
 The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
 And wounds the earth if nothing else, with rage

<sup>a</sup> Conveyers. Conveyer was sometimes used in an ill sense,— as a fraudulent appropriator of property, a juggler.

<sup>b</sup> Sworn brother. Military adventurers were sometimes leagued to share each others' fortunes—to divide their plunder, and even their honours. They were then fratres jurati—sworn brothers.

To be 'erpower'd : and wilt thou, pupil-like,
Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod;
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion, and a king of beasts?

K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught but beasts,

I had been still a happy king of men.
Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for France :
Think I am dead; and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks; and let them tell the tales
Of woeful ages, long ago betid :
And, ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds.
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And, in compassion, weep the fire out :
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd ;
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you ;
With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder wherewithal
The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption : thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all :
And he shall think that thou, which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd another way,
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear ;
That fear to hate ; and hate turns one, or both,
To worthy danger, and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.

Take leave, and part ; for you must part forthwith.

K. Rich. Doubly divorc'd?—Bad men, ye violate
A twofold marriage ; 'twixt my crown and me ;
And then betwixt me and my married wife.
Let me unkiss the oath 'twixt thee and me ;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 't was made.<sup>a</sup>
Part us, Northumberland ; I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime :
My queen to France ; from whence, set forth in pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas,<sup>b</sup> or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.

North. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes thither let me go.

K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.

Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here ;

Better far off than near, be ne'er the near'.<sup>c</sup>

Go, count thy way with sighs ; I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,

And piece the way out with a heavy heart.

<sup>a</sup> The kiss was an established form of the ancient ceremony of affiancing.

<sup>c</sup> Ne'er the near'. Some deem this a proverbial expression, meaning not nearer to good. It appears to us here to mean "never the nearer."

Come, come, in wooing sorrow let 's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part ;
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart. [They kiss]

Queen. Give me mine own again ; 't were no go
part,

To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart. [Kiss eyes]
So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay
Once more, adieu ; the rest let sorrow say. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke York's Palace.

Enter YORK and his DUCHESS.

Duch. My lord, you told me you would tell the
When weeping made you break the story off
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course,
While all tongues cried—God save thee, Bolingbroke!
You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage ; and that all the walls,
With painted imagery, had said at once,—
Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespoke them thus,—I thank you, countrymen :
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rides he whilst?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious :
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on Richard ; no man cried, God save his name,
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home :
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head ;
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,
That had not God, for some strong purpose, steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And barbarism itself have pitied him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events ;
To whose high will we bound our calm contents,
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter AUWERLE.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle that
But that is lost, for being Richard's friend,
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now :
I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Duch. Welcome, my son : Who are the rioters
That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care
God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.

What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs
Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

will be there, I know.
 God prevent it not; I purpose so.
 at seal is that that hangs without thy thou pale? let me see the writing.
 lord, 't is nothing.

No matter then who sees it:
 fied,—let me see the writing.
 beseech your grace to pardon me;
 of small consequence,
 me reasons I would not have seen.
 Ich, for some reasons, sir, I mean to see.

What should you fear?
 but some bond, that he is enter'd into rel, 'gainst the triumph.
 and to himself? what doth he with a bond and to? Wife, thou art a fool.—
 see the writing.
 beseech you, pardon me; I may not
 w it.

ill be satisfied; let me see it, I say.
 [Snatches it, and reads.]
 I treason!—villain! traitor! slave!
 at 's the matter, my lord?
 I who 's within there?

Enter a Servant.
 Saddle my horse.
 is mercy! what treachery is here!
 ay, what is 't, my lord?
 e me my boots, I say; saddle my horse:—
 honour, by my life, my troth,
 th the villain. [Exit Servant.]

What 's the matter?
 see, foolish woman.
 ill not peace;—What is the matter, son?
 ad mother, be content; it is no more or life must answer.

Thy life answer?
 Re-enter Servant, with boots.
 ng me my boots, I will unto the king.
 ike him, Aumerle.—Poor boy, thou art
 ar'd:
 in; never more come in my sight.—
 [To the Servant.]

se me my boots, I say.
 ay, York, what wilt thou do?
 t hide the trespass of thine own?
 re sons? or are we like to have?
 eming date drunk up with time?
 sa pluck my fair son from mine age,
 of a happy mother's name?
 : thee? is he not thine own?
 sa fond mad woman,
 ncessal this dark conspiracy?
 hem here have ta'en the sacrament,
 ngeably set down their hands,
 ing at Oxford.

He shall be none;
 him here: Then what is that to him?
 ay,
 e! were he twenty times my son
 each him.

Hadst thou groan'd for him,
 me, thou 'dst be more pitiful.
 now thy mind; thou dost suspect been disloyal to thy bed,
 is a bastard, not thy son:
 sweet husband, be not of that mind;
 e thee as a man may be,

was formerly not impressed on the deed itself, but thy a slip of parchment. The Great Seal is ap-plicd in manner at the present day.

Not like to me, or any of my kin,
 And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman. [Exit.]
 Duch. After, Aumerle; mount thee upon his horse;
 Spur, post; and get before him to the king,
 And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
 I 'll not be long behind; though I be old,
 I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:
 And never will I rise up from the ground,
 Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee: Away;
 Begone. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter BOLINGBROKE, as King; PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell of my unthrifty son?
 'T is full three months since I did see him last:
 If any plague hang over us, 't is he.
 I would to Heaven, my lords, he might be found:
 Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
 For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
 With unrestrained loose companions—
 Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
 And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;
 While he, young, wanton, and effeminate boy,
 Takes on the point of honour, to support
 So dissolute a crew.

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the prince,

And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.
 Boling. And what said the gallant?
 Percy. His answer was,—he would unto the stews,
 And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
 And wear it as a favour; and with that
 He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As dissolute as desperate: yet through both
 I see some sparkles of a better hope,
 Which elder days may happily bring forth.
 But who comes here?

Enter AUMERLE, hastily.

Aum. Where is the king?
 Boling. What means
 Our cousin, that he stares and looks so wildly?
 Aum. God save your grace. I do beseech your majesty,

To have some conference with your grace alone.
 Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.
 [Exeunt PERCY and Lords.]

What is the matter with our cousin now?
 Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
 [Kneels]

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
 Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.
 Boling. Intended, or committed, was this fault?
 If on the first, how heinous ere it be,
 To win thy after-love, I pardon thee.
 Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,
 That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire. [AUMERLE locks the door.]
 York. [Within.] My liege, beware; look to thyself;
 Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I 'll make thee safe. [Drawing.]
 Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand;
 Thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool-hardy
 king;
 Shall I, for love, speak treason to thy face?
 Open the door, or I will break it open.

[BOLINGBROKE opens the door.]

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Welcome, my lord : what is the news ?

North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.
The next news is,—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent :
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper.]

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains ;
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas, and sir Bennet Seely ;
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot ;
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY with the BISHOP OF CARLISLE.

Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience and sour melancholy,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave ;
But here is Carlisle living, to abide
Thy kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom :—
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life ;
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife :

For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with Attendants bearing a coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear ; herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not ; for thou hast wrought
A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I hear deed.

Boling. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee ; though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor princely favour :
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.
Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow :
Come, mourn with me for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black, incontinent ;
I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand :—
March sadly after ; grace my mourning here.
In weeping after this untimely bier.

[Exeunt.]

Parts of 'Henry IV.,' but his 'Henry V.' That old play was acted prior to 1588; Tarleton, a celebrated comic actor, who played the clown in it, having died in that year. It is, in many respects, satisfactory that this very extraordinary performance has been preserved. None of the old dramas exhibit in a more striking light the marvellous reformation which Shakspeare, more than all his contemporaries, produced in the dramatic amusements of the age of Elizabeth. Of 'The Famous Victories of Henry V.,' the comic parts are low buffoonery, without the slightest wit, and the tragic monotonous stupidity, without a particle of poetry. And yet Shakspeare built upon this thing, and for a very satisfactory reason—the people were familiar with it.

In 'The Famous Victories' we are introduced to the "young Prince" in the opening scene. His companions are "Ned," "Tom," and "Sir John Oldcastle," who bears the familiar name of "Jockey." They have been committing a robbery upon the king's receivers; and Jockey informs the prince that his (the prince's) man hath robbed a poor carrier. The plunder of the receivers amounts to a thousand pounds; and the prince worthily says, "As I am a true gentleman, I will have the half of this spent to-night." He shows his gentility by calling the receivers villains and rascals. The prince is sent to the "counter" by the Lord Mayor. "Gadshill," the prince's man, who robbed the carrier, is taken before the Lord Chief Justice; and the young prince, who seems to have got out of the counter as suddenly as he got in, rescues the thief. The scene ends with the Chief Justice committing Henry to the Fleet. He is, of course, released. "But whither are ye going now?" quoth Ned. "To the court," answers the true gentleman of a prince, "for I hear say my father lies very sick. . . . The breath shall be no sooner out of his mouth but I will clap the crown on my head." To the court he goes, and there 'ne bully becomes a hypocrite. The great scene in 'The Second Part of Henry IV.,'—

"I never thought to hear you speak again."

in a popular drama of Shakspeare's own day.

In the play of 'The Famous Victories' we have, as already mentioned, the character of "John Oldcastle." This personage, like the companions of the prince in that play, is a less fellow, without a single spark of wit to relieve his grovelling profligacy. But he is an insignificant character, with less stage name than even "Ned" and "Tom." Dericke, the leading character throughout the play, and the deed, the leading character throughout the play, together, Oldcastle has only thirty lines of dialogue in the whole piece. We have no idea of him being fat; we hear nothing of his gluttony; he, however, calls this Sir John Oldcastle, "a fat glutton." It is a question whether this character, suggested to Shakspeare by Falstaff, did not discover the very slightest similarity to the character of Malone. Malone decidedly says, "Shakspeare applied to have caught the idea of the character of a wretched play entitled 'The Famous Victories of King Henry V.'" But Malone is argued against by a favourite theory. Rowe has a notion that Falstaff was written originally under the name of Oldcastle. This opinion would receive confirmation from the fact that Shakspeare used other names from the old play, Ned, Gadshill, why not, then, Oldcastle? The prince calls Falstaff "my old lad of the castle;" and he is otherwise explained. The Sir John Oldcastle, in history, Lord Cobham, was, as is well known, the most strenuous supporter of the Reformation in the reign of Henry V.; and hence it has been argued that the name of Shakspeare's fat knight was offered to the Protestants in the time of Elizabeth, and was changed to that of Falstaff. Whether or not Falstaff was originally called Oldcastle, the character was fairly established as Falstaff in the play of 'The Second Part of Henry IV.' to vindicate himself from the charge that he had tempted to represent the Oldcastle of his day. In the prologue to 'The Second Part of Henry IV.'—
